WORTH A KING'S RANSOM.

Saved From the Maelstrom of Catarrh — How Peruna Saves Lives

Mrs. Col. E. J. Gresham, Treasurer Daughters of the Confederacy, and President Hernden Village Improvement Society, writes the following letter from Hernden, Fairfax county, Va.:

Hernden, Va.

The Peruna Medicine Co., Columbus, O.:

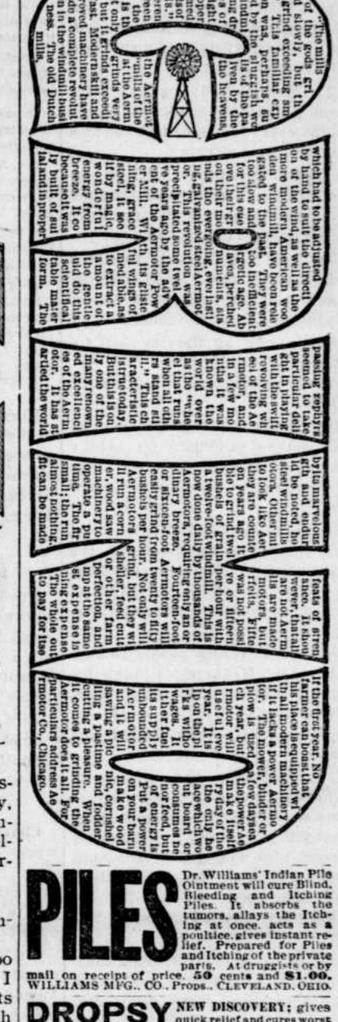
Gentlemen—"I cannot speak too highly of the value of Peruna. I believe that I owe my life to its wonderful merits. I suffered with catarrh of the head and lungs in its worst form, until the doctors fairly gave me up, and I despaired of ever getting well again.

"I noticed your advertisement and the splendid testimonials given by people who had been cured by Peruna, and determined to try a bottle. I felt but little better, but used a second and a third bottle and kept on improving slowly.

"It took six bottles to cure me, but they were worth a King's ransom to me. I talk Peruna to all my friends and am a true believer in its worth." Mrs. Col. E. J. Gresham.

Thousands of women owe their lives to Peruna. Tens of thousands owe their health to Peruna. Hundreds of thousands are praising Peruna in every state in the Union. We have on file a great multitude of letters with written permission for use in public print, which can never be used for want of space.

Address The Peruna Medicine Co., Columbus, O., for a book written especially for women, instructively illustrated, entitled "Health and Beauty." Sent free to women.



"The mild gentle breeze of the gods" grinds the finest flour and feed, and "all" at a price exceeding small. This familiar expression was, perhaps, not intended to be understood literally, but the Aermotor windmill and improved machinery have made it so. Doing the work of the gods by the gentle breezes of heaven might be termed the smallest of the gods, and the Aermotor windmill is the god. This is the age of steel, and it stands exceedingly fast. Modern skill and improved machinery have made the windmill not only a thing of beauty, but a thing of wonderful perfection and usefulness. The Aermotor windmill is a wonderful breeze. It is because it was originally built of sufficiently proper material and in proper form. The old Dutch windmill, which had to be actuated by hand to suit the direction of the wind, as well as the speed, was inefficient and expensive. They were too low and too inefficient to get a sufficient breeze. Perched on their modern towers, enabling them to get the strongest breezes, and with the self-regulating wheel, which keeps the speed of the Aermotor from exceeding a few miles an hour, they are known the world over as the most efficient and economical windmill that runs. The Aermotor is the only windmill that runs when all others stop for want of breeze. It is the only windmill that runs in a storm, and it is the only windmill that runs in a storm without a governor. It is the only windmill that runs in a storm without a governor, and it is the only windmill that runs in a storm without a governor, and it is the only windmill that runs in a storm without a governor, and it

OFFICIAL PAPER OF THE VILLAGE OF DELANO.

DELANO DIARY

—Hon. S. M. Owen will speak at Waverly, on Saturday evening, Oct. 20.

--The genuine fall weather thatwe have been having lately has been enjoyed by everybody.

—Rev. Charles Thayer will preach in the Presbyterian Church Sunday evening Oct. 21, at 7:30.

—A dance was held at the City Hall after the speech by Senator McCarthy, Wednesday evening.

—Tonsorial artist Yancy displays in his window a curiosety, twin pumpkins of good size, quite a strange freak of nature.

—The village council with the assistance given by C. G. Roosen has drained the obnoxious pond mentioned in last weeks GAZETEE.

--"The English bull dog was after the coon" in glaring chalk lines on the sidewalks every few rods met the eyes of the public this morning.

--A crew of men are at work on the Roosen ditch. It is expected that the disagreeable pond will be no more when the drain is completed.

--The M. E. S. S. expects to give a sacred concert soon. Some practice has been had and much more is to be had before the date is anouned.

--"Coon show at the city hall tonight."—Eagle.

A very unfortunate break for the Old Bird.

—Herman Otto is announced as an independent candidate for county Commissioner. Had he been the regular nominee he would have fared better,

—Read our Supplem ent this week, Be sure you know the names of the nine Presidential electors, and of the state officers for whom you wish to mark your ticket when you go to vote.

—It might have been just a little tedeous for the young people to wait for Senator McCartey to finish his two and a half hours discourse Wednesday evening so that they could have their dance. But they waited just the same.

—E. S. Redmond had Alderman Jones arrested for assault and battery. The fine was $15. and costs amounting to abuot $20. After this suit Redmond began a suit for damages in the sum of $99. The case to be tried at Howard Lake today.

LATER:—Case settled and suit withdrawn.

—The lumber merchants claim that sales have not met expectations in this vicinity this season. Short crops, dry weathor, early and wet weather later in the summer has caused this. With a mild winter prehaps people will recuperate and be in better circumstances another year. Everybody at least hopes so.

—Frederick L. McGhee addressed the largest political gathering so far this season at the City Hal, last night. For an hour and a half he held the strictest attention of the vast crowd, many standing in the rear of the room, during the whole time. He talked on imperialism and trusts. He was pronounced one of the ablest advocates of democratic principles now on the stump in Minnesota.

- It appears that one good reason for keeping the soldiers in the Philippines is, that. they are good workers against the plans of carrying on the war. It wouldnt do to bring home any more of them until the election is over. Orlie Billings wrote his father a few days age that he is working for Democratic victory in San Francisco, Jenner Chance is a Democrat. Mr. Edwards who lately returned, and who was a prisoner among the Filipenos, has no time for that war. All these were Republicans previous their soldiers experience.

—Frequent petitions are made to the Health officer and to the Village Council for relief from neighbors slops and other nuisances. A sewarage system properly constructed, and for which no town in the county is better naturally adapted, would relieve much of the complaint. In the absence of this, barrels properly covered and emptied frequently would be a good substitute. In this season when so much typhoid fever, diphtheria and other infectious or contageous disease is reported from neighboring villages, we should use more than ordinary precautions to keep up our record as one of the healthiest villages in the state.

—Senator McCarthy said he was here to work for Van Sant, for Page Morris, and he wanted a legislature elected that would not choose a Democratic Senator. But he did not say anything in favor of Knute Nelson. He evidently is for Morris but not for Nelson. On the Porto Rico tariff question they don't go together,

That was a bull'seye shot made by Ed Ziebarth when he asked Senator McCarthy who, in his speech, had said: "We are to decide not only how our country should be ruled but the destiny of other countries." Ed said: "How about the Boers?" The Senator said: "England will attend to them. We have no business with them." Looks a little like a trust on other peoples destinies.

County Cullings.

Charles Bugbee is hustling about worse than ever as election draws nigh. He expects to be County Commissioner. He served in that capacity before and khows the needs of the people.

Mr. Truelsen is a vote getter and seems to be gaining ground every day. People are tired of militarism, and prefer something more in line with the Declaration of Independence and the Constitution of our country.

We always heard that an Englishman couldn't see the point of a story. Proof is pretty conclusive in the Johnny Bull editor of the Eagle's criticism of our story of Alva G. Catlins haying, when a small boy hired a couple of his companions to clean a barn. We didn't intend you should consider the ability alone to "clean a barn"; but the fact that he had ability to "employ" assistance; such a necessary qualification in the office for which he is a candidate. Possibly an Augean stable cleaner might not come amiss in the Auditor's office.

McCarthy Speaks.

Senator C. C. McCarthy, of Itasca county addressed an audience at the City Hall, on Wednesday evening He is a lawyer, and a good talker and spoke for two and a half hours

The speaker claimed that we had to take the Philippines. Dewey staid there on purpose to hold them. That the administration was pursuing the only course whereby the Philippines could be given their freedom. He claimed that Aguinaldo only had 2,000,000 people with him, and he would be over 6,000,000 that did not want him and that would be tryranny.

Is that any excuse for the administration?

He claimed the Sherman law against trusts passed by republicans was the only law on the subject ever passed in Congress, and that has never been repeated.

Hasn't Bryan always insisted that the trusts could be controlled if the laws were enforced.

He claimed that if we were going into imperialism it would be in two ways. McKinley must be doing it with treason in his heart; or unwittingly.

He did not elect which horn of the dilima he he would take. But thought the democrats judgement poor.

He claimed as an excuse for military goyernment in the Pihppines that Polk and other democratic Presidents had done the same with other territory before.

Republicans ought not to use that as an excuse. If Democrats judgement is poor the republicans should not copy after it.

The Senator said we have to decide not only how our country should be ruled but the destiny of other countries.

The paramount issue Mr. McCarthy thinks is shall the Republicans be defeated, and shall free silver Democrats be elected?

The Senator is a talker of no small ability and succeeded in strengthening up the anti-administration forces fully as much as he did the administration party.

County Politics.

John Nygren, Democratic candidate for County Treasurer, is one of the business men of Cokato. He was one of the first in the county to go into the independent elevator business. He was manager of that business at Cokato for eleven years. He would handle the county funds in a business manner if elected.

Peter G. Skold, of Montecello is making a strong campaign for representative. If John Lind returns to the Governors office and indications are that he will, he should have a legislature that will help him in giving our state one of the best governments in the union.

H. K. Kelley, of Annandale, who came so near being a member of the Legislature two years ago is a strong candidate this year. John Lind and a legislature is what we want.

What a calmity it would be for Wright county if those "posted" in the Auditor's office should be called up higher; either promoted in office or die. Especialy should Boss Lamson be put on the shelf what would become of the Auditor's office? Would it not be a good plan to initiate some young man into the mysteries of the office.

Some of the folks are telling how the Auditor must be an experienced man. Some people have more experience at maturity than others have when fifty years old. The Democrats have up for Auditor a young man who has traveled more extensively than his competitor. He has been to Manila. He has served as a soldier. He has seen more big men and little men, white men and brown men, than falls to the lot of average people in a lifetime to see. He can learn the wonderful mysteries of the office as quickly, and hire as good an assistant as the present incumbent; or Mr. Lamson himself. If he gets a majority of the votes he will try to have patrons of the office satisfied. He don't ask for 1374 majority either.

Maple Plain.

Some are telling us that the fly wheel of the democratic party is busted, and that our destruction is ensured by the 6th of next November. Let her come! We will outweather the storm and land at last on the evergreen shore.

Mark Hanna is holding the tail of the American eagle with one hand and has hold of the tail of the British lion with the other, and when he pinches the tail of the lion it roars; and when he pulls the tail of the American eagle it screams; This is the entangling lions.

Some of the republican papers said none of the democrats dare buck Bob Dunn's speech made at Milaca. John Lind dare buck it. And can buck anything in the state the republicans dare trot out.

Most of the sick people in our town are getting better.

Farmers are husking corn, plowing and digging potatoes.

The primary eletion board has another meeting next Tuesday. As a member of the board I cannot tell you just what the business consists of, unless it is to take an oath of office every hour and draw pay. This may be a good law in some respects, but it comes very high. It is a republican measure and they always have things high. The single gold standard will come high, but few will be able to reach it.

Rev. Blanchard, of St. Cloud, preached at Armstrong. A. C. church last Sunday evening.

Mrs. Dr. E. A. Wright. of Colfax, Wis., came up on Saturday morning's train and was the guest of Mrs. E. A. Conoyer.

The aucton sale of Arthur Bradford, last Saturday was well attended and all property brought a fair price.

The office of sheriff in Hennepin county is having a warm contest. It is between Alonzo Philips and Megarden the present incumbent.

It is now time for our Indian summer. It is always a pleasant time of year.

The ground has not been so full of water for a great many years.

We have had no Demorcatic rally in our town yet. But we are expecting some good apostle along soon who will show the true gospel in politics.

We have now got the single gold standard, and when we get militarism, imperialism along with the trusts and corporations there will be very nearly as many teats as office seekers that politicians can suck. The working class takes its portion in paying the freight. This is politics. But they tell the workman, that he is all right is next to the king in some of the old countries, has a full dinner pail all the time, and he must not complain. The man who has lots of money does not produce anything, but just turns his money over now and then. and every time he turns it, it costs the people a large sum. This is the way they teach modern politics:

"Ram it in, cram it in,
People's heads are hollow.
Slam it in, jam it in;
Still theres more more to follow."

Thomas Jefferson wrote in that masterly productions of his, the declaration of Independence, that all men are created equal, and so do we. But does Mark Hanna and his like think so? We fear not. FARMER.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Regular Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, D. C. Oct. 5, 1900.

Those whose votes cannot be bought must be coerced into voting for McKinley. That is the motto under which the republican managers are working now. How it works in some cases may be judged by what a prominent drummer said to a Washington friend: "Ninty-five per cent of the commercial travelers in the U.S. and about 100 per cent of those who were commercial travelers until the on-rush of trusts drove them from the road, will vote for Bryan and Stevenson: This is in confidence so far as my name is concerned. I have to appear as a McKinley man. I am one of the few of the once large army of traveling salesmen whose services were considered valuable enough to be retained by the assimilating combine that wiped out our old firm. And I've got a wife and babies to support. I want to hold my job. So I say 'McKinley' and appear to like it before the trust spies. But wait until I get into the voting booth! Wait until the thousands of 'has been' commercial travelers and the hundreds of those who still are get behind the curtain in the voting places. Won't we 'swat 'em' at the polls." The secret ballot makes it possible for the coercion scheme to prove a boomerang to the republican managers, and it may do so. There are probably many who are like this drummer.

Mr. McKinley has given himself up almost entirely to politics since his retrun to Washington, just as he has been doing in Canton, although the newspaper men who go to the White House have been told that he and the member of the Cabinet have been busy studying French proposals as to China and preparing a reply thereto. That is all moonshine. There was nothing in the French proposals that required a half hour's consideration as to what the reply of this country should be. Mr. McKinley and his advisers are and have been studying up schemes to save him from the defeat which he dreads and fears because of his knowledge that he has done things to deserve it.

The McKinleyites are finding it necessary to uncover their imperialism programme to the extent of preparing the country for the establishment of militarism through legislation by the republican Congress for a large increase in the standing army. The War Department made public this week the annual report of Major General John R. Brooke, Commander of the Department of the East, which urges the increase of the regular army to "enable this nation to maintain the position in which it now finds itself placed." The idea is to inform the people that the proposed increase in the army is to meet the demands of the officers of the army. It is perfectly natural that army officers should favor an increase of the army - it means to them speedier promotion and more opportunities to win glory; but the fact remains that the real reason for increasing the army is to maintain the imperialism into which the country is being carried by the plans of the McKinley administration.

Our army and navy, according to officicial estimates for Congressional appropiations, is going to cost $200,000,000 for the next fiscal year. What would the voters of the era of Jeffersonion simplicity have thought of spending that much money in time of peace on the war making branches of our government?

The coercion republican tactics of '96 are being repeated upon an even more extensive scale this year. In addition to the big trusts, banks and corporations, the officers of saving banks, life insurance companies and building and loan associations are having pressure put upon them not to use their personal influence to make votes for McKinley but to use the influence of their companies or organizations to compel their patrons to vote for him.

The prediction that no case involving the constitutionality of the republican Porto Rican tariff bill would be heard by the U. S. Supreme Court before election was verified when Solicitor General Richard asked for the advancement of the case on the docket of the court without even naming a date for hearing of arguments. In asking that the Neely case be advanced and argued on Nov. 19, Solicitor General Richards made sure that no decision would be handed down in that case before election Neely is a republican postal official who stole Cuban funds by the wholesale and has so far not even been sent to Cuba for trial.

Secretary Long had another conference this week with representatives of the armor trust. and afterwards it was stated by the semi-official news mongers that while an agreement had not been reached as to the purchase of armor for the new warships Secretary Long was satisfied that they would get together and that he would not have to establish a government armor making plant. This is really laughable and fools nobody. It is practically certain that the steel trust is going to get those contracts at very near its original price and that it fixed the whole business up before it paid its contribution to Hanna's campaign fund. Mr. Long is only going through the farce of holding these conferences so as to have an excuse to defer announcing that he had given the trusts the contract until after the election.

If the mysteries of the Auditor's office are so profound that only a couple of men in the county can fathom them wouldn't it be policy to break in a new man?

Some of our German friends who are opposed to militarism can hardly make up their minds to support on the ticket men that are working for militarism in this county.

Nationality racket can't be worked as it once could. The question now is do we want imperialism or do we not? Most old country people say we do not.

Star News:--It is very disheartening to pick up a country newspaper this fall because of the lack of individuality about them. They are all stereotyped campaign matter manufactured by committees at St. Paul, and there is a sameness about them that is monotonous in the extreme. We trust that the country newspapers will come to their senses before another campaign comes around, and put some individuality in to their political matter.

Free To Inventors.

The experience of C. A. Snow & Co. in obtaining more than 20,000 patents for inventors has enabled them to helpfully answer many questions relating to the protection of intellectual property. This they have done in a pamphlet treating briefly of United States and foreign patents, with cost of same, and how to procure them; trade marks, designs, caveats, infringements, decisions in leading patents cases, etc., etc.

This pamphlet will be sent free to anyone writing to C. A. Snow & Co. Washington, D. C.

The Old Creed, and the New.

THE OLD CREED.

In eighteen hundredand fifty-six,
When questions of right and wrong did mix;
As to whether a man might own a man,
And Lincoln had questioned the government plan,
A grand new party arose in its might
With this war cry grand " 'Tis right makes might."
For Freemont and freedom; free speech, and free soil,
And this war cry, for freedom made tyrants recoil,
And they shouted it loud and they shouted it long.
'Till the echoes sent back the joyful song.
From under that famous apple tree,
The nation is free! The nation is free!

THE NEW CREED.

"Prosperity's come!" "Prosperity's come!"
Is the shout today of the republicans,
This old time creed "Tis right makes might."
Is forgotten now, and they cry with delight.
We're a world power now, and destined to be
The lords of creation o'er land and sea;
And the Brown man's cry comes up in vain,
We bought you, and we own you, we conquored Spain
For twenty millions of yellow golds
We bought your islands, your bodies and souls
And our old time creed "T'is right makes might"
Is revised, today "T'is might makes right."
And thus today is the nation's need
For men to stand in the way of greed,
As Lincoln stood in the days of thy youth.
The grand old party goes back on the truth.
Back on the grand old Declaration,
Back on hopes of a christian nation,
Back on the hopes of humanities host,
In their love of greed is their grandeur lost.
We spell a name with a "Mc," and a "K"
But Mark Hanna flies their flag today,
And the grand old party of Lincoln's times
Has sold its manhood for dollars and dimes.

E. G. WRIGHT

Markville, Oct 22, 1900

PATRICK H. KELLY, one of the pioneer merchants of St Paul died suddenly at his home, of heart failure. He was formerly a prominent Democratic politician, and a member of the P. H. Kelly wholesale grocery firm.

Republican Reasons

In discussing the candidacy of Messrs Truelsen and Morris for Congressmen, the Anoka Herald extols Page Morris as "one of the strongest campaigners in the country" while it says of Henry Truelsen "a very estimable but hardly intelligible successor (of Mr. Towne) who cannot hold even Democrats in the hall while he tortures the English language, Further the Herald says:

"We have always contended that something else besides rounded periods and mouthing words are necessary for equipment of a candidate for congress, and we still adhere to that opinion, but we insist, now that we have been confronted with a candidate who requires an interpreter, that a man ought to master the rudiments of our language before he aspires to fill such a position. Of course if Mr. Truelsen is really what it is said he claims to be at different times, viz: a German, a Dane, a Pole, a Bohemian, a Swede and a Norwegian, he may be excused to some extent for his lingual slips, but if he really is what he professes, he ought to be a candidate for a chair in a dime museum rather than aspire to the position once held by the great Charlie Towne."

If Mr. Truelsen can represent all the nations which the Herald intimates he can, is that any disgrace to Mr. Truelsen; or to those people who are descendants of those belonging to this long list of respectable nations?

Furthermore Mr. Truelsen is running for Congress as a citizen of the United States, and expects to be elected and to represent the interests of the people rather than the corporations.

Mr. Truelsen has canvassed our county; he has become acquanted with many of our people: they have heard him speak, and are satisfied that he can make himself understood in English in Congress and if he can talk all the other languages attributed to him as well as he does English he must be quite a linguist. Our people want a Congessman in accord with W. J. Bryan who they hope will be our next President; who will help to right some of the wrongs we are drifting into; and who will uphold the Constitution of our country, even though he "torture the English language" so doing. Better to torture language than people.

Morris at Delano.

Sentiment vs. Intellegence.

A large crowd of men, women and children, many from a long distance, heard Congressman Morris Wednesday evening, at the City Hall.

The speaker wished he could tell what the crowd was thinking about so he would know what to talk about. He findly opened up on the Porto Rico bill by reading from a newspaper clipping of what a professor in John Hopkins University who was independent. "It is a mighty good thing to know that your pay is coming no matter what others think." The lenghtly extract did not convince people that Congressman Morris was wiser than Senators Davis and Nelson who he said voted again'st the bill. He admitted that there was "A WAVE OF INDIGNATION AS CREDITABLE TO ITS SENTIMENT AS IT WAS DISCREDITABLE TO ITS INTELLIGENCE" that swept over the country when the bill was passed, "We had to do the best we could" "No body ever grumbles about tariff taxation; we never know we are paying it, if we do pay it."

"I'm not making an apology for it. Am as proud of my action on that as on any thing else I ever voted on."

He didn't exactly say that the sugar and tobbaco trusts got hold of Senators Davis and Nelson but he had just about as well said so as to have said what he did, that the trusts had bought up the goods and would have saved upwards of $350,000 by having free trade, and that he couldn't tell why those Senators differed with him on the bill.

Overstepped the Mark.

Mr. Farnham in his speech at the flag raising Saturday rather overstepped the mark when he claimed that the stars and strips is a Republican flag. That every man who fought against it in the rebellion was a Democrat, and that Democrats are now working against it, and therefore the flag is a Republican flag.

Sir, your arguments and the arguments of some of your colleagues won't jibe. We have been repeatedly told during this campaign that the Democrats are the expansionists. That they made the Louisiana purchase under Jefferson's administration. Minnesota was a part of that purchase. Then the Democrats must have planted Old Glory in Minnesota. The State was admitted to the the Union under James Buchanan's administration in 1858. Then the Democrats permitted Minnesota first to have the privileges of a state. But who ever heard of any one claiming the flag as a Democratic flag? Nobody. Why sir, you and every one knows, or should know that the stars and stripes was made to represent our country, the Declaration of Independence, the Constitution, free and equal rights to all men (except negro slaves, liberated later by Lincoln,) and never was intended to be a party emblem.

The stars and stripes is as dear to the people of our country, who do not vote the Republican ticket as it is to those who do. Would the speaker have us believe that the Populists, the Labor party, the Prohibitionists, Democrats and others because they do not believe in all the imperialistic doctrines of the Republican party are to claim no interest in the flag?

Our flag was never made for the purpose of representing taxation without representation; the Boston tea party settled that. It was not made to be carried into foreign lands and unfurled over peoples against their wills and the wills of a majority of the American people themselves. It was made to float over the government ruled by the consent of the governed. A land of the free and the home of the brave. The people of the American colonies (except the tories who favored imperialism) joined under its board stripes and bright stars in fighting for liberty, which they offered to all the people who saw fit to come and partake. We think debasing the flag to a party flag won't help your cause of imperialism in the eyes of the voters in this neck of woods. You overstepped the mark.

New Air Ship.

FRIEDRICHSHAFEN, Wurtemburg, Oct. 21.—Another trial of Count Heppelin's airship was made today, resulting in a series of successful evolutions. The airship, with Count Heppelin and Herr Eugene Wolff on board ascended at 5 o'clock this afternoon to an altitude of five-eighths of a mile, where various manoeuvers were executed. It then descended slowly to the water, which it reached near the point of departure at twenty five minutes past five. The king and queen of Wurtemburg witnessed the trial

How a Rainstorm Gave BROWNLEY an Idea

BROWNLEY had an engagement to go bicycle riding with Mabel one Sunday recently, but they failed to consult the weather man, and as a consequence the day opened with a lowering sky and a cold wind whistling in around the unprotected windows. So instead of his bicycle clothes Brownley arrayed himself in his cutaway and derby and after dinner directed his footsteps toward Mabel's apartments. These "apartments" comprised one large front room with an alcove on the second floor of a dwelling belonging to a widow who rented furnished rooms. The main room contained the customary furniture of a drawing room—a combination bookcase and secretary, a small rocker, a sofa, one upholstered patent rocker, a leather-bottomed rocking chair and two straight-backed cane-seat chairs. The only article foreign to the room was a birds'-eye maple dresser with an oval glass. This was set diagonally of the darkest and most unobtrusive corner, yet it was the most prominent object in the room. A carpet of Brussels covered the floor and was supplemented with a rug, while there were sundry knickknacks on the mantel and bookcase and divers lithographs relieved the paper on the wall. The alcove was shut off by heavy portiers and was terra incognita to Brownley, though he had reason to know it contained a gas stove and surmised it might also hide a view of one of those folding indispensables to economical life in the city boarding or rooming House.

Brownley and Mabel had long ago discovered that their tastes were similar, and having got a safe footing with each other had adopted a somewhat bohemian manner of enjoying themselves when together. Which accounts for the fact that Brownley had grown out of the habit of dining at home Sunday evenings, and as a result usually took home with him considerably later in those evenings a case of indigestion, severe or mild, according as he fed on salmon salad, coffee, pickles, pie and cheese or from a menu of cold fried chicken, milk, cake and fruit. There was absolutely nothing between them—nothing of a sentimental nature. She was an eminently sensible girl, and besides they had known each other too long—chums, nothing more.

"Hello!" ejaculated Brownley, on this particular Sunday evening, as she opened the door in response to his knock.

"Hello! where's your wheel? Is this the way you keep your appointments?" met him as he stepped inside.

"Well, I don't notice that you're dressed to go for a century."

"Oh, perhaps I can change my dress in eight or ten hours while I'm waiting for you!" retorted Mabel.

"You see, it's like this: When I got up at six o'clock this morning and found it so cloudy and dark I knew you wouldn't wake up till noon and thought there was no use coming, so I went to church with the other girl," explained Brownley, with much cheerfulness.

Perhaps it was the suggestion about the other girl that caused Mabel to change the subject, but in any event they soon turned their attention to a perusal of a newspaper and a discussion of the events of the preceding day as chronicled therein. As the customary time for luncheon drew near Mabel approached with evident diffidence a subject that several times before had been the cause of arguments between them.

"Say, Charley," she asked, coaxingly, "will you let me run up to the corner and get a bottle of milk?"

"If you will let me go with you."

"But you are tired and I'm not and I can go quicker alone."

"What do you want the milk for?" asked Charley, suspecting that she wanted it only for him to drink, knowing his preference for that fluid.

"I want it to put on the pudding and must have some cream for my tea," affirmed Mabel, evasively, adjusting and pinning on her hat.

"Now, if you are going out to get milk for me to drink, I'd rather you wouldn't, for I'd just as soon drink water," replied Charley, suspecting the subterfuge.

"Well, I wouldn't, and I must have some cream for my tea. I won't be gone five minutes. You stay here and read the paper."

"Won't you let me go with you?" begged Charley.

"No, you'd only be in the way." And without waiting for further argument she disappeared through the door and started downstairs.

Brownley sighed, stretched himself out on the sofa and in another minute was buried in the details of an exciting episode in the history of the mad king of Bavaria or some other erratic member of European royalty. Just as he arrived at the point in the narrative dealing with the strangling and drowning of the perfidious actress by the frenzied king he was called back to his own less romantic affairs by the sound of rain beating against the windows. He jumped up, threw down the paper, rushed to the window, raised it, looked out and listened to assure himself that it was really raining hopelessly; then he grabbed his hat, found an umbrella and hurried down the stairs to meet the girl and bring her back as dry as possible.

The rain was falling heavily and the wind was driving it at a sharp angle; the umbrella, like those most women carry, was just about large enough to keep his hat dry. He took the shortest route to the milk depot, expecting to meet her on the way home or waiting for the rain to cease. He was disappointed, however. So he hurried up the street a block to the fruit store where they had frequently bought fruit of an evening. But in vain; she was not there. Then he retraced his steps and went three blocks in the other direction to see if she had gone to any of the bakery and confectionery stores. The search seemed useless, for Mabel had apparently made one of those mysterious disappearances common to large cities. Thinking she must have returned home by another street and thus missed him, Brownley made his way back to the house against the wind and rain. He went in unannounced and ascended directly to her room. The door stood open and he walked in. The first objects his glance fell upon were a quart bottle of milk and a pint bottle of cream standing on the table. As he looked around the room, however, he discovered that she was not there, and, supposing that she had gone downstairs to the landlady's apartments, he stood the umbrella in a jardiniere to drain, turned down the bottoms of his trousers and shook off of them what water he could and then sat down and took up the paper again.

In a few minutes Mabel returned, carrying a dripping umbrella. She plumped down into the chair nearest the door and gave way to peals of mirth. Brownley looked at her in amazement and endeavored to elicit an explanation of the funny feature of the incident, which he rather failed to see himself.

"If you hadn't gone out to look for me I shouldn't have got wet," she finally managed to gasp. "I hadn't started for the milk when you went out. I happened to think that Mrs. Doyle might have some to spare, so instead of going out I went into her rooms."

"No wonder I couldn't find you anywhere," interrupted Brownley, the absurdity of the incident beginning to strike him.

"Mrs. Doyle gave me all the milk I wanted, but when I came back you were gone, and so was the umbrella. Then I knew you had gone out to meet me, so I took the old one and went after you."

"Did you go to the milk depot?" inquired Brownley.

"I went around to the back and looked in the windows."

"So did I."

"Then I went to the fruit stores."

"So did I. Did you go to the bakeries?"

"Yes," she admitted. "I went past them and looked in."

"Then you must have followed me all the way," observed Charley.

"If you hadn't left me the umbrella with a hole in the middle I might have kept dryer," shaking the globules of water from her hat as she took it off.

"I took the best one I could find," confessed Charley, "and it was the salvation of my hat, if nothing else. It's a good thing," continued Brownley, without waiting for a reply to his reflection on the umbrella, "that I didn't know you had gone out to look for me or I might have started out after you again."

"Well, you go on and read the paper while I make some tea," said Mabel, when she had sufficiently recovered from her spasm of laughter, and she disappeared behind the portieres.

Brownley noticed when she reappeared a few minutes later that she had on a different skirt. He had to sit around for two or three hours in trousers that were wet to the knees, but he bore it very well. Something seemed to have happened to please him, for he smiled to himself several times during the meal.

"What is it?" asked Mabel. "I think you ought to share up if you've got anything good."

"I think so, too," said Brownley. After a pause he added, apropos of nothing: "I think we seem to show an inclination to take care of one another; doesn't it strike you that way?"—Chicago Daily Record.

The Trusts Are Fighting Him. Will You Support Him?

One of the most stubborn and successful fights in Municipal history was won by the people of Duluth, led by Henry Truelsen and others, against the old Gas and Water Company of Duluth.

In 1894 this company offered the plant to the city for $2,105,000. The council declared the proposition carried. Mr. Truelsen fought this decision and carried it to Supreme Court and won. The District Court again declared the proposition carried.

Mr. Truelsen again appealed to the higher courts and won.

Another proposition was made by the company to sell the water plant alone at $1,858,000. Mr. Truelsen stumped the the city in opposition to this outrageous price. The people voted with him and voted to build. Injunctions and law suits resulted. Finally after years of struggling. Mr. Truelsen with the loyal help of others, secured the plant for the city for about one million dollars less than the original proposition.

After this great fight was won, he locked horns with the Telephone Co., who were charging the citizens $50 per year. With the assistance of the public and Council, he succeeded in getting for the people of this city splendid service for $30 per year.

The Electric Light Co had been charging the city $120 per light per year. Mr. Truelsen was largely instrumental in reducing this charge to $85. He never forgot the interests of the city for one day. While other men might have found a way to enrich themselves, he retired from office a poor man and in debt. No fair minded man in Duluth questions his honesty or ability. His debts are now being pushed against him in the midst of his canvass. The people understand why this is being done. Don't you think he is worthy of your support?

A New Jersey man has been trying to hypnotize a woman to get her to play the violin. In most instances one would be inclined to use that power to get her to stop.

It requires an average of more than 20,000,000 nine per cent to retain dislocated shirt buttons, lace missing suspender buttons and meet the other needs of the American people.

Another family has been wiped out of existence through a plague of mushrooms. Large families members lived in an island to the Missouri and never have had to rock a boat.

Emperor William has pardoned a naturalized American who was imprisoned recently, having escaped army service in his native country. To be an American in these days covers a multitude of sins abroad.

A New Jersey man who is said to be half-witted fired a shotgun loaded with tacks at a party that was trying to do the charivari act. He may be half-witted, but the evidence is all the other way. The people who carried away the tacks would seem to be the foolish ones.

Western capitalists propose to tunnel the great continental divide 80 miles west of Denver and operate an electric road through it. The tunnel will be 1½ miles long, and will be built to facilitate mining operations. It takes more than a mountain range to baffle the Yankee engineer.

Economic statisticians say the productive energy of each inhabitant of the United States is 1,940 foot-tons daily, while the European has only 990 foot-tons. In the international game of commercial football it is not strange that this country is so effectively kicking the pigskin at present.

The introduction of trolley roads has not seriously disturbed the business of steam roads, as was predicted. Trolley lines are especially numerous in Connecticut and the Hartford Courant makes a study of their workings. It finds by an analysis of official reports that while the trolley relieves the steam roads of some local travel it adds to the growth of cities and towns and largely increases the freight traffic.

The old custom in the English parliament of members wearing their hats dates from 1199. John, earl of Ulster, was chosen as the English champion to settle the difficulty about the duchy of Northumberland by single combat, and when he appeared on the field his opponent fled. As a reward King John granted his request to remain "covered in the presence of your majesty and all other sovereigns of this realm."

Judge Robinson, of Raleigh, N. C., apparently thinks that clergymen have in their own hands the power to keep order during divine service. There have been some hints of unseemly doings in one of the churches there, and his honor in charging the jury said: "Be careful how you indict men for disturbing religious worship. If the preacher is the sort of fellow he ought to be people will be paying too close attention to him to disturb anybody."

Three years ago John Harris, a prisoner in the county jail in Chicago, was carried out of prison dying of consumption. He had been convicted of murder and sentenced to serve for life, but when his health failed he was allowed to return to his home in California to die. Harris improved in health, joined the rush to Cape Nome, and how it turns out that he is worth $500,000 and is known as "The King of Cape Nome." The stories that come down from the frozen north would fill many an interesting book.

Hundreds of horses and thousands of cattle in the Hawaiian islands never take a drink of water. The ranges are on the upper altitudes of the mountains, where the cattle run wild from the time they are born until they are sent to the slaughter house. Except possibly two or three months in the rainy season there are no streams or pools of water in any part where the cattle range, but everywhere there grows a recumbent, jointed grass known by the native name of maninia. This is both food and drink.

A new method has been discovered whereby balloonists may communicate while at an altitude of over 6,000 feet with those on the ground. The method consists of a huge drum placed some 50 feet below the car which is beaten by electricity. The dots and dashes of the Morse telegraphic code have been adopted with complete success. This will prove a great advantage in warfare. Hitherto balloonists have been limited to an ascension of 1,000 to 1,500 feet on account of their telegraphic wires, and have thus been unable to escape the range of fire.

Uncle Sam has a regular contributor to the generosity of the government. Promptly the first week of every quarter a check for $75 is received at the treasury department, with the request that it be placed in the miscellaneous fund of the treasury, from which it can only be withdrawn by a special act of congress. The money is from a veteran of the civil war. He is an employe of the Philadelphia mint. He explained in his letter that as long as the government employed him at a good salary he would not accept the pension.

Alexander Huston, who died at Laurel Hill, was the bugler of the first section of the famous Light brigade that made the charge upon the Russian guns at Balaklava. Huston sounded the call for the charge that secured a permanent place for itself in the history of the world and, though shot twice and cut down with a saber once, he managed to get back to safety with the 195 survivors of the gallant 673. When Huston came to America he would, according to English law, forfeit his pension, but parliament continued the pension.

IS A NATION'S LOSS.

Death of the Venerable Statesman, Hon. John Sherman.

The Sad Event Occurs at His Home in Washington — Proclamation Issued by the President— His Career.

Washington, Oct. 23.—Hon. John Sherman, former representative in the house, for a long term a member in the senate, and twice holding cabinet positions, died at his residence in this city at a quarter before seven o'clock Monday morning in the seventy-eighth year of his age. His death had been expected for some days, and loving friends gave him their unremitting care and attention to the end. The immediate cause of death was described as brain exhaustion, incident to extreme weakness due to old age and to several attacks of sickness from which he had suffered for the past year and a half.

President Deeply Moved.

The news of Sherman's death was immediately communicated to the president, who had been extremely solicitous as to his former premier's condition. The last word previous to the announcement of Mr. Sherman's death Monday morning had been received by the president at midnight Sunday night. The president was greatly affected by the news. He immediately directed that the white house be closed to visitors and the flag over the executive mansion placed at half-mast. After ordering some beautiful flowers to be sent from the white house conservatory, he went in person to Mr. Sherman's late residence to express his grief and offer what consolation he could to the bereaved family.

EX-SECRETARY OF STATE JOHN T. SHERMAN.

Proclamation by the President.

The president Monday afternoon issued the following proclamation:

"DEATH OF HON. JOHN SHERMAN.—By the President of the United States of America.

"A Proclamation—To the People of the United States: In the fullness of years and honors, John Sherman, lately secretary of state, has passed away.

"Few among our citizens have risen to greater or more deserved eminence in the national councils than he. The story of his public life and services is as it were the history of the country for half a century. In the congress of the United States he ranked among the foremost in the house and later in the senate. He was twice a member of the executive cabinet, first as secretary of the treasury and afterwards as secretary of state. Whether in debate during the dark hours of our civil war, or as the director of the country's finances during the period of rehabilitation, or as a trusted councillor in framing the nation's law for over 40 years, or as the exponent of its foreign policy, his course was ever marked by devotion to the best interests of his beloved land, and by able and conscientious effort to uphold its dignity and honor. His countrymen will long revere his memory and see in him a type of the patriotism, the uprightness and the zeal that go to molding and strengthening a nation.

"In fitting expression of the sense of bereavement that afflicts the republic, I direct that on the day of the funeral the executive offices of the United States display the national flag at half-mast and that the representatives of the United States in foreign countries shall pay in like manner appropriate tribute to the illustrious dead for a period of ten days.

"Done at the city of Washington this twenty-second day of October in the year of our Lord one thousand and nine hundred and of the independence of the United States of America the one hundred and twenty-fifth.

(Seal) "WILLIAM M'KINLEY.

"By the President: JOHN HAY,
"Secretary of State."

The Statesman's Career.

John Sherman was 78 years of age. He was born at Lancaster, O., and when he was six years of age his father died. In the spring of 1837 he set out to do something for himself, and obtained the position of junior rodman with the engineer corps working on the improvements of the Muskingkum river. When 19 he went to Mansfield to study law with a brother. He was prepared for practice before he was 21 and practiced law actively until he was elected to congress in 1854.

Sherman and Colfax happened to enter public life together. They were both delegates to the national convention in Philadelphia, which nominated Zachary Taylor in 1848. During that summer Mr. Sherman was married to Miss Cecelia Stewart, the only daughter of Judge Stewart, of Mansfield. He was president of the first republican state convention held in Ohio, which met in 1855 and nominated S. P. Chase for governor.

Mr. Sherman took his seat in the Thirty-fourth congress six years before the war. In the Thirty-fifth congress he made a number of able speeches and became much interested in the finances of the country. He was elected to the United States senate in 1861 to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Mr. Chase.

Mr. Sherman can almost be called the author and the founder of the financial policy of the republican party. President Hayes made Mr. Sherman his secretary of the treasury because he knew him to be the foremost financier of the age.

Returning to the senate on the close of his term in President Hayes' cabinet, Mr. Sherman took up the work of active legislation again, and for 16 years more was one of the leaders of the body in which he had previously spent other 16 years of usefulness.

Mr. Sherman again resigned from the senate in March, 1897, to accept the most important position in the gift of President McKinley, the secretaryship of state, from which he retired in April, 1898.

May Move to America.

Pittsburgh, Pa., Oct. 22.—The Commercial Gazette says: Saybold & Dickstod, of Sheffield, England, the largest manufacturers of crucible steel in Great Britain, contemplate moving their plant to the United States. A site providing excellent water and rail shipping facilities has been optioned near Wheeling, W. Va., and it is proposed to erect thereon a modern plant costing upward of $3,000,000, which from the first will employ about 3,500 men. The object of the move is to get into the American market. Constantly increasing cost of coal in England is a prominent factor acting as an impetus to the move.

POLITICAL FORECASTS.

Predictions as to the Result of the Election at the Polls Made by Both Parties.

Chicago, Oct. 22.—Forecasts on the outcome of this campaign issued from both the republican and the democratic headquarters Saturday. While not given out by Chairman Jones, the democratic predictions have his indorsement, and, for that reason, they carry greater interest than any heretofore produced. It is the first time that he has consented to give any attention to detailed predictions. Having indorsed the subjoining tabulation, he goes on record as declaring that Mr. Bryan is sure of 272 electoral votes, that McKinley cannot lay claim to more than 116, and that there are 59 in the doubtful column. Should McKinley get all these they would do him no good. Here is the arrangement of states and votes that the democratic national chairman indorses:

Vice Chairman Henry C. Payne, of the republican committee, is the author of the republican forecast. It was made by him partly in reply to the foregoing democratic table, though, aside from that, Mr. Payne declares that his division of the electors is based upon entirely trustworthy reports from every state about which there is any room for argument. His estimate gives McKinley 294 electoral votes as certain, and, on the claim that the republicans have an even chance of winning in Nebraska and Utah, he thinks the full strength of the president's electoral vote will not be less than 305. This may be increased by the addition of Colorado, Idaho and Nevada. With those McKinley's strength in the college would be 315.

Mr. Payne's forecast is as follows:

SURE FOR M'KINLEY.

State.	Votes.	State.	Votes.
California	9	North Dakota	3
Connecticut	6	Ohio	23
Delaware	3	Oregon	4
Illinois	24	Pennsylvania	32

Mr. Payne classifies the other states as follows:

YOUTSEY FOUND GUILTY.

Given Life Sentence — Motion for Arrest of Judgment Set for Trial Next February.

Georgetown, Ky., Oct. 22.—"We, the jury, find this defendant guilty and fix his punishment at life imprisonment." This is the verdict returned by the 12 men who were selected to try Henry E. Youtsey, one of the principals in the murder of William Goebel.

The defense filed their motion for an arrest of judgment, and Judge Cantrill set the motion for hearing the second day of the February term, and therefore Youtsey will not be sentenced till next year, if then.

Christmas Boxes to Go Free.

Washington, Oct. 22. — Christmas packages for American soldiers serving abroad will be transported by the government free of charge from either San Francisco or New York. This was done last year and proved popular. The government will not undertake, however, to transport packages to soldiers in service in China, or to volunteers now in the Philippines. A transport leaves New York for the Philippines on November 5, and will take Christmas packages, but it will require 50 days to make the trip, whereas the voyage across the Pacific is shorter. Express or freight charges should be prepaid to San Francisco or New York. Packages for soldiers in Cuba and Porto Rico should be sent via New York.

Death and Ruin in a Tornado.

Atlanta, Tex., Oct 22.—A tornado struck about half a mile west of Lodi and 15 miles west of here Sunday. The path of the tornado was 200 yards wide and the wind swept everything before it. One house in the center of its path, occupied by colored people, was destroyed, six people being killed outright, and three others are missing who are supposed to be dead.

Four Die at a Fire.

St. Paul, Minn., Oct. 21.—Fire Saturday night destroyed J. T. Hinman's packing house at the Minnesota transfer. The walls fell, burying a number of firemen, killing Assistant Chief Irvine and three or four others. The names also destroyed a Great Northern locomotive and about 30 box cars. The total loss will reach about $100,000.

A BITE IN THE DARK.

Which Was Productive of a Conviction That Retribution Follows Shady Actions.

A young man whose work keeps him downtown until the early morning hours usually reaches home with a sharp appetite. His mother, an indulgent woman, too, puts a little lunch where he can get it, but this frequently fails to satisfy him. His wise parent knows this and she saves the larder from a wholesale onslaught by locking things up, says the Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Now, if there is one thing in particular that this youth dotes upon it is jelly. But jelly is an article of food that takes time and skill in its preparation, and if the lady left her jelly jars at his disposal—well, there would be none to dispose of after a few mornings. So the jelly is locked up the tightest of all.

The other morning the youth let himself into the house just as the gray streaks of dawn were cross-barring the eastern sky. There was milk and bread awaiting him, but his soul craved for jelly. He determined to hunt for some. Taking a slice of bread and a knife he stole down cellar and searched the fruit shelves. What happiness! He dimly made out the outlines of a jelly jar. Was there any jelly in it? He dipped in his knife and felt the soft and quivering mass. What a joke on this usually careful mother. She had actually forgotten to turn the key on this treasure.

He drew out a generous quantity and carefully spread it on the bread. He had to do it largely by guesswork, because the cellar was almost totally dark. When the spreading was done he smacked his lips tightly and took a generous bite.

No, it wasn't jelly. It was soft soap.

ORIENTAL DIPLOMACY.

An Instance of the Japanese Idea of Carrying Through a Good Joke.

It was at the time of the exhibition in 1867. A Japanese embassy went to Paris to treat for three free ports in France, in return for which England was to have three in Japan. The negotiations proved short and amiable, says London King.

"Make your choice," said Japan, "we will choose afterward."

The minister of foreign affairs selected Yokohama, Yeddo and Hang-Yang.

The embassy made no objection; they simply smiled and went on their way.

Some time afterward Japan sent word that the three ports mentioned were agreed to, and in return Japan desired Havre, Marseilles and Southampton.

This last named gave the French officials fits. They never laughed so much before, and certainly never since. Southampton a French port! No, it was too good. Gently, but unmistakably, they explained the situation.

"Why, Southampton is in England," they replied.

"We know that," came the cool response, "but then Hang-Yang is in Corea."

Whereupon the French officials collapsed.

Some Historical Parallels Between Jefferson and Bryan.

First hear now Mr. Henry Adams' summing up of the tirades against Jefferson by the Federalists of New England and New York in 1800: "Every dissolute intriguer, loose-liver, forger, false-coiner, and prison-bird; every hair-brained, loud-talking demagogue; every speculator, scoffer and atheist, was a follower of Jefferson; and Jefferson was himself the incarnation of their theories."

WHAT ROOSEVELT SAYS OF THE FOLLOWERS OF JEFFERSON

"Study the Kansas City platform and you cannot help realizing that their policy is the policy of infamy, that their triumph would mean misery so widespread that it is almost unthinkable and a disgrace so lasting that more than a generation would have to pass before it could be wiped out.

"They stand for lawlessness and disorder, for dishonesty and dishonor, for license and disaster at home and cowardly shrinking from duty abroad."

WHAT HISTORIANS SAY OF JEFFERSON'S ADMINISTRATION.

And what followed all this hysteria and malice, invocation of dread spectres and prediction of the mob? What was the sequel? "An administration," as Schouler justly describes it, "peaceful, progressive and popular beyond all precedent," — especially strong and successful just where the direst disaster had been foreboded, in the management of the finances of the country. "The policy of this remarkable administration," writes this admirer of Jefferson, "was at once and steadily successful in winning the people; and the prestige of enthusiasm became irresistible when conjoined with the prestige of success. An executive, neither the instrument of others nor a betrayer of trusts, we may regard Jefferson as the genuine personator of that to which France's First Consul presented contemporaneously the counterfeit,—a leader of the common people in the direction of their best desires."

This verdict is not simply that of Jefferson's admirers. The historians are harmonious. Mr. Morse, in his volume on Jefferson, in the American Statesmen series,—and neither the series as a whole, nor Mr. Morse's volume in particular, will ever be accused of making admiration of Jefferson its forte—uses terms almost identical. Mr. Schouler, in the passage quoted, is writing of a time midway in Jefferson's second administration, just before the troubles with England. Mr. Morse is writing of the close of his first administration, when the campaign for his re-election approached. Everything, he says, "redounded to his good fame and popularity." The nation felt "comfortable and good natured amid the broad visible facts of the passing time. . . . Were not expenses curtailed and taxes reduced, and debts being rapidly diminished? . . . Had the country been for many years past so free from irritation and anxiety growing out of foreign affairs? . . . Had political kindliness ever before permeated the nation as it did today? Four years of prosperity and tranquility left little room for discontent with the government. Amid such influences political opposition pined and almost died."

The verdict of history on the administration of the latter day Jefferson, William Jennings Bryan, who has been more bitterly abused than even his great prototype, will closely follow out the parallel.

TO SUPPLANT WHITES

American Workmen Will Be Put in Competition with Chinamen by Conquest of the Philippines.

PLAN ALREADY OPERATING.

Never in the history of this government has the labor of this country been so menaced by the threatened influx of the Mongolian and Malay cheap labor of the far east as seems probable under the McKinley policy of imperialism, should that dangerous policy be ratified by the American people. Without the labor vote that policy cannot be approved. It behooves the laboring people, therefore, to look out for breakers ahead. What does the conquest of the Philippine islands mean? It means that they shall become American territory. What rights does that proposition carry with it to the people of the Philippines? The McKinley policy to make the Philippine islands American territory by conquest, and subject to American jurisdiction, carries with it the right of the people of those islands to free locomotion to travel whither they will from one part of American territory to another without let or hindrance.

What has happened in the Hawaiian islands under the McKinley administration since those islands have been annexed to the United States will take place in this country. Fourteen to twenty thousand Japanese coolie laborers have been imported into the Hawaiian islands by the rich sugar planters, under contract, since the annexation of those islands; and this too, in violation of the contract labor law. Why did not McKinley as the chief executive of this nation whose duty it was to enforce the law, prevent this influx of Japanese coolie labor? Simply because he is bound hand and foot in the clutches of the syndicates and trust combines of the country.

What have we in store for the Philippine islands should the McKinley war of conquest be endorsed? The influx of Chinese coolie labor into those islands under the sanction of the McKinley administration! General Wesley Merritt and General Charles A. Whittier, U. S. V., and other land and naval officers went to Paris from Manila to testify before the Paris peace commissioners as to the Philippine people, their wants, needs, capabilities and government. General Whittier said:

Then the question of the admission of Chinese, with the strong argument on both sides. The merchants of Manila are unanimous in their representations of the necessity for more cooley labor. They, and many others, require it in Manila, and think that it will be necessary in railroad building, and in the development of the country, saying, "There is no question of competing with American labor here, there being no such in the country, nor can there be, the climate prohibiting that. Cheap labor and plenty of it is the life blood of the Philippines. There is room for three millions of Chinese comfortably, while 90,000 is the present estimate."

The Omaha Bee (Republican) said editorially Oct. 14, 1898, if we absorb the Philippines, with their millions of cheap laborers, and proceed to the development of those islands industrially and commercially by the utilization of this cheap labor, NOTHING CAN BE MORE CERTAIN THAN THAT IN TIME OUR HOME LABOR WILL SUFFER FROM THE COMPETITION. WE SHALL NOT BE ABLE TO PERPETUALLY SAFEGUARD IT BY THE SYSTEM OF PROTECTION NOW IN OPERATION. . . . . "Territorial expansion as now proposed is a very serious matter for American labor and the opposition of that labor to expansion should have more vigorous expression than has been given."

This was when the Omaha Bee was opposing the conquest of the Philippines and endeavoring to shape the course of the administration.

Birdseye View of William McKinley

His Devious Political and Official Trail Is an Anomaly in American Politics

Always Wrong in the End

"The Republican party has accepted the European idea and planted itself upon ground taken by George III and by every ruler who distrusts the capacity of the people for self-government or denies them a voice in their own affairs."—William J. Bryan's Letter of Acceptance.

This is what President William McKinley has done, says Jonathan B. Taylor:

He has exercised the autocratic and unconstitutional power of denying the right of representation and suffrage; of trial by jury; of writ of habeas corpus; of the right to bear arms; of all rights guaranteed by the constitution to the inhabitants of newly recognized islands.

He has recognized slavery and polygamy in Sulu.

He has made war upon the non-slave holding non-polygamous inhabitants of Luzon.

He has consented to the taxation without representation of the inhabitants of Porto Rico.

He has withheld independence from the inhabitants of Cuba.

This is imperialism!

In his message President McKinley said:

"Forcible annexation is criminal aggression."

He then proceeded to "forcibly annex" the Philippine archipelago with its 8,000,000 unwilling people.

In 1899 President McKinley said:

"It is our plain duty to give free trade to the people of Porto Rico."

He immediately proceeded to importune and coerce a Republican congress into passing a tariff bill against Porto Rico in accordance with the demand of the sugar trust.

He gave pledges to Spain and Cuba that Cuba should be free and independent.

He has created a military government in Cuba, which has thwarted every step toward island autonomy and which reeks with theft and corruption of every kind.

Record in the Philippines.

President McKinley paid Spain $20,000,000 for something which Spain did not possess and had not power to deliver. The president has since that time spent of the American people's money $200,000,000 trying to obtain that for which he had paid $20,000,000. In this attempt he has only succeeded in filling graves, hospitals, insane asylums and fat insular jobs. The end is not yet.

He has appointed more commissions to carry out his unconstitutional policy than all other presidents have legally created. He is paying these commissions in violation of the constitution. (See article 1, section 9, clause 7).

These commissions have never done anything beyond administering coats of whitewash to the autocracy at Washington.

McKinley's Appointees.

President McKinley is responsible for General Alger of canned beef notoriety; for General Eagan, who was suspended for blackguardism, on full pay; for Rathbone and Neely, the Cuban postal thieves; for Gage, the banker, who turned the treasury over to Morgan and his Wall street conspirators, and for Griggs, whose sole duty is to shield the robber trusts from prosecution.

He is responsible for Hay, the British toady. He sent Hay's son to Pretoria to be the administration agent at the death of the South African republics. Under the same Hay McKinley surrendered American territory in Alaska to Great Britain and denied the right of American miners to protest.

Enemy of Labor.

At the request of the Standard Oil trust President McKinley sent its regular army into Idaho to shoot down and imprison miners who had rebelled against Standard oil tyranny in Coeur d' Alene. These men were thrown into a stockade and kept there without right of trial until many of them became raving maniacs. These facts are a part of current history.

He placed a horse doctor in charge of the medical department of Cuba. He pliced Gen. Miles incommunicado and sent to Cuba in charge of the army Shafter, who rode to battle in a litter and who wanted to surrender when the first shot was fired.

Crooked All Through.

Mr. McKinley was a free silver man in 1893, a bi-metallist in 1896 and a single gold standard advocate in 1898. He was a champion of civil service in 1896, and two years later he discharged 8,000 civil service appointees to make place for political pets of Hanna and Platt.

Through his pro-British secretary of state he entered into a treaty with Great Britain whereby the American people were to dig a Nicaraguan canal and leave it defenseless to be used at pleasure by John Bull.

He permitted the opening of special mail matter to our consul at Pretoria by British agents and called our consul home because that official complained.

He makes constant declaration that the institutions of this country are in the hands of providence and then demands a large standing army, as if providence were not equal to the task.

Behold the Man of Destiny.

Secretary Root in a recent speech in New York said:

"Oh for one hour of Grant!"

Why Grant, if McKinley is such a Napoleon?

Why Grant, when the man of destiny and of providence, is at the helm?

Look at the man! He has been on every side of every question—always landing on the side opposed to the people, on the side of oppression, on the side of national shame.

WANTS A MONARCHY

McKinley Organ in Iowa Voices the Real Sentiments of the Republican Party.

CONSTITUTION IS OBSOLETE.

The following article is from the Des Moines (Ia.) Globe, a Republican farmers' paper. It voices in plain language the spirit of McKinley Republicanism. What the Globe frankly speaks the imperialist secretly thinks.

It is brutally plain, and for this reason Republican organs have affected to discredit its sentiments; but it speaks out of the fullness of a heart saturated with Hamiltonianism, which is the inspiration of President McKinley; and there is in it that touch of sincerity that gives it weight as an utterance, a little rash perhaps and possibly a little premature, but significant of the trend of modern Republicanism. The article deserves the very widest publicity as showing the direction of the McKinley drift:

"For a long time thinking people who have large commercial interests have felt unsafe with our present form of government from the fact that we are controlled by the little cheap-John politicians and ward-heelers. NOW IS A GOOD TIME TO DO AWAY WITH OUR OBSOLETE CONSTITUTION and adopt a form of government that will be logical with expansion ideas and will give AMPLE PROTECTION TO CAPITAL.

"A CONSTITUTIONAL MONARCHY is probably the most desirable plan that we could now adopt. Everything is ripe for the change. We take it that the great farming interests of our land will readily adapt themselves to the change. The farmer is a great lover of law and order, and ANTI-MONARCHY IS LARGELY THE EXPRESSION OF FRENCH REVOLUTIONARY IDEAS SUGGESTED BY HOT-HEADED THEORISTS.

"We believe that history and experience have proven beyond cavil that A REPUBLICAN FORM OF GOVERNMENT CANNOT SUBSIST beyond a certain stage. That as soon as a great PEOPLE BECOME RICH, STRONG AND GREAT, THE REPUBLIC DROOPS AND DIES. We believe this is so, of necessity and not by chance. We believe that there is not a single case of record where the masses of a great nation possessed the intelligence to initiate laws, and were intelligent enough to compel the enforcement of such good laws as they might pass.

"It would seem as if science teaches that men are created to follow their masters—the inspired minds of the world. HISTORY SHOWS THAT A KING MUST BE AND IS FOUND IN EVERY NATION to guide its people in every great crisis. Neither is the change to be dreaded or looked forward to with foreboding. While we are in fact largely under the conditions of a monarchy, we have the evils without the benefits of the same."

Bryan and the Income Tax

At present the government can draft the citizen, but cannot draft the pocketbook. Slowly but surely the dollar is being exalted and the man debased. Justice in taxation must be restored.

The sentiment prevailing among those who advocate an income tax justifies the prediction that the Democrats, Populists and Silver Republicans will in their next campaign advocate an amendment to the constitution specifically authorizing an income tax, and no one who has faith in the final triumph of every righteous cause will doubt the ultimate success of the effort to make an income tax a permanent part of the revenue system of the federal government. W. J. BRYAN.

NO FREEDOM NOW FOR FILIPINOS.

"I have always thought that all men should be free, but if any should be slaves, it should be first those who desire it for themselves and secondly those who desire it for others."

ABRAHAM LINCOLN.

From an address to an Indiana Regiment, March 17, 1865.

Rights never conflict; duties never clash. Can it be our duty to use up political rights which belong to others? Can it be our duty to kill those who, following the example of our forefathers, love liberty well enough to fight for it? W. J. BRYAN.

BENEVOLENT ASSIMILATION.

A Republican Newspaper Account of a Philippine Battle.

Just past this a few hundred yards we saw a solitary body lying in the road. The body was almost stripped of clothing, and there were no marks of rank left on the blood-soaked coat. But the face of the dead man had a look I had never noticed on the face of other dead men I had found in insurgent uniform on the field of battle, in the wake of an American firing line. The features were clear cut and forehead high and shapely. I decided the man must have been an insurgent officer. A soldier came running down the trail.

"That's old Pilar," he said. "We got the old rascal. I guess he's sorry he ever went up against the Thirty-third."

"There ain't no doubt about its being Pilar," rattled on the young soldier. "We got his diary, and his letters, and all his papers, and Sullivan of our company's got his pants, and Snider's got his shoes, but he can't wear them because they're too small, and a sergeant in G company got one of his silver spurs, and a lieutenant got the other, and somebody swiped the cuff buttons before I got here or I would have swiped them, and all I got was a stud button and his collar with blood on it."

So this was the end of Gregorio del Pilar. Only 22 years old, he managed to make himself a leader of men when he was hardly more than a boy, and at last had laid down his life for his convictions. Major Marsh had the diary. In it he had written under the date of December 2, the day he was killed:

"The general has given me the pick of all the men that can be spared and ordered me to defend the pass. I realize what a terrible task is given me. And yet I feel that this is the most glorious moment of my life. What I do is done for my beloved country. No sacrifice can be too great."

A private, sitting by the camp fire, was exhibiting a handkerchief. "It's old Pilar's. It's got 'Dolores Hosea' on the corner. I guess that was his girl. Well, it's all off with Gregorio."

"Anyhow," said Private Sullivan, "I got his pants. He won't need 'em any more."

The man who had the general's shoes strode proudly past, refusing with scorn a Mexican dollar and a pair of shoes taken from one of the private insurgent soldiers. A private sitting on a rock was examining a golden locket containing a curl of a woman's hair. "Got the locket off his neck," said the soldier. . . .

As the main column started on its march for the summit of the mountain a turn in the trail brought us again in sight of the insurgent general far down below us. There had been no time to bury him. Not even a blanket or a poncho had been thrown over him.

A crow sat on the dead man's feet. Another perched on his head. The fog settled down upon us. We could see the body no longer.

We carved not a line, and we raised not a stone,
But we left him alone in his glory.

And when Private Sullivan went by in his trousers, and Snider with his shoes, and the other man who had the cuff buttons, and the sergeant who had the spur, and the lieutenant who had the other spur, and the man that had the handkerchief, and another man that had his shoulder straps, it suddenly occurred to me that his glory was about all we had left him.—Richard Henry Little in Chicago Tribune.

LET THE PEOPLE ELECT THE SENATORS

President Johnson, in 1868, recommended a constitutional amendment providing for the election of United States senator by direct vote of the people, but his recommendation met with no response. About twelve years later General Weaver, then a member of congress, tried to secure the passage of a resolution submitting an amendment, but his efforts were futile. In 1892, the resolution recommended by President Johnson and urged by Congressman Weaver finally passed the house of representatives, but it has not yet reached a vote in the senate. And now after eight years more of public discussion, the proposition for the first time receives the endorsement of the national convention of one of the great parties.

If the fusion forces win a victory this fall, we shall see this reform accomplished before the next presidential election, and with its accomplishment, the people will find it easier to secure any remedial legislation which they may desire.

Great problems are solved slowly, but struggling humanity marches on, step by step, content if at each nightfall it can pitch its tent on a little higher ground. WILLIAM JENNINGS BRYAN.

LINCOLN VS. HIS PARTY.

(May 30, 1856. Speech at Bloomington, Ill., at the formation of party in State.—Arnold, p. 93.)

"Let us, in building our new party, plant ourselves on the rock of the Declaration of Independence and the gates of hell shall not be able to prevail against us."

[Republicans now declare the Declaration of Independence obsolete and deny its fundamental principle that governments derive their just powers from the consent of the governed.]

The Children of the Coal Miners

Do you hear the children weeping, O my brothers,
Ere the sorrow comes with years?
They are leaning their young heads against their mothers,
And that cannot stop their tears.
The young lambs are bleating in the meadows;
The young birds are chirping in the nest,
The young fawns are playing with the shadows;
The young flowers are blowing toward the west—
But the young, young children, O, my brothers,
They are weeping bitterly!
They are weeping in the playtime of the others,
In the country of the free. —Mrs. Browning.

FALSE PRETENSE OF PROSPERITY.

Of all the humbug and false pretense of the McKinley administration there is nothing more hollow than the cry of "prosperity." The suppressed rotten beef scandal, which is sought to be covered by pleas of patriotism; the Cuban frauds, whose authors are pretended to be prosecuted; the boodle-furnishing trusts, which are held up as enemies while licensed to tax the people, are all palpable evidences of the miserable hypocrisy of Mark Hanna's regime, but for cool audacity nothing has equaled the clamor about "prosperity."

Dr. O. J. Perkins, of Chicago, has made a study of a certified report signed by A. H. Gleason, Chief Clerk of the Bureau of Labor and Industrial Statistics of Nebraska. Under his analysis this report tells a widely different story from that daily proclaimed by Republican speakers and press. "Using the round numbers," he says, "the mortgages 'satisfied' during the three and a half years ending June 13, 1900, amount to $99,000,000, as against $77,000,000 'filed,' or a difference of $22,000,000 in favor of 'prosperity.' This applies to real estate mortgages only and would bear out the claim of the Republicans provided there was nothing further. When, however, we pass to the next column we find that $238,000,000 in chattel mortgages have been filed as against $77,000,000 satisfied—a difference of $161,000,000 against 'prosperity.'"

The difference between $161,000,000 and $22,000,000 is $139,000,000. This is the actual increase in the mortgage indebtedness of the state of Nebraska according to the sworn statement of the county clerk. These large figures are not easily comprehended. Viewed from another standpoint it may be easier. Allowing that the population of Nebraska has increased twenty per cent since the census of 1890, we find that the increased indebtedness is over $109 for each man, woman and child in the state.

If the people of the state of Nebraska with abundant crops are in this short time plunged $139,000,000 more in debt than at the beginning of this period, how many years will it require under the same regime to place the property entirely in the hands of mortgage holders?

Those not acquainted with the present methods of loaning money in the west and south will be astonished at the large increase in chattel mortgages shown by the report. This is explained by the fact that the lender prefers a short time loan at an increased rate of interest secured by a mortgage on growing live stock to one on real estate. An analysis of similar reports made by other state officers in the west and southwest will show practically the same results.

Instead of there being any decrease of mortgage debt in Indiana, the mortgage debt, real estate and chattel, has increased during every year of the McKinley administration, and the total increase for the three years completed is in excess of $50,000,000. In two years of McKinley prosperity the chattel mortgages of Indiana have increased 255,151 in number, and $7,382,234 in amount, and the total mortgage debt of the state in three years of McKinley prosperity has increased $55,946,746 over what has been paid, not including the chattel mortgages and foreclosures of 1897.

The Farmer, the Laborer and the Business Man Alike Threatened with Serfdom

DEMOCRACY THEIR SOLE DEFENDER

THE KANSAS CITY PLATFORM SAYS:

Private monopolies are indefensible and intolerable. They destroy competition, control the price of all material and of the finished product, thus robbing both producer and consumer; lessen the employment of labor and arbitrarily fix the terms and conditions thereof, and deprive individual energy and small capital of their opportunity for betterment. They are the most efficient agent yet devised for appropriating the fruits of industry to the benefit of the few at the expense of the many, and unless their insatiate greed is checked all wealth will be aggregated in a few hands and the republic destroyed.

We pledge the democratic party to an unceasing warfare in Nation, State and city against private monopoly in every form.

WILLIAM J. BRYAN SAYS:

A private monopoly has always been an outlaw. No defense can be made of an industrial system in which one, or a few men, can control for their own profit the output or price of any article of merchandise. Under such a system the consumer suffers extortion, the producer of raw material has but one purchaser and must sell at the arbitrary price fixed; the laborer has but one employer and is powerless to protest against injustice, either in wages or in condition of labor; the small stockholder is at the mercy of the speculator, while the traveling salesman contributes his salary to the overgrown profits of the trust. Since but a small proportion of the people can share in the advantages secured by private monopoly, it follows that the remainder of the people are not only excluded from the benefits, but are the helpless victims of every monopoly organized. It is difficult to overestimate the immediate injustice that may be done, or to calculate the ultimate effect of this injustice upon the social and political welware of the people. Our platform, after suggesting certain specific remedies, pledges the party to an unceasing warfare against private monopoly in nation, state and city. I heartily approve of this promise. If elected, it shall be my earnest and constant endeavor to fulfill the promise in letter and spirit.

One of the main reasons why men struggle so hard to obtain a monopoly is that it enables them to charge more than the worth of the goods or services they supply.

In the Bramkamp wire nail case the attorney for the trust admitted that the combine had raised the price from 80 cents to $2.50 a keg, wholesale, securing thereby a monopoly profit of several million dollars. That trust went to pieces, but recently another has been formed, and wire nails have advanced over 140 per cent beyond the ordinary competitive price.

Coal Trust Extortions.

The coal combine was investigated by congress in 1893, and the report declares (1) that in 1888 the extortions of the coal monopoly averaged more than $1 a ton, or $39,000,000 for the year; and (2) that from 1873 to 1886 $200,000,000 more than a fair market price was taken from the public by this combination. It also appeared that in 1892 the combine raised the price $1.25 to $1.35 a ton on the kinds used by housekeepers, though the price of coal was already high and the cost of mining diminishing every year.

The Linseed Oil Trust in 1887 put the price up from 38 to 52 cents a gallon, or nearly $5,000,000 additional tax on the yearly output.

In the same year the Copper Syndicate put up the price from 10 to 17 and 18 cents a pound, or $30,000,000 addition on the yearly outppt.

A congressional investigation in 1893 brought out the fact that on the strength of a rumor that the internal revenue tax was to be increased by congress the Whisky Trust raised its prices 25 cents a gallon, which would amount to an additional profit of $12,500,000 on its yearly output.

Jump In Sugar.

In 1888, just after the Sugar Trust was formed, the average price of raw sugar was the same as in 1885, but the average price of refined sugar advanced so that the difference between the price of raw sugar and the price of refined sugar was 76 per cent more than in 1885 and about 70 per cent more than in 1887, the year the trust was formed. Recently sugar has made advances amounting to a total of 2 cents on the pound. For a dozen years we have paid each year a good deal more per pound for refining sugar than we did in 1885 (although the cost of refining has been constantly diminishing), and our sugar bill has averaged at least $10,000,000 and perhaps $20,000,000 a year more because of the trust.

Standard Oil Again.

The Standard Oil is another monopoly that has kept prices form falling as much as the diminished cost of transportation and refining would have caused them to fall in an open market, and at times it has lifted prices absolutely as well as relatively, in spite of the vast improvements in processes of manufacture, great cheapening of transportation by the pipe-line service, and the falling price of crude oil. From 1894 to 1897, for example, the price of refined oil went up 14 per cent, while the price of crude oil declined 6 per cent. Oil rose at wholesale in New York from 3 cents in November, 1897, to 6 cents in December, 1899, and it has gone still higher in 1900.

One may charge the fair value of the services he renders without a monopoly. But monopoly gives power to charge more than that value, in other words, monopoly confers the inestimable privilege of demanding something for nothing.

The Telegraph Monopoly.

We pay twice as much for our telegrams as government systems charge; the telephone monopoly charged the federal government $75 per 'phone for service the government is now supplying for itself at a cost of $10 per 'phone, and even in our largest city exchanges, where the monopoly charges $90 to $250, the service could be rendered at a profit for a uniform charge of $30 a year.

The Bell monopoly, in Grand Rapids, Wis., charged $36 for a house and $48 for a business place, while a cooperative telephone exchange is operating in the same place at $6 for a house and $18 for a business place per year and is making money. The exorbitant rates of express monopolies are notorious, and even railroads have been known to make excessive charges.

Municipal Franchises.

It is the same with all our city monopolies. Gas sells at $1 which can be made for 20 cents and distributed for 15, as we know from various gas reports and investigations.

The above are but a few samples from an enormous mass of facts demonstrating that private monopoly tends to extortion.

Extortionate charges lead, of course, to enormous profits and the building of vast fortunes which become, in their turn, the instruments of further extortion. The monopolists roll in wealth, while the working masses and competitive classes are cheated out of their fair share of the world's wealth.

Those who build palaces do not live in them.

Builders Enter Not In.

Those who dig coal have little fuel,
Those who make clothes are ill-clad,
Those who grow wheat and corn are poorly fed.
Those who build railroads do not travel.
Those who do most of the work do not enjoy the fruits of their labor, while those who do little or nothing, enjoy much; all because privat monopoly gives some men the power of appropriating what others produce.

Here are some of the profits private monopoly has made:

Oil trust—$23,000,000 in three months—about 100 per cent a year on the capital, water and all. (The oil monopoly has been known to make 520 per cent on its whole capital, and on one investment 3,000 per cent per year was obtained through railroad favoritism. —Wealth Against Commonwealth, pp. 67, 99, 100.)

Profits of Monopoly.

Steel trust—$42,500,000 a year—about 30 per cent on water and all.
Sugar trust, 200 to 400 per cent.
Wire trust, 60 per cent.
Tin plate trust, 40 per cent.
Pennsylvania coal, 30 per cent.
Fifth Ave. bank (New York), 150 per cent.
Chemical bank (New York), 200 per cent.
Metropolitan Telephone Co., 150 per cent.
Bell monopoly, $5,000,000 a year, 4-5 of its total income.
Telegraph monopoly (on original investment), 300 per cent a year.
Bay State Gas Co., 60 per cent a year.
Cleveland Gas Co., 144 per cent a year.
New York Gas, $300,000,000 in ten years, or enough to pay 10 per cent on the investment and duplicate all the plants besides.—(New York Senate Investigation).
Metropolitan Street Ry. System, New York, 28 per cent.
Philadelphia Traction—$5,500,000—16 per cent on investment.
13th and 15th Street Co., 65 per cent.
Philadelphia City 31 per cent.
Ridge Avenue 42 per cent.
Citizens' Co., 67 per cent.
2d and 3d Streets, 25 per cent.
Union, 31 per cent.

The excessive charges and exorbitant profits of private monopoly are nothing more nor less than taxation without representation. You are not represented in the oil trust, the steel trust, the coal combine, the Chemical bank, the gas, electric, street railway, telegraph, telephone, railroad, beef, sugar, copper and tin monopolies. Yet they levy taxes on you.

Watered Stock.

The monopolists know that their outrageous profits may rouse the people if they become known and so many of those most open to the public gaze try to hide their gains by watering their capital. Ninety per cent on the real investment is only 9 per cent on a capital watered to tenfold bulk.

Fraud and extortion are among the most prolific, and are quite the most deplorable of all the results of private monopoly.

SLAVERY RECOGNIZED

Amendment to the Constitution for Which a Million Lives Were Sacrificed Set at Naught by McKinley.

THE INFAMOUS SULU TREATY.

The constitution of the United States says:

ARTICLE XIII.

1. Neither slavery nor involuntary servitude, except as a punishment for crime whereof the party shall have been duly convicted, shall exist within the United States, or any place subject to their jurisdiction.

M'KINLEY'S INFAMOUS TREATY WITH THE SULTAN OF SULU.

Article I. The sovereignty of the United States over the whole archipelago of Sulu and its dependencies is declared and acknowledged.

Article II. The United States flag will be used in the archipelago of Sulu and its dependencies on land and sea.

COST OF MILITARISM.

Two Hundred Millions for the Army; Seventy-Five Millions for the Navy Is What McKinley Wants.

DEMANDS ARMY OF 100,000 MEN.

We are at last to know what we are to pay for our experiment in imperialism.

The Washington government has made its demand. It demands an army of 100,000 men and it wants $200,000,000 for the next year to support its pretensions.

The navy department wants $75,000,000. The end is far away. This is only the beginning of what American taxpayers may expect.

To support the army and navy until the end of the fiscal year, June 30, 1902, congress will be asked to appropriate more than $200,000,000. The war department is estimating on the basis of 100,000 men.

Under the present law all volunteers and regulars in excess of about 30,000 men must be discharged before July 1, 1901, and Quartermaster-General Ludington is making arrangements for the transportation home of the volunteers, beginning next month.

It will be necessary to recruit regiments to take the place of the volunteers in case more troops are authorized, and when they are ready for active service they must be transported to Manila.

The pay of the army will be what was estimated for the current year—$47,000,000. There will be a heavy bill for clothing, medical and hospital stores, ordnance, ordnance stores and supplies and regular supplies for the quartermaster's department. The estimate made by Commissary-General Weston for subsistence stores for the current fiscal year was $11,112,242, and this will be exceeded.

Secretary Root's estimate for the military establishment for the current year aggregated $128,170,583, and it will undoubtedly be larger for the next fiscal year.

No Room for Subjects Under the Free Flag

The Supreme Purpose of the People Should Be to Oppose All Attempts to Grasp Imperial Power.

REPUBLIC FACES A PROFOUND CRISIS

The Republic is confronted by a great national crisis—involving the perpetuity of the institutions founded by the fathers.

For the first time in our country's history it has undertaken to subjugate a foreign people and to rule them by despotic power.

The president is waging war upon people of alien birth for asserting the very principles for which the fathers of our own republic pledged their lives, their fortunes and their sacred honors.

The policy of the president offers the inhabitants of Porto Rico, Hawaii and the Philippines no hope of independence, no prospect of American citizenship, no constitutional protection, no representation in the Congress which taxes him.

This is the government of men by arbitrary power without their consent; this is Imperialism.

This is the issue which the Kansas City platform declares to be the paramount question in American politics.

There is no room under the American flag for subjects. The president and congress, who derive all their powers from the Constitution, can govern no man without regard to its limitations.

No nation can endure part citizen and part subject.

We have come as a people to the parting of the ways. Which shall it be—Republic or Empire?

Shall we remain true to the American ideal or shall we adopt the sword?

Is the Republic of Washington and Jefferson ready for this tremendous stride backward?

KING GEORGE AND KING WILLIAM.

When the American colonies were in revolt against Great Britain, George III., then king, issued a proclamation as follows:

"I am desirous of restoring to them (the American colonies), the blessings of law, which they have fatally and desperately exchanged for the calamities of war, and the arbitrary tyranny of their chiefs."
—George III. of England, in 1776.

So too while the forces of the United States were chasing the patriotic Filipinos from their burning homes, President McKinley assured them of his kind purposes as follows:

"That Congress will provide for them (the Filipinos), a government which will bring them blessings, which will promote their material interests, as well as advance their people in the paths of civilization and intelligence, I confidently believe." — President McKinley at Minneapolis, Oct. 12, 1899.

Read what Abraham Lincoln said with regard to these promises or "benevolent assimilation" offered to a people for a surrender of their liberties.

Mr. Lincoln, in a speech at Chicago, Ill., July 10, 1858, spoke as follows:

*"Those arguments that are made that the inferior race are to be treated with as much allowance as they are capable of enjoying; that as much is to be done for them as their condition will allow; What are these arguments? They are the arguments that kings have made for enslaving the people in all ages of the world. You will note that all the arguments of kingcraft were always of this class. They always bestrode the necks of the people, not that they wanted to do it, but because the people were better off for being ridden. * * * Turn it every way you will, whether it comes from the mouth of a king as an excuse for enslaving the people of his country, or from the mouth of one race as a reason for enslaving the men of another race, it is all the same old serpent."*
—Lincoln's Complete Works, Vol. I., page 259.

"Let it be remembered," said the continental congress in addressing the states at the end of the Revolution, "that it has ever been the pride and boast of America that the rights for which she contended were the rights of human nature."

"True statesmen as they were," said Lincoln, "they knew the tendency of prosperity to breed tyrants, so they established these self-evident truths, that when, in the distant future, some men, some faction some interest should set up the doctrine that none but rich men or none but white men, or none but Anglo-Saxon white men, were entitled to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness, their posterity might look up again to the declaration of independence and take courage to renew the battle which their fathers began; so that truth, justice and mercy and all the humane and Christian virtues might not be extinguished from the land; so that no man would hereafter dare to limit and circumscribe the great principles on which the temple of liberty was being built."

WILLIE AND HIS PAPA

WILLIE—"What have you got on those spectacles and false whiskers for, papa?"

PAPA—"Papa has got to disguise himself as a harmless old gentleman, Willie, to fool the common people They call papa 'Honest Old Si' down town."

DEMOCRATIC PARTY FAVORS LIBERAL PENSIONS.

We are proud of the courage and fidelity of the American soldiers and sailors in all our wars; we favor liberal pensions to them and their dependents; and we reiterate the position taken in the Chicago platform in 1896, that the fact of enlistment and service shall be deemed conclusive evidence against disease and disability before enlistment.

HEATH ENDORSES NEELY

"Postoffice Department.
"First Ass't Postmaster General.
"Washington, D. C., Dec. 13, 1898.

"My Dear Major—I intended to say to you when you were here that there is one man, Mr. Charles F. W. Neely, of Muncie, Ind., who wants to go into the Cuban mail service, in whom I am more interested than any other man among thousands of applicants for positions of that character. He is a newspaper writer and publisher, and about forty-two years of age, splendidly educated, a hustler, a man with the very best habits and as loyal as loyalty itself. He would make a GRAND CONFIDENTIAL MAN FOR YOU. I will write and ask him to go and see you. This is a man you will warm up to, and would like to have AS A COMPANION as well as an executive officer.

"Yours faithfully,
"PERRY S. HEATH,

JEFFERSON AND LIBERTY.

I think all the world would gain by setting commerce at perfect liberty.

The only orthodox object of the institution of Government is to secure the greatest degree of happiness possible to the general mass of those associated under it.

The whole art of government consists in the art of being honest.

Governments derive their just powers from the consent of the governed.

The liberty of speaking and writing guards our other liberties.

The highest obligation of this nation is to be true to itself. No obligation to any particular nations, or to all the nations combined, can require the abandonment of our theory of government and the substitution of doctrines against which our whole national life has been a protest, W. J. BRYAN.

WHERE THE DEMOCRATIC PARTY STANDS ON LABOR

DEPARTMENT OF LABOR

(From Kansas City Platform.)

In the interest of American labor and the upbuilding of the workingman, as the corner-stone of the prosperity of our country, we recommend that Congress create a Department of Labor, in charge of a Secretary, with a seat in the Cabinet, believing that the elevation of the American laborer will bring with it increased production and increased prosperity to our country at home and to our commerce abroad.

BRYAN ON ARBITRATION

(From Letter of Acceptance.)

"The platform renews the demand for arbitration between corporations and their employes. No one who has observed the friction which arises between great corporations and their numerous employes can doubt the wisdom of establishing an impartial court for the just and equitable settlement of disputes. The demand for arbitration ought to be supported as heartily by the public, which suffers inconvenience because of strikes and lockouts, and by the employers themselves, as by the employes. The establishment of arbitration will secure friendly relations between labor and capital, and render obsolete the growing practice of calling the army to settle labor troubles."

A CLEAN SWEEP

THE ENTIRE FUSION TICKET A SURE WINNER.

Encouraging Reports From All Over the State---Gains Everywhere---Tables Turned---Hard on Bob Dunn---Chilling Frost For Hanna and Frye in Southern Minnesota---Bureau Notes, Etc.

REFORM PRESS BUREAU.
ST. PAUL, Oct. 22, 1900.

John Lind will be re-elected governor of Minnesota with a plurality considerably larger than that of two years ago. This is the universal sentiment of the leaders of the Fusion forces throughout the state, and the only point on which there is any disagreement at all is how much greater the plurality is going to be.

Reports from every county of the state indicate a constantly increasing sentiment in favor of the present state administration, the honesty and efficiency of which has been so apparent and striking that people cannot help but see in "Honest" John Lind a personal and unwavering friend.

The Republicans realize this, and naturally do not feel particularly elated. Their failure to work up much enthusiasm on the state campaign is probably due to the fact that they realize the hopelessness of it. Even leading Republicans admit that their candidate for governor does not appeal to the people, and will suffer an overwhelming defeat.

The Enterprise (Rep.) of Echo, Minn., says: "John Lind will have 40,000 plurality in Minnesota. At least that is the way it looks now, and again it looks as if the Republican state central committee knew it." And then it goes on and rips up the whole Republican campaign management, and Tams Bixby in particular, and strews the fragments thereof to the four winds.

The prospects are also good for carrying all of the state ticket, as it is expected that most of those who vote for Lind will vote the Fusion ticket straight.

The railroad commissioners, whom the Republican legislature hoped to get rid of by making the positions elective, will be elected on the strength of the record they have made, and the whole state ticket in all its parts is such a strong and popular one, as to make it a probable winner.

A special from Fairmont, Minn., to the Minneapolis Journal (Rep.) says: "Van Sant is popular, but is held by some to have been unfortunate in selecting his men to manage his campaign in this county. Talk with the average voter about the ticket and he will say "Well, we will support McKinley, but as to the balance of the ticket, we are going to vote for the man who we think will serve the people—and there you are."

The Pioneer Press (Rep.), in discussing the outlook in the Second district, says: "Knox and Ringdahl of the Democratic ticket will probably run a little ahead of the balance of the ticket, owing to the fact that a portion of the district is benefitted from the reduction of grain rates." It also admits that M. E. Matthews, the Democratic candidate, is personally popular.

Concerning the lumber trust, R. E. Shepard, attorney for J. E. Easton, the La Crosse millionaire, made the statement the other day that the farmer could "well afford to pay $2 a thousand extra for lumber this fall to build sheds for hogs and cattle."

It seems that Senators Mark Hanna and Frye were treated to a chilling frost down in Southern Minnesota.

Mr. H. C. Koerner, Fusion candidate for state treasurer, writes from New Ulm: "I can not refrain from letting you know how much enthusiasm the coming of Mark Hanna, Frye and Dolliver created in this part of the state. I happened to be at Redwood Falls on Tuesday morning, from which point the Northwestern line ran a special excursion train at reduced rates to the Hanna meeting at Tracy. The actual number of tickets sold at Redwood Falls was one, and the actual number of persons availing themselves of the opportunity of seeing and hearing the famous Hanna, from the Republican city of Redwood Falls, was two besides the "ticket purchaser" above mentioned, viz., a newspaper man and some other gentleman, both riding on passes. I learned later on that another lone passenger was added at Sleepy Eye. Now what do you think about this for enthusiasm in a Republican community."

A letter from Mankato says: "The Hanna meeting was colder than the frost of this morning. The crowd was one-third less than the Bryan meeting, and another interesting fact in our behalf was that there were more than twice as many farmers in from the country to hear Bryan as there were to hear Hanna. There are more workingmen coming over to Bryan every day."

Another letter from Mankato encloses a copy of the speeches of Senators Frye and Hanna, and adds: "The report gives but a poor idea of what a farce comedy it was. During Frye's and also during Hanna's speech, the crowd had no end of merriment at the expense of the speakers. No worse effect could have been produced by the poorest speakers in the land than these two men produced. The Democrats left the meeting in high spirits, but the Republicans are feeling very sore about it."

The Republicans have been squealing because Governor Lind turned a searchlight on a little transaction that took place under one of the former administrations. It appears that by certain manipulations a piece of mining land belonging to the state was turned over to the Rockefeller company. The land in question is one of the most productive iron mines in the country, and is at present worth in the neighborhood of $12,000,000. Very profitable for Rockefeller isn't it.

This transaction took place in '88, under State Auditor Braden. The Republicans knew that they could not defend it, and they almost got scared out of their wits, and all they could think of was to howl in unison "The man is dead, let him rest. You are a ghoul."

Yes, the man is dead. Let him rest. But the party he represented still claims to be alive, and is asking for a chance to get control of the state administration. The responsibility which the dead man has escaped now rests on the party alone.

Let them face it if they dare.

Two years ago the Republicans worked the calamity howl to the utmost against John Lind, and proclaimed in the highways and byways and in the market places that grass and cockle burrs would luxuriate in the streets of Minneapolis if Lind were elected, that the state treasury would be depleted, and nothing left of it but an aching void; and now Lind has been governor for nearly two years and the treasury is filled to overflowing as it never was before.

In the light of this experience, will the people of Minnesota take much stock in the calamity howl that is now being worked against Bryan?

The Board of Appeals, which was established last year in connection with the grain inspection department, has met the universal approval of the farmers and all who are engaged in the grain business. It was estimated that the expense of this board should be $20,000 a year, but as reports show, they have only amounted to $14,000.

The regular work of the grain inspection department such as it has been established for years cost this year only $207,955.54, while last year, under the Republican inspector, Mr. Clausen, it cost $213,764.54, making a decrease in expenses of $5,809. Compare this record with that of the Republican state auditor, Mr. Dunn.

During the last five years of the Republican administration the expenses of the grain inspection department have increased at the rate of $13,248.46 a year on an average, while during the first year of Mr. Reishus' administration they decreased by $5,809.

The railroads in Minnesota are taxed only one-third as heavily as other property. The tax on the gross earnings of railroads in our state is 3 per cent, in Kansas it is 12 per cent. That is what a Populist legislature has done for Kansas.

Senctor Hanna's voice is troubling him as the Republican papers advise us. It is not troubling him nearly as much though as it is troubling the Republican campaign leaders.

Referring to the full dinner pail argument, Bryan said at Peoria: "The Bible tells that there was once a man named Esau, who sold his birthright for a full dinner pail, and he has been held in derision ever since."

The wire nail trust sells wire nails here in this country at $3.38 per 100 lbs, and ships them to England and sells them there at $2.55 per 100 lbs. The barb wire trust sells its barb wire in this country at $3.80 per 100 lbs, but it also ships its barb wire to England and sells it there at $2.39 per 100 lbs. These are some of the infant industries McKinley is so tenderly protecting.

The American consumer is charged double price, but in the markets of the world these tax fattened infants of industry undersell the competition of the European manufacturer.

The wonderful era of prosperity prevailing at present in northwestern Europe is well known. During the last ten years wages in Germany have risen from 25 to 50 per cent. How much have they risen in this country during the same time? The trouble with our prosperity is that it is being gobbled up by the trusts before it gets down to the people.

The bulk of our trade is with England, Germany and France, and we don't own any one of those countries. Yes, we don't even have a coaling station there.

The markets of the world are always open to the man that sells the best goods for the lowest price. Every country has something that it would like to sell to us, and if we can sell them something in return that is cheaper and better than they can buy the same article anywhere else, we are sure of getting their trade.

Hanna's orators are putting in most of their time telling the people to what depths of misery and degradation the country had sunk under Cleveland and the rest of their time they put in asking the Cleveland Democrats to help them out this year.

Now, is there not some kind of a hitch there somewhere?

According to accounts from the Philippines, during the months of August and September, 155 American soldiers are reported as killed, wounded, captured or missing, and 200 soldiers died of disease in army posts. This hardly tallies with the optimistic report of McKinley's Philippine commission.

The American flag is the symbol of a republic. It can never be made the emblem of an empire. If it can not float in the Philippines as the symbol of a republic, it can not float there at all. If the flag that floats in the Philippines is not the symbol of a republic, it is not the American flag, and every patriot can only be gratified to see it hauled down.

He Wouldn't Tell.

The argument by analogy or hypothetical case is often dangerous. A very stately and dignified clergyman used to tell a story illustrative of the risk of this method. One of his parishioners was much addicted to drink and one night the vicar met him coming home in such a condition that he remonstrated with him on the spot, and by way of clinching his argument, asked: "What would you say if you were to see me reeling down the street in a state of hopeless intoxication?" The offender appeared to be deeply impressed and answered, fervently: "I wouldn't tell a soul, sir."—San Francisco Argonaut.

THE FALL ELECTIONS.

Ten Candidates for President to Be Voted For at the Polls on November 6.

New York, Oct. 20.—Ten candidates for president and vice president will be voted for on November 6. Ballots will not be cast for all of them in all the states, but the ten parties will be represented at the polls in most of them.

State tickets will be numerous, Illinois and Indiana leading with seven each; Colorado, Idaho, Kentucky, Michigan, New York, North Dakota, Ohio, Pennsylvania and Wisconsin following with five each; Connecticut, Delaware, Iowa, Massachusetts, Minnesota, Montana, Nebraska, Kansas, South Dakota, Texas and Washington coming next with four each; Kansas, Missouri, New Hampshire and West Virginia trailing with three each; and then Florida, Nevada, Tennessee and Utah with two each; South Carolina with only one occupying the end of the line.

Maine, Oregon and Vermont have already elected congressmen and will vote for presidential electors only. Alabama, Arkansas, California, Georgia, Louisiana, Maryland, Mississippi, New Jersey, North Carolina, Virginia and Wyoming having no state tickets, will choose congressmen and electors. All the other states elect congressmen.

Legislatures which elect a United States senator are to be elected in Kansas, Montana, New Hampshire, Texas, Illinois, West Virginia, Iowa, Massachusetts, Delaware, Michigan, Minnesota, South Dakota, New Jersey, Idaho, Nebraska, South Carolina, Tennessee, Wyoming, Colorado, Pennsylvania and Utah.

The following are the national tickets:

TRADE REVIEW.

Situation in the Business World as Seen by a Leading Commercial Agency.

New York, Oct. 20.—R. G. Dun & Co.'s Weekly Review of Trade says: "A settlement of the coal strike satisfactory to all interests having been effected, business breathes more freely in the east and distribution of merchandise is increasing slowly again, though the election excitement keeps new buying in many lines down to wants for immediate consumption. In the west there is not the same hesitation, and there, as well as in the south, the marketing of the crops is responsible for a feeling of much confidence in the movement of business if the nation acts conservatively at the polls. Prices of commodities are weaker, and the caution so gratifying in a presidential year keeps speculation at a minimum. Few important fluctuations occurred in iron and steel, but there were small advances in Bessemer pig at Pittsburgh and billets at Philadelphia. Moderate gains are reported in the volume of transactions, although the tendency is to delay large contracts a few weeks.

"Failures for the week were 209 in the United States, against 145 last year, and 26 in Canada, against 20 last year."

DEATH LIST GROWS.

Many Bodies Are Found Every Day in Clearing Away Ruins at Galveston.

Galveston, Tex., Oct. 19.—One month and ten days have elapsed since the storm, and still the number of dead bodies being recovered daily does not decrease. Forty-two were recovered Thursday. This makes a record of 107 for the past four days. The total number of bodies officially reported to have been recovered is 2,907. A great many bodies were found, however, of which no report was made. It is not known how many were carried out to sea or to the mainland or how many still remain under the debris. There is no reason to reduce the former estimate of the loss of life.

Sold for Taxes.

New York, Oct. 20.—The plot of ground on which the historic monument erected at Tappan, N. Y., by the late Cyrus W. Field, in memory of Andre, the revolutionary spy, was sold Friday by Treasurer Randolph, of Rockland county, for nonpayment of taxes. Since the death of Mr. Field the memorial has been neglected, and Friday it passed into the hands of George Dickey, of Nyack, who says that he will obliterate the historical memorial. The monument was unveiled October 2, 1879, and in April, 1882, an attempt to destroy it by an explosion of nitro-glycerin was made.

Killed by Bank Robbers.

Bronaugh, Mo., Oct. 20.—Seven masked men wrecked the safe of the Farmers' bank at about half-past one o'clock Friday morning. Dynamite was used, and the report was heard by Constable William T. Morren and the proprietor of the Bronaugh house across the street from the bank. Constable Morren fired several times in the darkness in the direction of the report, and shot after shot was returned by the robbers. One struck Morren squarely between the eyes and killed him instantly. The robbers made their escape. The cashier of the bank says its loss is $1,625.

Murdered and Robbed.

New Bloomfield, Mo., Oct. 20. — A coroner's jury, called to investigate the death of Dr. C. M. Wright, whose body was found in the ruins of his drug store, which burned Thursday, has found that he was murdered and robbed and the building set on fire. The skull had been crushed. Money that was known to be in the store could not be found. Dr. Wright was 65 years old and a British subject.

MINNESOTA NEWS.

A Good Showing.

The final meeting for settling the season's accounts for the state agricultural society was held in St. Paul. The reports showed that the state fair had been a great success, and had proven very profitable financially as well as otherwise. The gross earnings for the year was $7,000 greater than the preceding year, and there is a surplus left of $20,000.

The legislature will be asked to make an appropriation of $100,000 to add to the buildings at the fair grounds, and to extend the water mains of the St. Paul system into the fair grounds. It was said that had this been done during the present year the fire which nearly wrecked the buildings just at the beginning of the fair would have been averted.

The profits on the fair leave a balance of $20,000, and $10,000 of this amount was set aside to pay premiums in case bad weather should make any future fair unprofitable, as was the case in the late Illinois state fair. The remaining $10,000 will be used in fixing up the buildings during the winter, paying salaries, and liquidating expenses preliminary to the opening of the next year.

To Prevent Premature Burial.

The Minneapolis and St. Paul members of the American Society for the Prevention of Premature Burial will be asked to vote soon on how best to undertake the object of their organization, which is "advocacy of such legislation as will do away with the danger of a too early interment."

Special legislation will be asked of the next legislature of Minnesota and the bill to be presented to that body will be drawn during the October meeting by counsel for the board of directors of the above named company. How best to prevent premature burial is the qnestion to be solved. There are three ways, one of which will be chosen. These are:

First—The German (mortuary) system.

Second—The French (test) system.

Third—The Russian (Karnice) system.

Wanted a Reward.

Mrs. Minerva Pipin of Otsego, Minn., has written the state board of health that she is the mother of twenty children and feels she is entitled to some remuneration from the state. Her language is more explicit. She wrote. "I am the mother of twenty children and I feel as though I was entitled to $1,000 from the government. I am told I am. If I haven't addressed this to the right party, let me know."

The question was considered sufficiently preplexing for Auditor Dunn, and accordingly the letter was turned over to him. But he is unable to find any precedent to cover the case. The state offers a bounty on beet sugar, wolves slain and horse thieves. but no reward for children.

A Freak Runaway.

A freak runaway occurred in Minneapolis, when a horse became frightened at the rear of the postoffice, started out the alley, continued across the street and rushed into the saloon of Tom Gallagher. The animal was hitched to a buggy, and as the vehicle struck the door the horse's wild career came to a stop. It goes without saying that the greatest excitement was caused about the place. But a very funny thing followed. It was impossible to back the horse out, and as the buggy was firmly wedged into the sides of the door, there was nothing to do but unhitch the horse and walk it through the saloon to the alley. The police then assumed charge of the animal.

A Husking Bee.

The first husking bee ever held in the Red River Valley is scored by Norman county, and occurred at Fertile on Prof. Dunton's "farm." The work was done in the afternoon, and the men finished up the day with the old fashioned game of quoits, after which they joined the ladies indoors at supper. Not a red ear of corn grew in the field.

News in Brief.

Complete reports from the eleven savings banks of the state for August and September have been received at the office of the public examiner. The number of depositors in August was 52,363, while the deposits amounted to $12,231,131. In September there were 52,745 depositors, with $12,375,000 in deposits.

Headquarters of the tenth postal division of the railway mail service have been established in Minneapolis. George Bradford, one of the clerks of the division, and his assistant, George D. Flynn, will be in charge of the office, which is located in the federal building. The new office will co-operate with the chief clerk at Chicago, and will have 120 railway clerks under its direction.

The Soldiers' Home appropriation amounting to $25,011, was received by the state auditor from the Washington government.

The general missionary convention of the Church of the Disciples of Christ will be held in Minneapolis next year. This decision was reached at the convention in Cincinnati.

Acting under an order from Washington, Postmaster McGill of the St. Paul department has reduced the rural delivery route from 28 to 25 miles. The new order will accommodate 25 more families.

Probate Judge Buck of Winona committed Daisey Maud Bills, aged 10, to the state school at Owatonna. The commitment was secured through the Humane society, the girl's father neglecting to provide for her.

One of the most notable religious gatherings of the year is the annual conference of the missionaries and officers of the American Sunday School Union of the Northwestern District, which will be in the House of Hope Presbyterian church of St. Paul, Nov. 1, 2, 3, and 4.

The annaul observance of prison Sunday will occur Oct. 28. That day special religious exercises will be held in the various penal institutions of the state, and in many of the Minnesota pulpits ministers will deliver addresses, calling especial attention to the day.

Military Automobiles.

The immense advantages presented by automobiles have had a great fascination for progressive military men all over the world. Large sums have been offered for the best military automobile. Beware of Ointments for Catarrh That Contain Mercury, as mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces. Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is often ten fold to the good you can possibly derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. In buying Hall's Catarrh Cure be sure you get the genuine. It is taken internally, and made in Toledo, Ohio, by F. J. Cheney & Co. Testimonials free.

THE TURN OF LIFE.

The Most Important Period in a Woman's Existence.—Mrs. Johnson Tells How She Was Helped Over the Trying Time.

Owing to modern methods of living, not one woman in a thousand approaches this perfectly natural change without experiencing a train of very annoying, and sometimes painful symptoms.

Those dreadful hot flashes, sending the blood surging to the heart until it seems ready to burst, and the faint feeling that follows, sometimes with chills, as if the heart were going to stop for good, are only a few of the symptoms of a dangerous nervous trouble. The nerves are crying out for assistance. The cry should be heeded in time. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was prepared to meet the needs of woman's system at this trying period of her life.

The three following letters are guaranteed to be genuine and true, and still further prove what a great medicine Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is for women.

Mar. 12, 1897.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:— I have been sick for a long time. I was taken sick with flooding. All my trouble seemed to be in the womb. I ache all the time at the lower part of the womb. The doctor says the womb is covered with ulcers. I suffer with a pain on the left side of my back over the kidney. I am fifty years old and passing through the change of life. Please advise me what to do to get relief. Would like to hear from you as soon as possible."—MRS. CHARLOTTE JOHNSON, Monclova, Ohio.

Jan. 23, 1898.

"I have been taking your remedies, and think they have helped me a great deal. I had been in bed for ten weeks when I began taking your Vegetable Compound, but after using it for a short time I was able to be up around the house. The aching in the lower part of womb has left me. The most that troubles me now is the flowing. That is not so bad, but still there is a little every day. I am not discouraged yet, and shall continue with your medicine, for I believe it will cure me."—MRS. CHARLOTTE JOHNSON, Monclova, Ohio.

April 13, 1900.

"I send you this letter to publish for the benefit of others. I was sick for about nine years so that I could not do my work. For three months I could not sit up long enough to have my bed made. I had five different doctors, and all said there was no help for me. My trouble was change of life. I suffered with ulceration of the womb, pain in sides, kidney and stomach trouble, backache, headache, and dizziness I am well and strong, and feel like a new person. My recovery is a perfect surprise to everybody that knew me. I owe all to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I would not do without your medicine for anything. There is no need of women suffering so much if they would take your remedies, for they are a sure cure."—MRS. CHARLOTTE JOHNSON, Monclova, Ohio.

When one stops to think about the good Mrs. Johnson derived from Mrs. Pinkham's advice and medicine, it seems almost beyond belief; yet it is all true as stated in her three letters published above at her own request.

As a matter of positive fact Mrs. Pinkham has on file thousands of letters from women who have been safely carried through that danger period "Change of Life." Mrs. Johnson's cure is not an unusual one for Mrs. Pinkham's medicine to accomplish.

$5000 REWARD.—We have deposited with the National City Bank of Lynn, $5000, which will be paid to any person who can find that the above testimonial letters are not genuine, or were published before obtaining the writer's special permission. LYDIA E. PINKHAM MEDICINE CO.

DELANO, FRIDAY, Oct. 26, 1900.

OFFICIAL PAPER OF THE VILLAGE OF DELANO.

DELANO DIARY

—The I. O. O. F. hall will be used for Town of Franklin polling place.

—The list of electors for the village of Delano posted Tuesday contains 216 names.

—Don't vote for more than nine Presidential electors. If you do you will loose your vote for President.

—Read "Agreemen" in another column, and see what kind of a treaty Gen. Bates made with the Sultan of Sulu.

—Frank Metz was seen carrying a fine lot of ducks home yesterday. His son Otto who is hunting on the prairie shipped them home.

—O. A. Burnes has been appointed by the village council, Fire warden of the village. He will look after things belonging to that office.

—The new flouring mill of Bartlett Bros. started up on Saturday. They have a new miller from Dakota and Frank Yantos runs the engine.

—Biskeys were selling some of the finest black bass that we have seen for years, in town this week. Fishing has been better than common this summer.

—Delano Republicans have raised a very pretty pole at the corner of R. R Ave. and River Streer. They have a McKinley and Roosevelt banner and occasionally raise avery nice flag.

—Wm Ziebarth denies the Eagle's charge that he is about joining the Republicans. "Bill" says: I am too old to go back on the Declaration of Independence and the Constitution.

—The Eagle has something to say about a man found dead, in Delano, with a bottle and one of Sheriff Nugent's cards. Two cards were found. One was that of John B. Dally Republican candidate for Sheriff. We don't see how, when the whole truth is told, one John is ahead of the other on that bottle and dead man.

—The Eagle Press gang enjoyed the initiation of a new "Devil" Saturday afternoon. A little fun is not objectionable. But sometimes things are carried futher than good taste and decency permit. The "Devil" we understand was treated in a manner not approved of by respectable people. Don't be so hard next time boys.

—The Sheriff contest in Hennepin county is waxing warm. Sheriff Megaarden the republican nominee makes statments that Phillips the democratic aspirant says he can't prove. Phillips offers publicly to withdraw from the contest if Megarrden can prove his statements. William Gent, of Greenwood says Megaarden's statments are false.

—One of the liveliest foot races we have seen for a long time took place Sunday afternoon, when John Leudasher chased a big tramp out of town. The two had got into trouble some way and John says the tramp undertook to hit him with a stone, hence his lively tramp, tramp, tramp out of town.

A couple more strangers in a buggy who were said to be from Long Lake and to have been trying to help the tramp run things took their departure rather suddenly about the same time.

—The Republicans raised their flag pole and flag, and McKinley & Roosevelt streamer Saturday. A programme of reading and singing mostly by school children was carried out. Ed Farnham made the speach claiming that the flag was a "Republican flag," and would float till November 6, when it would be pulled down to ra se again on Nov. 7, to announce a Republican victory. A Swedish speaker on his way to Watertown who happened to be present, said our flag denoted liberty and the McKinley and Roosevelt banner above the flag stood for prosperity. Soon after the flag was lowered and "prosperity" placed beneath the flag.

—The mangled body of an unknown man was found near the eastern edge of town on the G. N. track at about 9 P. M. after the passenger train had gone west Saturday evening. The pieces were gathered together and placed in the depot to await the arrival of the coroner, who came Sunday afternoon. After viewing the remains and the place of accident he concluded it was unnecessary to hold an inquest, and ordered the body buried. It is supposed the man, a laborer about 30 years of age, had been at work near Waverly, and had gone down the track and was run over. A broken bottle was found at the same place ths body was picked up.

—Quite an excitement was occasioned Wednesday morning by annoucement that Marshall Merriman had during the night captured Frank Gunsoir in the act of taking goods from the warehouse of Geo. P. Schaffer. The residence of Gunsior was searched and a lot of goods found stored in the upper rooms of his residence. Nearly everything wanted could be found enough to start a country store. Many pails were among the lot, as if taken to to carry smaller drygoods, groceries and notions in. Mrs G. was also taken into custody, and the County Attorney sent for. As he was not at home his Assistant E. S. Oakley came over Frank was bound over to appear in the district court, and taken to Minneapolis to wait for December. Mrs. G was released on bail to be there too.

—Lumber has been hauled to repair the I. O. O F. building stairs.

—The automobile that passed through town few a months ago bound for the west was here again last Saturday on its return trip to the city.

—It was rather laughable to some of the audience at the City Hall Wednesday evening to hear the high tenor of the Eagle warbling a "Coon Song" at the Page Morris meeting.

—Page Morris addressed a large audience at the City Hall Wednesday evening. People were present from Buffalo, Rockford, Armstrong, Watertown, Montrose, Waverly and Cokato. He spoke for about two hours.

—Hon. Francis H. Clark, Congressional candidate in 1896, will speak at the City Hall in Delano, Friday evening, Nov. 2. This is the fourth Democratic meeting and the last but one of the campaign. Come out and hear what he has to say.

There is another on Saturday evening.

Democratic Speakers.

Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Johnson, of Lyndale, visited Delano friends Thursday.

John Lind, Cokato, Nov. 3.

Francis H. Clark, Monticello Nov. 1, Delano, Nov. 2.

T. D. O'Brien,

J. E. Nogstrom, Stockholm, 29; Montrose, 30; Rockford, 31; Otsego. Nov. 1; Clear Water, 2; South Haven, 3

Senator Baldwin, South Haven, Oct. 27.

County Politics.

A Splendid Bryan Lind Truelsen club was organized at St. Michaels a week ago Saturday evening. Alt J. Reems was elected Pres.; Mathew Jasper, Vice Pres.; John Goeb, Sec. and Treas. The President to appoint working committees. The meeting was attended by several candidates and others some of whom made addresses. W. H. Spath, H. K. Kelley, Alva G. Catlin, and Editor French being among the number. There is now about 250 members and more expected. They expect to make a good showing this year, and have all voters out to vote.

At the election four years ago many votes were thrown out because the voters marked the ballot for more candidates for Presidential electors than they should. Some marking eighteen instead of nine because "Democrat" appeared on the ballot. Unless care is taken some will lose their ballots this year by voting for nine Bryan electors and the "Social Democrat." Debs. This would throw the ballot out just as much as voting for the whole eighteen. Be careful to vote for but nine electors. Read your ticket and don't lose your vote for Bryan.

The Democratic rally held at Clearwater Tuesday evening was the largest ever held at that place, A large number of people was unable to get into the hall. Everybody listened to the hour's talk of Mr. L. G. Pendergast with much interest. D. C. Calhoun, of St. Cloud, closed the meeting with a splended speech on the Constitution and thoroughly explained how the government has been recently drifting from that sacred document, on which our grand and glorious republic was founded. He also called attention to the fact that our forefathers fought seven years to free us from certain tyrannies of England and how we had now turned round and imposed those same pressures of tyranny upon our new possessions.

A meeting at Silver Creek was held by the Democrats on Wednesday evening, L. G. Pendergast, a member of the 1st Minn. Vols., who was in 22 engagements in the civil war held the crowd in strict attention while he dealt them some solid facts. He compared Lincoln's platform with that of the Republicans of today. They were considerably different. Several candedates were present at the meeting.

The Howard Lake Herald has about a column on "That Truelsen Loan". It will do to read. But then Mr Truelsen told us when he was here "I borrowed money from the Police Relief fund. I owe a part of it yet, I expect to pay it. I didn't know it was a crime to be poor."

Said applicant prays that such license be granted to him pursuant to the ordinances of such Village of Delano and the statutes of the state of Minnesota, in such cases made and provided.

The hearing of the above application will be held in the council room, at the City Hall, on Monday, Nov. 5, 1900, at 8:30 p. m

L. M. MAXFIELD, Village Recorder.

Dated at Delano, Oct 24, 1900.

PARIS, Oct. 22.—Minister Delcasse had a long and important interview with the Russian ambassador, and it is reported that the first answer of Russia to England will be direct intervention in the Transvaal question and a cordial reception of the demands of Kruger.

Already a diplomatic dispatch from Berne announces that the Swiss government, backed by Russia, will propose arbitration by the powers in the Transvaal.

Constitutional Amendments.

The proposed amendment to the constitution is to allow the permanent State school and university funds loaned to any county, school district, city, town of village of the State, whose entire bounded indebtedness will not then exceed 15 per cent of the assessed valuation of the taxable real property. As the law now is the indebtedness must not exceed 7 per cent of the taxable value.

The Right Congressman.

We elect a member of congress to oppose laws which are against our interest. Every boby knows that Page Morris worked and voted for a lumber tax of $2. per 1000 feet and this tax takes every year at least $4000 out of the pockets of the taxpayers of Delano and Franklin township. A tax may be levied to fill the treasury. But as this tax did not bring money to any amount into it, it was leviec to raise the lumber price. That tale that it is for the benefit of the American laborer is a snare, because labor is free to foreign competition and in this case the rise in lumber curtailed building houses, barns etc. It might have been necessary to protect the lumber industry against foreign competition. But our saw millers have the advantage to flort their logs by the rivers direct to the saw mills and these are located in the distributing centers, so that argument falls flat too. There is one thing left which could be used in favor of this obnoxious tax and that is that our lumber kings pay more for the logs than Canadians do. But they are too shrewd and have so much their own way in the lumber camps that this can not be expected. They have a wide conscience. The cheapest way to get lumber is to steal it. In 1892 some of our lumber kings, backers of all those members who voted in Congress for the tax, stole for $88,269.94, timber from one reservation. We happened te get at that time a democratic administration. They were prosecuted and after eight years of legal wrangling, they were at last condemned. They did not go to the penitentiary and never will. They try to compromise and offer $25.000 to be let out, which sum does not cover the interest on an eight years steal of $88,259. With all that if was national property they stole.

I can undderstand why a government official talks prosperity because the reckless extravagance of this administration filled his pockets. I can understand that a laborer accepts the opinions of the factory owner as his own because he may expect higher wages out of the inordinate profits the owner gets. But I can not understand why a farmer should vote for a member of congress who did put this unnecessary lumber tax on his back and intends to keep it there. His prosperity rests on his own labor and on God's protection and it is in his interest to drop Morris and elect Truelsen. Surely these lumber kings do not need it and they do not deserve that we elect their servant as our member of congress.

OTTO MARK.

Maple Plain.

Farmers are busy plowing, husking corn and digging potatoes.

The man who bought E. Hosington's farm has moved in.

Quite a number from our town went to Delano last night to hear Page Morris, Congressman from 6th Congressional Dist. speak.

There will be Republican rally at School Hall, Maple Plain next Tuesday evening. All backsliders are invited to attend.

There is and has been a good deal of sickness in our town of late.

Roy Wright and his two boys are on the sick list; but at last account they were improving.

J. D. Walsh has ben sent to the insane asylum. His wife has been taken to the asylum about two months ago.

The Democratic rally at Maple Plain last Saturday evening was quite well attended. The speaking was good the only trouble there was too many of them Two for one evening is enongh.

BORN: To Mr. and Mrs. O. R. McGary on last Sunday evening, a boy. All parties doing doing well.

S. A. Lentz is passing around the cigars on account of the arrival of another heir. They do say prosperity is here.

We farmers are getting most too much rain for domestic use.

Some of our farmers have been doing their threshing this week.

Agreement.

Between Brigader General John C. Bates representing the United States, of one part; and his Highness, the Sultan of Jolo, the Dato Rajah Muda, the Dato Attiko, the Dato Calbi, and the Dato Joakanain, of the other part; it being understood that this agreement will be in full force only when approved by the Governor General of the Philippine Islands and confirmed by the President of the United States, and will be subject to future modifications by the mutual consent of the parties in interest.

ARTICLE I. The sovereignty of the United States over the whole Archipelago of Jolo, and its dependencies, is declared and acknowledged.

ARTICLE II. The United States flag will be used in the Archipelago of Jolo, and its dependencies on land and sea.

ARTICLE III. The rights and dignities of his Highness, the Sultan and his Datos. shall be fully respected; the Moras shall not be interfered with on account of their religion, all their religious customs shall be respected; and no one shall be persecuted on account of his religion.

ARTICLE IV. While the United States may occupy and control such points in the Archipelego of Jolo as public interests seem to demand, encroachment will not be made upon the lands immediately about the residence of his Highness the Sultan, unless military necessity requires such occupation in case of war with a foreign power: and where the property of individuals is taken due compensation will be made in each case.

Any person can purchase land in the Archepelago of Jolo and hold the same by obtaining the consent of the Sultan, and coming to a satisfactory agreement with the owner of the land: and such purchase shall immediately be registered in the proper offices of the United States Government.

ARTICLE V. All trade in the domestic products of the Archepelago of Jolo, when carried on with the Sultan and any part of the Philippine Islands, and when under the American flag, shall be free, unlimited and undutiable.

ARTICLE VI. The Sultan of Jolo shall be allowed to communicate direct with the Governor General of the Philippine Islands in making complaint against the Comander General of Jolo or against any naval commander.

ARTICLE VII. The introduction of fire arms and war material is forbidden, except under specific authority of the Governor General of the Philipine Islands

ARTICLE VIII. Piracy must be suppressed and the Sultan of his Datos agree to heartily co operate with the United States authorities to that end, and to make every possible effort to arrest and bring to justice all persons engaged in piracy.

ARTICLE IX. Where crimes and offenses are committed by Moros against Moros, the government of the Sultan will bring to trial and punishment, the criminals and offenders, who will be delivered to the goverument of the Sultain by the United States authorties if in their possession. In all other cases persons charged with crimes or offenses will be delivered to the United States authorities for trial and punishment.

ARTICLE X Any slave in the Archepalego of Jolo, shall have the right to purchase freedom by paying to the master the usual market value.

ARTICLE XI. In cases of any trouble with subjects of the Sultan. The American authorities in the Islands will be instructed to make carefvl investigation before resorting to harsh measurers, as in most cases serious trouble can thus be avoided.

ARTICLE XII. At present, Americans or foreigners wishing to go into this country should state their wishes to the Moro authorities and ask for an escort, but it is hoped that this will become unnecessary as we know each other better.

ARTICLE XIII. The United States will give full protection to the Sultan and his subjects in case any foreign nation should attempt to impose upon them.

ARTICLE XIV. The United States will not sell the Island of Jolo, or any other Island of the Jolo Archepelago to any foreign nation without the consent of the Sultan of Jolo.

ARTICLE XV. The United States government will pay the following monthly salaries:

	Mexican Dollars.
To the Sultan	$250.00
To Dato Rajah Muda	75.00

War Department,
Washington.
July 3 1900.

Dear Sirs:—

By the direction of the Secretary of War, I send you herewith a typewriten copy of the agreement between the United States, through General Bates, and the Zulu Archepelago, as requested in your letter of the 29th of June, just received.

Very truly yours,
W. S. Coursey,
Private Secretary.

I copied the foregoing from the typewriten copy sent out from the Secretary of War's office to a Republican Congressman of Wisconsin.—Nibs.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Regular Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, D. C. Oct. 19, 1900.

Republicans, from Mr. McKinley down, have made this a campaign of misrepresentation from the start. Mr. McKinley himself started the false pretense that the war taxes would be repealed at the coming session of Congress, and the promise has been reiterated and reiterated by republican speakers and writers in all sections of the country. The war taxes will not be repealed by the present Congress, unless the election of Mr. Bryan incites the republicans to do so with the hope of embarrassing his administration, for the very simple reason that the money they produce is necessary to meet the expenses of the McKinley policy of imperialism. This is well known to every prominent official of the Treasury Department, although it would be as much as his place was worth for any one of them to publicly say so. But they don't have to say anything, the figures tell the tale. The official figures show that the total expenditures of the government for the last year amounted to $168,099,828 00, and the total receipts to $171,271,451.71. Subtract one from the other and you have the "immense surplus" about which republicans are so fond of talking. There will be no repeal of war taxes, but there will be a reduction in the tax on beer, the brewers having bought a promise to that effect with heavy campaign contributions. Still republican speakers will go on promising their hearers that the war taxes will be repealed. They go on the theory that a vote obtained by false pretenses counts for just as much as one bought for cash, and is cheaper.

Echoes of the big Bryan meeting held in Madison Square Gardens, in New York City, will reach the remotest section of the country, and the enthusiam there aroused will spread until it takes on the qualities of a democratic tidal wave, which may be great enough to sweep the trust-ridden administration out of power, or may just fall short of that much to be desired accomplishment. No man can say in advance what the result of it will be, but let it be what it will, it is admitted, even by the McKinleyites, that no such outpouring of the masses as that which honored Mr. Bryan has ever before turned out in that city to hear any candidate; and old campaigners who were there, declare that they were astonished at the intensity and the amount of enthusium aroused by Bryan and the other speakers. It was a revelation to New Yorkers and it opened the eyes of many who have heretofore refused to believe that Bryan and Stevenson had a chance to carry the State of New York. One enthusiastic Washington democrat who attended the big meeting said: "That meeting was worth a million democratic votes. It would have been an absolute impossibility in that town during the campaign of 1896."

Why Mr. McKinley keeps an American minister at Pekin when he invariably turns down his advice and recommendations and acts in accordance with what the Chinese Minister to the U. S. says, is one of those questions which a whole bunch of Americans would like to have satisfactorily answerd. It bobbed up again this week, when Minister Conger sent a dispatch warning Secretary Hay that the Chinese government was not "toting fair". After that dispatch was received the Chinese minister, in violation of all diplomatic usage, was allowed to have a personal interview with McKinley, in order that he might present a dispatch from the Chinese Emperor to the would be American Emperor, thanking him for all he had done for the Chinese government, while members of that government were inciting the murder of Americans and other foreigners in China, and Mr. McKinley dropped the political work in which he is now exclusively engaged for a whole hour to swallow chunks of taffy presented by the wily Chinaman.

In as much as it has been well known in Washington that there has been no love lost between Mr. McKinley and ex-Senator Quay, who was kept out of his seat in the Senate by Boss Hanna, there was much curiosity aroused when Quay called at the White House and had an hour's private talk with Mr. McKinley. It has leaked out that Quay sought to make a dicker whereby the administration's influence would be used to help him in his fight to control the Pennsylvania legislature and be returned to the Senate, and that Mr. McKinley refused to help him, on the ground that he had troubles enough of his own just now without assuming those of Quay. It is said that Quay left in a pet, and made threats of getting even.

The tip has been passed in the McKinley inner circle that Hanna's agents have got the thing all fixed and that a majority of the electoral college is to be secured by the same methods that were successful four years ago the wholesale use of money. As a consequence, the republicans have exchanged their fight for confidence. Democratic advices do not coincide with that tip. Hanna,s agents are plentifully supplied with cash in all the doubtful states and are trying hard but they haven't got things fixed yet, and they won't get them fixed, if vigilance on the part of democratic leaders can prevent. The democrats know the game that the republicans are trying to play, and hope to spring some surprises on the McKinleyites before it is ended.

Entered as Second-Class Mail Matter at the Post Office in Delano, Minn

To DEMOCRATS who attended the Convention four years ago when Hon. Daniel W. Lawler and a couple of associates were voted out of the Convention, his open letter to Mr. Wells is a very flat affair. If Mr. L. is not a Democrat any longer why didn't he follow the Hon. Michael Doran over into the McKinley ranks and not be standing out in the cold shivering so?

Better get in Dan somewhere your oratical fragrance is being terribly wasted on the desert air in your present predicament.

REPUBLICANS are howling for "dear money;" money good the world over," "a gold basis" but they are seeking to make money dearer than that. They want money made on bonds, they say interest is cheap, about 2 per cent, that people don't feel it. We must sell bonds in order that National banks can be started. A National bank must deposit with the Government, bonds before it can be opened up for business. Another bank to be started means more bonds. How long will interest be 2 per cent when the country is full of such banks?

W. D. WASHBURN jr. made a speech in Minneapolis lately which Republicans are circulating as campaign literature. His speech is some what contradictory. He admits that everyone recognizes Bryan,s personal life as "pure and clean." then goes on to argue what a dangerous man he is.

Mr. Washburn just about gives up his case though when he says: "Despite Mr. Bryan and the book, men, who support him in the East, the great American people, three quarters of whom now live west of the Alleghanies, have placed their hand upon the plow and they propose to plow the Filipino furrow to the finish." Everybody knows most of the western people were for Bryan four years ago and if the East has joined them that settles who will be President.

A Republican's Conclusion.

One of Delano's business men who has been a Republican all his life and is still a Republican finds it impossible to reconcile the actions of the Republican party of today, with the Republican party of Lincoln, Grant, Garfield, Blaine and others, and concludes to cast his ballot for Democratic principles this year, claiming they are the true friends of the Republics. The following letter speaks volumes for freedom:

"The Democrats are scouring pitifully for someone who will support them with money with which to stay the triumphant march of good government and financial honesty. But Webster Davis won't cough up any of Oom Paul's contribution and Oom Paul doesn't seem willing to supply any more."—Delano Eagle.

Now Mr. Webster Davis has branded any one that asserts that he received one cent or more from Paul Kruger as an infamous liar. The Johnny Bull editor of the Delano Eagle is no exception to this. This is what a life-long Republican has to say; a Republican that was born in a better Republic that our present so called Republican administration is. This so called Republican administration is working in favor of one of the biggest robber nations on earth; and it is the biggest enemy this county has ever had; and still this McKinley administration is working for Great Britain against two sister republics. This is enough to make any true Republican's blood boil. It is a disgrace and a shame to any government that claims to be Republican.

A Republican that is going to vote the way he thinks.

JOHN CONZET.

ARE THEY DONE WITH SENATOR NELSON.

Rebublican Resolution.

RESOLVED: That we commend the course of Senator C. K. Davis the senior senator from this state, and earnestly urge that the nominees of this Senatorial Convention give him their undivided support, if elected to again return him to the United States senate at the close of present term.

The above was passed at Buffalo at the convention that nominated Senator Chilton. Did they not know that Senator Nelson was a United States Senator also?

This week's Eagle advises Republican voters who are interested in seeing Senator C. K. Davis returned to the United States Senate to vote for Swanson and Alley. Doesn't the Eagle know thae Senator Nelson is a candidate?

We might consider either neglect to mention Senator Nelson as an oversight. But when it comes to repeated oversights, taken with Page Morris' stand on Porto Rico, and the continual scolding the Scandinavians are subjected to because they don't wish to vote for everything on the Republican ticket it is fair to ask, is it a systematic effort to sidetrack Senator Nelson?

Relegation of Republics.

The St. Paul Dispatch of Oct. 21, has an article headed "Germany's Coaling Station." wherein it argues at length that "If it be true that the administration has entered protest against Germany acquiring a coaling station in Brazil, Nicaragua or any other South American State because it would be in contravention of the Monroe doctrine the sooner it recedes the better." The article claims it would be a queer position for a nation to take that purposes carrying civilization and good government to the Filipinos.

This is the administration plan. Four years ago the papers and magazines were filled with pictures and flattering articles of Napoleon and many of them were about "Napoleon" McKinley. The "Napoleon of finace" etc, etc. Since then we have seen our constitution disregarded; our Declaration of Independence cast aside; the emancipation proclamation tramped upon; our army quadrupled; a deaf ear turned to struggling Republic's efforts to save themselves from the crushing heel of tryanny; our flag carried where but a few months previous our President proclaimed it would be criminal aggression" to carry it. A war carried on without having been declared by Congress, and now comes the St. Paul Dispatch a leading Republican paper and wants the administration to recede from its correct, proper stand taken under the Monroe doctrine, and allow the nations of Europe to establish "coaling stations" in South American Republics. Are we then to expect next that the United States will establish "coaling stations" in each country of Europe? Are we to disregard the Monroe Doctrine so that we can send armies and navies into the seaports of every country, and establish "coaling stations?" This is one place where the American flag should not be hauled down. Our sister republics should have encouragement and not be ignominiously deserted, while soldiers and sailors are transported across thousands of miles of trackless ocean to stand guard over the commercial interests of some greedy individuals or corporations who care nothing for people and the people's happiness, but want to invest their capital where it will bring the most for the least taxes, and where labor can be got for next to nothing, neither benefitting the people of the foreign islands those of our own land, but simply increasing their own gains.

Martin E. Tew's Lecture.

The Argus surely don't get many exchanges: or don't read them, and don't credit the stories of returned volunteers from the Philippines when it puts out such shots as the following concerning one who was in Luzon and knows what he is talking about.

Lieutenant Martin E. Tew, who delivered a lecture in this city some time ago, the subject of which was "The Truth About the Philippines," is still at large and making speeches around the state. The kind of truth he gives out may be all right but it fails to get him many flattering press notices.—Willmar Argus.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Regular Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, D. C. Oct. 26, 1900.

When old Zach Chandler made Hayes a possibility by claiming his election after the returns showed Tilden's election, he established a precedent that has been slavishly followed by the republican managers of every national campaign since. The republicans have already re-elected McKinley, according to their claims, and the voting ten days hence will be a mere formality. The object of this bluff and bluster is so plain that he who runs may read it Once get that large portion of the public which takes no personal part in politics other than to vote to accept the idea that McKinley's election is assured, and the way will be payed to work Hanna's plans to secure the election by the corrupt use of money and any other crooked way that present itself, and those who know little or nothing about the manipulation of political machinery will be more apt to accept the result so obtained because it had been so confidectly claimed before election. "He laughs best who laughs last." The democratic managers could shatter some of the "surface indications", which the republicans are pointing out as assuring McKinley's election, but to do so they would have to show where many thousand Bryan votes are which the republican bosses are fondly counting for McKinley, and that they do not deem it good policy to do. It is the "silent vote" which they are depending upon to elect Bryan and Stevenson, and to locate that vote for the republicans would be to make trouble for the voters and to lose much of it. Just let every democrat keep his shoulder to the wheel and remember that November 6, is the day on which the President will be elected.

Bank Examiners that can detect fraudulent manipulation of bank books by crooked employes is a needed reform which has been emphasized by the news of a $700,000 defalcation of an employe of the First Nation Bank of New York City. Secretary Gage inclined to treat the matter rather lightly, when asked why the bank examiners employed at high salaries by his department had not discovered the big defalcation in their examinations of the bank's books. He said, nonhalently, as though it were a matter of no consequence: Our examiners cannot be expected to discover an old defalcation when the bank officers themselves have not found or suspected it. The First National Bank can stand it easily, with a surplus of $6,000,000." These few words of Secretary Gage are a strong indictment of the national bank system, as it is now run. If the bank examiners "cannot be expected" to find crookedness until it is pointed out to them by the bank officers, pray how do they earn their salaries? If the people elect Mr. Bryan President, he will get a Secretary of the Treasury who will expect more of the bank examiners and will see to it that they are men with knowlege and skill enough to meet his expectations. This particular bank has been such a pet of republican Secretarys of the Treasury, since 1877, when it jumped into prominence as one of the most successful New York banks, through favors given it by the Treasury Department, that the bank examiners may have been afraid to look too closely into its books.

The government service is in a crippled condition in all the departments and is likely to remain so until after the election, owing to the absence of nearly all of the responsible officials, who are in the field doing political work of some kind, or putting up a bluff that they are, while their salaries are going right along. A man filling a scientific position in the Department of Agriculture thus voiced his disgufft "This is our busy time, and we need our full force. The service is being neglected by the very men, and by their orders, who prate about giving the people a business like administration."

Campaign Closes.

MAPLE PLAIN, Oct, 30. 1900.

As the sun of the 19th Century is sinking in the west the nights are being made hideous by the tont of the campaign horn, and the ward politician is in his imagination, making votes by the score. Campaigners are working hard day and night getting forces in the field ready for action. Mark Hanna is working the fad about the poor working man's full dinner pail, in which he saw five loaves and two fishes and sauce to match. All this he had in vision while he slumbered and slept. Mark and Teddy say we must expand grow rich and be a great power and this at a great sacrifice of life and money.

The Republican party is out with a revised version of the constitution and declaration of independence. Where the constitution say the President of the United States shall be commander in cheif of the army and navy of the United States, it does not mean that, when it comes to the army canteen.

In the Philippine Islands Article 13. in the amendment to the constitution does not mean, in the revised version; "Neither slavery nor involuntary servitude except as a punishment for crime whereof the party shall have been duly convicted, shall exist within the United States, or any place SUBJECT TO THEIR JURISDICTION.

How about the Island of Sulu with its Sultan, with slaves and a plurality of wives. By Gen. Bates treaty the American flag floats over the Island and this government pays its head officials. Come to the front now you who were so anxious last winter to get Representative Roberts out of Congress on account of plurality of wives.

We cast the yoke of bondage off the necks of 4,000, slaves more than 30 years ago, and the revised version don't mean, "To secure their rights, governments are instituted among men deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed. Is this Filipino war by right and title; or is it by subjugation and conquest? Future history will answer the question. Our army has been quadrupled in two years past, and yet they tell us there is no danger of militarism or imperialism. Rome was once the centre of civil and ecclesiasitical power, while a republic becme a world power, and history tells what became of her. Some say we have out grown our constitution.

Some administration papers are telling how much more farmers are getting for produce now than a year ago, some make it 40 per cent to a 100 per cent. We can not call to mind one article that is bringing 40 per cent more; wool and flax seed being the highest we can now think of. But farmers are paying more for lumber, lath, nails, fence wire, sugar, tea, coffee and many other articles, some double the prices of a year ago. Weare also paying internal revenue on many things besides whisky, tobbacco and oleomargorine and but for this present administration would have been obliged to issue bonds long ago. Now if Bryan is elected no doubt the coming session of Congress will repeal a lot of internal revenue laws in order to compel Bryan to issue bonds to pay the running expenses of the government.

Democrats stand for reform, equal rights to all and special privileges to none; for a double standard money 16 to 1. free coinage of gold and silver on a parity we had it for nearly 100 years while people prospered and were happy.

Vote Right.

Get a sample ballot and take it into the booth with you if you are afraid you will miss some of the names you wish to place a cross after. Be sure to put a cross after each of the nine Bryan electors. Then look out for John Lind and the rest of the state ticket not neglecting the Railroad commissioners, P. M. Randall T. J. Knox, and S. M. Owen of the Farm, Stock and Home.

Then be sure to put a plain cross after Henry Truelsen for Congress. The corporations have no time for such a Congressman but the people do. They want a man who will look after their interests as well as after corporation interests. They want a Congressman who will not vote for tariff between countries over which the United States flag floats.

COUNTY TICKET.

For Auditor, Alva G. Catlin was born in Delano, attended school there enlisted to free the Cubans, served with the 13th Minn. in the Philippines; is well know over the county, is running against what has been pronounced the hardest man on the other ticket to beat, has made an active campaign under difficulties and would like to reduce that big majority to about 9 on the other side.

For Treasurer John Nygren has for years been a wheat buyer at Cokato, established the first independent farmers elevator in the county, and is calculated to handle the funds satisfactorily.

For Sheriff John C. Nugent has held the office for over a quarter of a century most of the time and knows all about the businesss. as well as anybody in the state.

For Register of Deeds, A. E. Trogen an uncommonly well qualified man for the position. Like some other Democrats he is not wealthy and could make good use of the salary, and give satisfaction in return.

For Judge of Probate nobody doubts the ability of W. H. Cutting to fill the office and attend promptly to the duties devolving upon him.

For County Attorney W. H. Spath has put up a winning campaign. He will doubtless surprise people in some perecincts with his ability as a vote getter. He is an attorney of several years pratice, an old soldier of the rebellion, and can take care of the office when he gets it.

Alfred Newman.

For Clerk of Court. Alfred Newman was born in Wright County graduated at Gustavus Adlophus College is teacher in the Cokato schools. He can attend to the business of Clerk of Court in an obliging and business like manner.

A. P. Ritchie ran for Superentendent of Schools four year ago and was highly recommended at that time by Pres. Bridgman of Han line University as being qualified. He has been teaching and preparing himself better ever since and is now able to transact the business of that office. He is teaching at Cokato and made to get out much but is well known over the county having been a candidate twice before.

For Surveyor H. T. Moland is well known over the county having served in the capacity before.

For Coroner. Dr. G. W. Dalquist is a practicing physician at Cokato and able to look after the office satisfactorely

County Commissioners,

1st Dist. P. B. O'Loughlin is a good man. He will look after county business carefully.

3rd Dist. Charles Bugbee has had experience. He is well known and is making a strong run.

Lying about Truelsen.

The following letter has been sent out from Congressional Head Quarters. It is rather pointed and shows how people at Duluth feel about Truelsen:

DULUTH, Minn. Oct. 27, 1900,

Dear Sir:

Reports having reached Duluth that a few disreputables politicians have been telling lies about Mr. Truelsen away from home where he could not meet them in time has so thoroughly disgusted the people of Duluth that sixty-five business and professional men, Republicans and Democrats alike, have offered their services to the Congressional Committee, and will give their time and pay their own expenses from now until election day, and go wherever sent.

They don't like dirty politics and don,t propose to have a man that has saved the city a million dollars slandered without a most emphatic denial; and while papers and public speakers, and society leaders are sneering at Mr. Truelsen's broken English and plain manners, they say that because he is a foreign born is no reason why he should not go to Congress, and they propose to send him there.

Very respectfully,
M. B. CULLUM.
Chairman, Cong. Com.

Mark Twain has returned to New York free from debt, having paid off all his obligations resulting from the failure of the firm of Webster & Co. five years ago. The record is a proud one and worthy to be mentioned with Sir Walter Scott's similar feat.

Bertolani, an anarchist arrested at Milan, has made a confession relative to the anarchist plots. He says that at a meeting held in Paterson, N. J., seven men were selected to assassinate monarchs and leading rulers. He adds that one of the men was to kill McKinley.

American machinery will hereafter handle the coal and iron received and shipped in the harbor of Alexandria, Egypt, with a reduction in the cost per ton from $1.50 to 50 cents or less. An expert was sent to this country to study the problem, and the result is the construction of an elevated tramway on the American plan.

According to late authorities it is a mistake to suppose that the Indian population of the United States is decreasing. It is declared to be slowly growing now that tribal wars are at an end and the red man has learned not to get into trouble with Uncle Sam. Poor Lo is becoming a self-supporting agriculturist.

Otto Schulz holds the Evanston (Ill.) championship record as a pie-eater, having eaten 5¼ pies at a single sitting, while his opponent was able only to cause 3½ pies to disappear. It is said that Schulz could have eaten more, but decided to restrain himself. Such restraint is admirable, especially when it is remembered Schulz' opponent had to pay for the pies.

The police officials of a Kansas town were made the victims of a senseless hoax when a stranger called at headquarters and related a circumstantial story of how he had been robbed of a $40 bill. Every policeman in town was furnished with a description of the alleged thief and a whole day was spent in looking for him before it dawned upon any of the sleuths that there is no such thing as a $40 bill. By that time the joker had disappeared.

Nearly 30 years ago Jonas Silverman, a farmer living near Springfield, O., was swindled out of $1,500 by sharpers while on a train near Valparaiso, Ind. The criminals escaped and ere long one of the three died. The other two drifted to the Klondike a year or two ago, became rich and have just returned to the states. They hunted up Mr. Silverman, paid him the $1,500 and gave him $1 000 more by way of interest on the forced loan.

From the outbreak of the contest with the Boers up to the end of September the actual war expenditures of the British government were $280,000,000, and the official estimate of payments still to be made—based on the declaration that the war is over—is $80,000,000 more, making a total of $360,000,000. This is nearly equal to the gross output of the South African gold mines from their discovery to the beginning of the war, a period of 15½ years.

It will be interesting to note what the result of this cane fad for women will be. On the theory probably that "Satan finds some mischief for idle hands to do" woman always has endeavored to keep hers pretty well occupied. With one she takes a half-hitch on her gown and with the other she hangs on to her purse, her handkerchief and various other things that man carries in his pocket. So how about the cane? Will she carry it in her teeth? If not, to the load of which hand will she add it?

John McDonald, a Kansas newspaper man who is touring Scotland, says in a letter to one of the papers of the Sunflower state that he recently went into a store in a little highland town and inspected the goods displayed for sale, finding among them the following American products: Corn flour, canned beef, canned peaches, canned apricots, canned pears, soap, rolled oats, washboards, churns, cheese, hams, flour, salmon, apples, forks, hoes, axes, hammers, saws, joiners' tools, braces and bits.

The London Daily Express says that a syndicate of New York and Philadelphia capitalists, including Russell Sage and Hetty Green, have decided to erect a great hotel in London for the benefit of bachelor girls. The building will be as high as the law allows, will be lighted by electricity and heated by steam, will be thoroughly modern in all its equipment, and will furnish a model home for 200 or 300 young women. But why should Americans go to England to build such hotels, when there is not a large city in the United States but what needs such a place?

The most remarkable feature in connection with the recent discoveries in Babylonia of records antedating all others by thousands of years is the fact that men were much as they are now, and lived then somewhat as they live to-day. On one tablet a jeweler gave a guarantee that an emerald set ring would not fall out for 20 years; on another a couple of farmers agree to refer the question of their boundary line to a third party for arbitration. A third bears record of the adjustment of a claim for wages, and so on, the life then being similar to the present.

DEATH AND DISASTER

Thirty Persons Reported to Have Perished in Fire in New York.

Flames Cause Explosions in Drug House and Many Buildings Are Wrecked—Property Loss Expected to Reach $1,500,000.

New York, Oct. 30.—As the result of a small fire several successive explosions of chemicals occurred in the wholesale drug house of Tarrant & Co., at Warren and Greenwich streets, Monday and blew down a dozen buildings and badly damaged a score of others.

The loss of life is not known, but from all sources of information it is gathered that there are perhaps the bodies of 30 persons in the ruins, though because of the hot debris and the slowness of moving it no body had been removed up to midnight. The disaster was one of the most terrible that has ever occurred in this city and rivals the Windsor hotel fire in its appalling results, though in loss of property it will be worse. Chief Croker, of the fire department, said that the loss is fully $1,500,000.

The action of the tremendous catastrophe was more vivid and awful than the city has seen for a long time. Buildings fell in on themselves or toppled over on others, iron girders were thrown yards away, smashing through great walls, whole structures fell into the streets on piles so that the line of thoroughfare could not be marked out, huge splinters of iron, steel and wood were flung into the streets and into the buildings clean through the walls, where they buried women and men, people walking through the streets were knocked down and dangerously injured by timbers, glass and steel, horses were thrown down, wagons, windows, store fronts and all sorts of property for blocks in every direction were wrecked and damaged. There are 35 persons reported missing and 100 men, women and children are on the list of the injured. Chief Croker said that no firemen had perished in the fire, all his men having been accounted for.

Origin of the Fire.

Of the origin of the fire no exact information is yet to be had. The flames were first seen on the third or fourth floor of the building at the northwest corner of Warren and Greenwich streets, occupied by Tarrant & Co. It is possible that the fire resulted from imperfect insulation of electric light wires, but it is the opinion of Fire Chief Croker and Commissioner Scannell that carelessness among chemicals was the cause of the fire. Although the city regulations against the storing of chemicals are of the strictest kind, Commissioner Scannell made the specific charge that Tarrant & Co. had paid no heed to the law and had placed in storage chemicals and explosives far exceeding the legal limit.

The Loss of Life.

Outside of a few who were injured in the streets, the loss of life by the fire and explosion must have occurred in the Tarrant building mainly, and possibly in the other buildings destroyed by the fire. The number of persons in the Tarrant building was estimated to be in the neighborhood of 50. Secretary Allen, of the company, said that there were 45 employes, and he thought all got out with the exception of one. The only person known to have been killed up to eight o'clock Monday night was a man who died in one of the hospitals from the result of an injury received in the street.

FLOODS IN WISCONSIN.

Hundreds Driven from Their Homes—Railways Suffer Severely—Other Serious Damage Caused.

La Crosse, Wis., Oct. 29.—Great damage has been caused by heavy rains. Enormous loss has been suffered by railroads, business men and farmers, and hundreds are without homes. It is impossible to estimate the damage, as many towns are without communication and no facts can be obtained. The railroads running into this city have suffered great damage. The trains from all directions have been tied up. The worst damage is reported on the Milwaukee road.

Alvord Arrested.

Boston, Oct. 30.—Cornelius L. Alvord, Jr., the absconding note teller of the First national bank in New York city, who is charged with stealing $700,000 from the bank, was arrested here Monday afternoon by Chief Inspector William B. Watts, of this city, and Detective Armstrong, of New York, in an ordinary lodging house. When asked what he had done with the money, he said: "Well, $700,000 is a whole lot of money, but it goes easy." In referring to horse races he said he had backed horses, but never on race tracks, and had owned fast horses himself.

Stands by a Former Utterance.

Princeton, N. J., Oct. 30.—Ex-President Cleveland has sent a letter to Hon. Don M. Dickinson in which he says his present political attitude is outlined in an address to the Reform club dinner in New York in April, 1897. In this speech Mr. Cleveland condemned the course of those who were sowing the seeds of discontent and cultivating a growth of sectional and class suspicion and distrust. He also regretted to see the remedy for supposed financial ills proposed in the free coinage of silver with a depreciated currency and cheap money.

A Valuable Nugget.

New York, Oct. 26.—The biggest nugget of gold ever received at the assay office in Wall street, according to Superintendent Mason, arrived Thursday from a mining company in British Columbia. It was consigned to the New York agents of the Bank of Montreal. The nugget contained a fraction over 753 pounds of the solid yellow metal, and is valued at $154,000.

Sad Fate of an Aged Lady.

Anoka, Minn., Oct. 29.—Mrs. C. Kohler, aged 72, was killed by an angry bull while crossing the yard in which the animal was confined. It had been dehorned, but attacked the aged woman with its hoofs, crushing in her face, breaking her jaws and inflicting internal injuries from which she died before medical assistance could arrive.

STRIKE CALLED OFF.

Men Are Officially Ordered to Return to the Mines—News Causes Great Joy.

Hazleton, Pa., Oct. 26.—The mine workers' strike has been declared off against all companies which have complied with the strikers' demands, and the strike will be continued against those companies which have not granted the Scranton convention's demand. The strikers will return to work Monday at the places where the tie-up is ended.

There was much rejoicing here when the announcement was made that the coal strike was at an end in so far as concerned the collieries where the conditions demanded by the miners had been complied with. The news spread quickly and soon telegrams began to arrive at headquarters. Most of them were from local union officials congratulating President Mitchell on the successful ending of the contest.

Hazleton, Pa., Oct. 30.—Operations were resumed Monday morning at a majority of the collieries in the Hazleton district and they will be continued in full blast for the next two months. The strike is still on at the mines of the Lehigh & Wilkesbarre Coal company located at Audenried, Honey Brook and Green Mountain. One of the officials of the company said Monday morning that the company had informed the men that it would abolish the sliding scale and agree to pay the ten per cent. increase until April 1 and they did not know why they refused to report. The mine workers claim that they want a written guarantee in this respect.

Scranton, Pa., Oct. 30.—Over 5,000 mine employes in the Lackawanna valley refused to return to work Monday morning because the companies for which they had mined coal failed to comply with the terms of the miners' convention.

Shamokin, Pa., Oct. 30.—When the colliery whistles blew Monday morning 15,000 men and boys between Trevorton, this place and Mount Carmel reported for work. The only collieries idle are Henry Clay, Excelsior and Corbin. They will be in operation in a few days.

A CALL TO GIVE THANKS.

President McKinley Issues His Annual Thanksgiving Day Proclamation to the Nation.

Washington, Oct. 30.—The state department Monday issued the following:

"By the President of the United States of America.—A proclamation.—It has pleased Almighty God to bring our nation in safety and honor through another year. The works of religion and charity have everywhere been manifest. Our country through all its extent has been blessed with abundant harvests. Labor and the great industries of the people have prospered beyond all precedent. Our commerce has spread over the world. Our power and influence in the cause of freedom and enlightenment have extended over distant seas and lands. The lives of our official representatives and many of our people in China have been marvelously preserved. We have been generally exempt from pestilence and other great calamities and even the tragic visitation which overwhelmed the city of Galveston made evident the sentiments of sympathy and Christian charity by virtue of which we are one united people.

"Now, therefore, I, William McKinley, president of the United States, do hereby appoint and set apart Thursday, the 29th of November next, to be observed by all the people of the United States, at home or abroad, as a day of thanksgiving and praise to Him who holds the nations in the hollow of His hand. I recommend that they gather in their several places of worship and devoutly give Him thanks for the prosperity wherewith He has endowed us, for seed-time and harvest, for the valor, devotion and humanity of our armies and navies, and for all His benefits to us as individuals and as a nation, and that they humbly pray for the continuance of His divine favor, for concord and amity with other nations, and for righteousness and peace in all our ways.

"In witness whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the United States to be affixed.

"Done at the city of Washington, this 29th day of October, in the year of Our Lord one thousand nine hundred, and of the independence of the United States the one hundred and twenty-fifth.

"WILLIAM M'KINLEY.

"By the President: John Hay, Secretary of State."

VICTIMS OF AN EARTHQUAKE.

Fifteen Persons Killed at Caracas, Venezuela—President Castro Is Injured.

Caracas, Venezuela, Oct. 30.—At 1:46 a. m. Monday Caracas was visited by a severe earthquake. Fifteen persons were killed and many others injured. Great damage was done to buildings, including the Pantheon and the churches. The United States legation was badly damaged, but all the occupants escaped unhurt. President Castro, who leaped from a balcony on the second floor of the government house, had one of his legs broken.

Sues a Senator.

Washington, Oct. 27.—A suit for $50,000 damages for breach of promise against United States Senator William V. Sullivan, of Mississippi, was filed in the District of Columbia supreme court Friday afternoon by Mai Lucy Leeton, of Oxford, Miss. The plaintiff in her affidavit alleges that she, "an unmarried woman, at the request of the defendant, undertook and promised to marry him, and the defendant undertook and promised to marry the plaintiff, which he without cause or right has refused to do."

Wisconsin Bank Robbed.

La Crosse, Wis., Oct. 29.—One of the most daring bank robberies in the history of the state occurred early Saturday morning at Prairie du Sac, a small town near Baraboo, Wis. The Prairie du Sac bank, at that place, was entered, the safe blown open by means of dynamite and its contents looted. The robbers secured $1,500 in silver and about 300 in gold coin, besides several valuable checks. In all about $3,000 was stolen.

Transvaal Annexed.

Pretoria, Oct. 27.—The Transvaal was on Friday proclaimed a part of the British empire, the proclamation being attended with impressive ceremonies. The royal standard was hoisted in the main square of the city, the grenadiers presented arms, massed bands played the national anthem, Sir Alfred Milner read the proclamation and 6,200 troops, representing Great Britain and her colonies, marched past.

TO RESTORE PEACE.

Minister Conger Ordered to Begin Negotiations at Once—Chinese Officials Suicide.

Washington, Oct. 26.—Minister Conger has been authorized by his government to begin negotiations at once with the Chinese envoys on the basis of the points in the German and French notes upon which all of the powers are agreed. Upon these points where divergence of views has been found to exist, the governments of the powers themselves will negotiate with a view to reaching a further understanding. It is understood that the ministerial representatives at Peking of the other powers have similar instructions, but whether they have or not, Mr. Conger is not to be restrained.

Washington, Oct. 26.—The state department has received notice from the British government of the terms of the arrangement reached between Great Britain and Germany as to China. This is similar at all points to the copy furnished by the German government through Count de Quadt several days ago. The state department now will prepare its answer, which, as already indicated in these dispatches, will deal with the points likely to be acceptable to the other governments, leaving the third paragraph for further consideration.

Washington, Oct. 27.—The Chinese minister has received a dispatch stating that Kang-Yi, a member of the cabinet with Yung-Lu and one of the intense anti-foreign leaders, whose punishment was demanded by the powers, died of illness on the 18th inst., also that Yu-Hsien, the late governor of Shansi, who is said to have been responsible for the death of many missionaries, has committed suicide by swallowing gold leaf. Minister Wu regards this act as the result of the disfavor which the high officials have received from the throne.

Gov. Yu's method of suicide, by swallowing gold leaf, is peculiar to China. It is a means by which high personages take their life, the gold leaf being representative of their high station. The leaf forms a ball in the canals of the body and brings death from suffocation.

London, Oct. 29.—Dr. Morrison, wiring to the Times from Peking, under date of October 26, says: The foreign ministers in conference decided to add the names of Prince Yi and Ying Nien to those of the seven officials whose execution France has demanded.

A SAD DISASTER.

A Boat Capsizes on Sandusky Bay and Four Children Are Drowned.

Port Clinton, O., Oct. 29.—A quadruple drowning occurred near Plaster Bed, on Sandusky bay, eight miles east of here, Sunday afternoon. The drowned are: Douglass Stark, aged three years; George Stark, aged five years; Alfred Stark, aged eight years; Henry Stark, aged 13 years. They were the children of William Stark. Mr. Stark and the children went for a boat ride. On returning to shore the boat became fouled in a fish pound net and the oarsman could not either forge the boat ahead or go back. The children became frightened and, leaning over the side of the small craft, it capsized, resulting in the four deaths by drowning. Mr. Stark came here from Toledo three weeks ago. He then had a family of a wife and ten children. Last week Harvey, aged four, died, and the week before another child, aged three months, also died.

AN AVALANCHE.

It Sweeps Down Mount St. Elias—Caused by a Severe Earthquake—Damage to a Town.

Port Townsend, Wash., Oct. 29.—A report has reached here from Yakutat that Mount St. Elias was badly shaken by the recent earthquake that did so much damage at Kodiak. Indian trappers and hunters who were in the vicinity of the mountain have returned to Yakutat and say that the mountain was badly shattered. The shock was so severe that acres of ice broke loose near the top of the mountain and came crashing down the sides, carrying everything before it. Indians state that from where the avalanche started clear to the base of the mountain it made a track a half-mile wide where no snow or ice remains. All the trappers had not returned and some fears are entertained that some may have been overtaken in the avalanche.

The Football Games.

Chicago, Oct. 29.—Following are the scores made in the leading football games on Saturday: Pennsylvania, 41, Chicago, 0. Michigan, 12; Illinois, 0. Northwestern, 6; Beloit, 6. Wisconsin, 45; Grinnell, 0. Harvard, 17; Carlisle, 5. Princeton, 17; Brown, 5. Yale, 12; Columbia, 5. Cornell, 23; Dartmouth, 6. Purdue, 46; Rose Poly, 5. De Pauw, 5; Earlham, 0. Knox, 23; Illinois Wesleyan, 0. Minnesota, 34; North Dakota, 0. Lafayette, 16; Newark A. C., 0. Dickinson, 27; Haverford, 0. Ohio State, 17; Oberlin, 0.

A Wild Welcome.

London, Oct. 30.—Ten persons killed outright, 200 maimed and crushed, many so badly that they will die, and countless hundreds bruised, beaten, and with clothes torn to rags, are results of the wildest, maddest day London ever has seen. It is not the story of a battle, but only an incident in the English people's welcome to their returning heroes—the members of the City Imperial volunteers. Few of the returning heroes took part in the night's celebration.

A Disastrous Wreck.

St. Paul, Minn., Oct. 30.—A Helena (Mont.) special to the Dispatch says: Northern Pacific train No. 4, eastbound, was partially wrecked at De Hart, Mont., eight miles from Big Timber, at 11:15 Sunday night by the breaking of a switch rod. Seven passengers were killed and several injured.

Col. Ross Dead.

Indianapolis, Ind., Oct. 29.—Col. James R. Ross died at his home in this city, aged 59 years. He was for many years one of the most prominent militiamen of the state. He had a fine record as a soldier and was widely known in K. of P. circles.

To Mothers of Large Families.

In this workaday world few women are so placed that physical exertion is not constantly demanded of them in their daily life.

GOV. LIND'S ADMINISTRATION SHOULD STAND APPROVED

FINAL APPEAL TO THE PEOPLE.

Do You Want a Return to Bixby-Vandiver Machine Methods?

If Not, Vote to Re-Elect John Lind and the Democratic Ticket.

Do You Want A. C. Clauson for Grain Inspector Again?

If Not, Vote for Ringdal, Knox and Owen for Railroad Commissioners.

Do You Want Kenyon Again for Public Bank Examiner?

If Not, Vote for Governor Lind Nov. 6th to Succeed Himself.

OUR STATE CANDIDATES

The Entire List Appeals to All Voters Who Want the Cause of Good Government in Minnesota to Go Forward, and Not Backward.

Governor Lind in himself presents the chief question of approval of reform administration. He is making a wonderful canvass. His clear, earnest, concise exposition of national and state issues, has made him hosts of new friends wherever he has spoken and has strengthened the old ones. The people see in him more than ever the champion of their interests and of their rights, the opponent of dishonest corporations and grasping syndicates.

Thomas J. Meighen, Democratic-Peoples candidate for lieutenant governor, has also been making hosts of friends. His active and efficient work as a member of the state board of equalization in forcing certain corporations and syndicates to bear their honest share of the burden of taxation, is becoming better known and making friends for him every day.

The confidence which the laboring men have in M. E. Neary, Democratic-Peoples candidate for secretary of state, and which they have in former times expressed by electing him to positions of trust and honor in their organizations, has been growing constantly and will make him a strong candidate with the people throughout the state.

The large circle of friends which Henry C. Koerner, Democratic-Peoples candidate for state treasurer, has in every county of Minnesota, gives him an advantage such as few men possess. In every county of the state Mr. Koerner has personal friends, irrespective of party, that will stand by him and work for his election and the election of those on the state ticket with him.

The reputation which Robert C. Saunders, Democratic-Peoples candidate for attorney general, has won as an attorney in advancing the rights of the people and enforcing the laws of the state, especially in the enforcement of taxes against standing pine on exempt land grants, is appreciated by voters, irrespective of party, and makes him a tower of strength for the entire state ticket.

Among the things to which the present administration points with special pride, and which more than anything else have proven it to be the friend of the people of the state, the champion of their interests and welfare, there is none which deserves greater praise than the work of the present railroad and warehouse commission. P. M. Ringdal and T. J. Knox are members of this commission. They have reduced the freight on grain from a large section of the state to the markets. This reduction will save the farmers of Minnesota about $400,000 per year.

During six years previous to their administration, Duluth weights on grain fell short at Buffalo an average of 25 pounds per 1,000 bushels. Since they took charge, this shortage has only averaged 8 pounds per 1,000 bushels. If you want this kind of service to go on, vote for them. They are candidates for re-election, and vote also for S. M. Owen to keep them company. He is editor of The Farm, Stock and Home, and so well and so favorably known, that anything we could say would be superfluous.

GOT HIS REWARD.

It is timely to warn the people against the roorbacks and campaign lies that are likely to be sprung by the Republican managers just before election day.

Two years ago Mr. Vandiver, the present head of the Republican Press Bureau, published in the St. Paul Dispatch a bogus speech of Governor Lind, for which The Dispatch was afterwards fined and obliged to pay to Governor Lind $600 indemnity.

For this feat Tams Bixby appointed Vandiver head of the Republican Press Bureau and there is nothing so low and contemptible in the way of campaign lies and roorbacks but what the people may safely expect it from that source.

F. J. L.

COST OF WAR

Especially those of Conquest, are Ruinous to People Who Work for a Living.

From Gov. Lind's acceptance speech: The total cost of our military and naval establishment, for the past two years of war in the Philippines, was $225,000,000, not including cost of the troubles in China.

THIS SUM OF $225,000,000 IS SO IMMENSE THAT THE ORDINARY HUMAN MIND CAN HARDLY GRASP IT. LET US EXPRESS IT IN THE LEADING PRODUCTS OF THE NORTHWEST. ACCORDING TO THE LAST REPORT OF THE SECRETARY OF AGRICULTURE, THE STATES OF MINNESOTA, IOWA, WISCONSIN, NEBRASKA AND THE TWO DAKOTAS, IN THE YEAR 1899 PRODUCED:

	Bushels.	Farm value.
Minnesota—
Wheat	68,000,000	$37,000,000
Corn	31,000,000	7,000,000
Iowa—
Wheat	18,000,000	10,000,000
Corn	242,000,000	55,000,000
South Dakota—
Wheat	37,000,000	18,000,000
North Dakota—
Wheat	51,000,000	26,000,000
Wisconsin—
Wheat	11,000,000	7,000,000
Nebraska—
Wheat	20,000,000	10,000,000
Corn	224,000,000	51,000,000

THE TOTAL VALUE OF THE CROPS NAMED OF ALL THESE STATES FOR LAST YEAR WAS ONLY $221,000,000, LESS THAN WE ARE PAYING ANNUALLY FOR OUR ARMY AND NAVAL ESTABLISHMENTS UNDER THE IMPERIAL REGIME.

The entire amount expended for education in the United States for the year 1898, which is the last year for which I have authentic figures, was $189,000,000. Our average consumption of wheat is less than five bushels per capita. Assuming our population to be 75,000,000, our consumption of wheat would be 375,000,000 bushels.

AT THE AVERAGE FARM PRICE, WHICH DOES NOT EXCEED 60 CENTS, THE COST OF THE NATION'S BREAD IS $225,000,000, THE SAME SUM THAT WE PAY FOR OUR ARMY AND NAVY.

HAS NO OPPORTUNITY

Under Trusts the Young Man of Today Has Little Chance for Progress.

On this point ex-Senator Washburn used the following language in an interview in the Chicago Times-Herald, Sept. 11, 1899:

"When I was a young man—I am now sixty-eight—I had the world before me, and there was absolutely a fair field for me. Take all of our most successful business men of today and their experiences were like mine. They entered the race without a handicap, and their grit and capacity won. Now, this building up of trusts puts a stop to fair and equal opportunities for the young men of today.

"THE YOUNG MAN JUST OUT OF COLLEGE HAS NO OPENING, AS A RULE. HE CANNOT BEGIN BUSINESS ON HIS OWN ACCOUNT AGAINST ORGANIZED CAPITAL. HE MUST JOIN THE PROCESSION: HE MUST CONTENT HIMSELF WITH BEING A MERE CLERK, AND THE CHANCES ARE THAT HE WILL NEVER GET ANY FURTHER BECAUSE THERE ARE SO MANY IN HIS CLASS.

"This makes the situation a serious one, and I am sorry for the young man of today. I have studied the situation, and I am sure of what I am saying."

Don't Fail to Go to the Polls November 6th and Cast Your Ballot.

GRIP OF THE TRUSTS

What the Farm Crop Will Buy of Trust Goods.

Kerosene oil (Minnesota state test), Jan. 1, 1898, 101 gallons; Jan. 1, 1899, 70 gallons; Jan. 1, 1900, 56 gallons.

Granulated sugar, Jan. 1, 1898, 157 lbs.; Jan. 1, 1899, 118 lbs.; Jan. 1, 1900, 104 lbs.

Common salt, Jan. 1, 1898, 9½ bbls.; Jan. 1, 1899, 6½ bbls.; Jan. 1, 1900, 5 bbls.

Lumber (16 ft. 2x4), Jan., 1898, 723 feet; Jan. 1, 1899, 536 feet; Jan. 1, 1900, 418 feet.

Wire nails, Jan. 1, 1898, 4 1-3 kegs; Jan. 1, 1899, 3 1-3 kegs; Jan. 1, 1900, 1½ kegs.

Barbed wire (common painted), Jan. 1, 1898, 435 lbs.; Jan. 1, 1899, 310 lbs.; Jan. 1, 1900, 133 lbs.

The above figures are based on the wholesale prices of oil, salt, sugar, lumber, nails and barbed wire at Minneapolis. Freight, handling, and retailer's profits would probably make these articles cost, on the average, at the farm, about 20 per cent more, and the amount of each of these articles which ten bushels of wheat would buy would be correspondingly less.

TEN BUSHELS OF WHEAT, LIKE ANY OTHER PRODUCT, ARE WORTH WHAT THEY WILL BUY. THE PROSPERITY OF THE FARM IS NOT MEASURED BY THE VOLUME OF ITS PRODUCT, NOR EVEN BY THE MARKET VALUE OF THE PRODUCT, BUT BY THE NET PURCHASING POWER OF THE COMMODITIES PRODUCED.

USED THE SENATE

To Defeat the Railway Gross Earnings Bill.

While Senator E. T. Young fumes and raves at being charged with responsibility for defeat of this bill, for which his reward came duly—let him answer whether the following is not absolutely true:

"It has been the custom of the railroad companies for years to let the lower house of the legislature go and make their fight in the senate. The lower house, therefore, has been the barometer of the popular pulse, and the senate has been the index of railroad power. It was thus for three sessions on the bill to tax railroad lands, and it was the same on the measure here in question, H. F. 25, to increase the gross earnings tax rate. The sentiment of the state was shown in the vote in the house, where the bill passed by the overwhelming majority of 99 to 5. The railroad power was exerted in the senate, where a coterie of 31 and later 34 senators, of whom 29 were Republicans, formed an effective bulwark in the interests of the railway lobby and in defiance of the people.

"The Republican membership of 44 out of 63, had the power to carry this measure by a majority of 25 votes, even had every Democrat and Populist vote been cast against it. But the Democrats and Populists were three to one for the bill, while the 44 Republicans stood two to one against it and sealed its fate."

REPUBLICAN RAILWAY AND TAX RECORD.

The Republican state senate, over which the Republican lieutenant-governor presided, was notorious for two facts: (1) For the slaughter of all reform measures to which the railroad lobby was opposed; (2) for the defeat of nearly all important reforms looking to the increase of the state's revenue and greater justice of taxation.

GOV. LIND AND RAILROAD COMMISSIONERS

BIG GRAIN STEALS.

Evidence that the Elevator Companies are Cheating the Farmers.

ATTEMPTING TO DISCREDIT INSPECTION.

Rob the Farmers in Order to Attempt to Create a Sentiment that Would Place the Robbers in Control.

The bureau has positive evidence that certain line elevator companies are undergrading the wheat received from farmers on the plea that the grades have been stiffened by the State Grain Inspection.

Their object in so doing is to attempt to discredit the work of the inspection department in order, if possible, to defeat the present railroad and warehouse commission in the election and thus again secure the control of the department as they enjoyed it under Clausen. Besides, it pays them to do this, because the difference goes into their pockets.

The charges that grades have been stiffened are unqualifiedly false, as any fair-minded man can ascertain by investigation. NOT ONE SINGLE COMPLAINT HAS BEEN LODGED WITH THE CHIEF INSPECTOR WHICH WAS NOT DETERMINED IN A MANNER SATISFACTORY TO THE SHIPPER. It is therefore plain that these elevator companies are stealing from the farmers by means of falsifying the grades and after thus having perpetrated their nefarious frauds upon the farmers they unblushingly charge the state inspection with the outrage.

It becomes the duty of every farmer who takes an interest in maintaining the integrity of the inspection department to rise in arms and assist in running down the thieves. It can be done in this way. Secure the initials and number of every car shipped from your station during the past few weeks. Send them to the inspector's office and it can be shown just what grade and dockage the elevator companies received at the terminals. If the general average is higher than that received by the farmers the fraud is proven. Under the law, the inspection department does not know from which point the cars arrive nor who the consigners are, and therefore cannot begin these investigations.

Go to your elevator agent and demand a list of the car numbers with the initials and date of shipment of each car they have shipped, and send that to the chief inspector, who will promptly give you the grade each car received. This will enable you to judge whether you have been fairly treated or not at your station. If the elevator agent will not furnish it, he must have a reason for refusing. Then go to your station agent.

Publish the facts as ascertained in your local newspapers, so your brother farmers may not be induced to vote to support the gang that is robbing them.

During the month of September the records at Minneapolis show that at that point 2,333 cars were found to contain No. 1 wheat, 3019 cars No. 2 wheat, 1888 cars No. 3 wheat and 1,239 cars no grade. REPORTS FROM FARMERS ALONG THE LINES WOULD INDICATE THAT VERY LITTLE WHEAT HAS BEEN GRADED NO. 1 BY THE BUYERS ALONG THE LINES. The following letter speaks for itself.

Duluth, Oct. 25, 1900.

Hon. H. Plowman, Fergus Falls, Minn.

Dear Sir:—Several farmers in the vicinity of Underwood and some living near Battle Lake complained to me about the inspection this year, stating that buyers gave them nothing but No. 2 with a heavy dockage. The buyers claimed they did not get any better grades. I looked at some of the wheat and as it looked all right for No. 1, it struck me that something was wrong, and I obtained a list from the railroad agent at Underwood of all wheat cars shipped from that place since Oct. 1 to date and find in the inspection office that every car but one was graded No. 1. Here is the list of cars and how they were graded:

R. R.	No. of cars.	Grade	Dockage.
N. P.	17,469	No. 1	1 lb.
N. P.	36,081	No. 1	1 lb.
N. P.	3,683	No. 1	1½lb.
N. P.	8,339	No. 1	1½lb.
N. P.	13,603	No. 1	1 lb.
N. P.	35,854	No. 1	1 lb.
N. P.	10,395	No. 2	0 lb.
N. P.	30,241	No. 1	½lb.
N. P.	9,320	No. 1	1 lb.
N. P.	5,585	No. 1	1½lb.
N. P.	36,896	No. 1	1½lb.
N. P.	8,305	No. 1	1 lb.
N. P.	2,188	No. 1	1 lb.

From the above you will notice that the inspection department is all right, but the wheat buyers are misrepresenting the same, and I think they are doing this all along the line. It works against the present administration and warehouse commission, and for self-protection the matter should be shown up in its true light.

Yours respectfully,

H. P. BJORGE.

Effective means will be found to protect the farmers against the continuance of these outrageous steals, BUT MEANWHILE THERE IS DANGER THAT THE FARMERS WILL BE DECEIVED INTO TURNING THE STATE INSPECTION OVER INTO THE HANDS OF THE VERY GANG THAT IS ROBBING THEM.

V. E. L.

BIXBY-VANDIVER

The G. O. P. Machine and Its Favored Organ.

The following is the portion of Tams Bixby's "appeal" circular, calling on postmasters for money, which has so offended loyal G. O. P. papers, by giving the Minneapolis Tribune the royal preference:

"We need speakers and money to pay their expenses. We have little of either. AS A CAPABLE SUBSTITUTE FOR BOTH, WE WANT EVERYBODY TO READ THE MINNEAPOLIS TRIBUNE. They generously come to our rescue, and their offer is so liberal and patriotic that it calls for the grateful appreciation and active consideration of Republicans alike, and postmasters in particular. To get Republican results at the election the people must be reached now by honest, sensible arguments; AND THIS THE MINNEAPOLIS TRIBUNE IS DOING, AND PROPOSES TO DO, AT RATES WITHIN THE REACH OF EVERYONE."

There are scores of as "liberal and patriotic" G. O. P. papers as the Tribune. They do not much admire Bixbian methods.

A SPECIMEN ANSWER

The G. O. P. Trust Defenders Think Much of Standard Oil.

The Republican state central committee has issued a big sheet with a very proper mourning line about it, to offset the very clear statement given in the Democratic Trust Poster, contrasting conditions under trust prices and trust rule with former years before the trusts laid its grip upon everything the farmer buys.

The Republican sheet pretends to compare the purchasing power of certain products in October, 1900, with October, '96, using some of the principal farm products.

THE FIGURES GIVEN ARE IN MANY INSTANCES FALSE AND MISLEADING, BUT THE COMPARISON WHILE PRETENDING TO BE GIVEN FOR 1896 AND 1900 ONLY GOES BACK TO 1898.

It then takes up coal oil, its most familiar trust article, and pretends to show how much more coal oil could be bought in '98 with stated quantities of products more than today.

NOW THE POINT OF THE WHOLE MATTER IS THIS: THAT COAL OIL, THE REPUBLICAN FAVORED MONOPOLY, THE STANDARD OIL COMPANY, HAS A COMPLETE MONOPOLY OF THE UNITED STATES, HAVING CRUSHED ALL OF THE INDIVIDUAL REFINERS—HAS BEEN SLIGHTLY CHEAPENED, BUT THE STATEMENT FAILS TO MENTION A SINGLE OTHER ARTICLE IN WHICH A COMPARISON FAVORABLE TO THE "G. O. P." COULD BE MADE.

What the Democratic poster showed was that for a long list of articles which the farmer must pay for with his crop, the producing power of his crop now is a very large per cent less than it was in 1896, the year with which comparisons were made. This applies to articles of iron, steel, barb wire, tinware, etc., running through the whole gamut.

THUS IS THE G. O. P. REJOINDER A DISMAL FAILURE, SO DISMAL THAT THERE IS NO WONDER THAT THE SHEET WHICH IS ISSUED WAS DRESSED IN A BIG BROAD BAND OF MOURNING.

GOOD REASONS

Why You Should Vote for Ringdal, Knox and Owen for R. R. Commissioners.

P. M. Rindal and T. J. Knox are members of the present Railroad and Warehouse Commission. They have reduced the freight rate on grain from A LARGE SECTION OF THE STATE TO THE MARKETS. THIS REDUCTION WILL SAVE THE FARMERS OF MINNESOTA ABOUT $400,000 PER YEAR.

They are now equalizing the rates on merchandise so as to give the smaller cities of the state a chance to compete for business with the larger cities and thus to grow and build up local markets for farm produce.

UNDER THEIR MANAGEMENT FARMERS HAVE RECEIVED BETTER GRADES FOR THEIR GRAIN, WHILE THE SAME GRAIN HAS STOOD 2c HIGHER IN LIVERPOOL (AS COMPARED WITH FOUR LEADING COMPETITIVE GRADES FROM OTHER STATES), THAN IT DID BEFORE THEY TOOK CHARGE.

During six years before they took charge Duluth weights on grain fell short at Buffalo an average of 25 pounds per thousand bushels. Since they took charge this shortage has only averaged eight pounds per thousand bushels.

IF YOU WANT THIS KIND OF SERVICE TO GO ON, VOTE FOR THEM, AND VOTE FOR S. M. OWEN TO KEEP THEM COMPANY. HE IS THE EDITOR OF "FARM, STOCK AND HOME," AND NEEDS NO INTRODUCTION TO THE PEOPLE OF MINNESOTA.

COST OF IMPERIALISM.

Year.	Per Capita Tax.
1802 (Jefferson, president)	2.49
1830 (Jackson, president)	1.90
1860 (Buchanan, president)	2.45
1901 (estimated)	9.54
Total ordinary expenditures 1790-1844	$732,022,653
Value of tobacco crop 1896.	24,258,970
Value of tobacco crop 1898.	305,467,041
Value of wheat crop in 1899	319,545,259
Value of corn crop 1899	629,210,110
Total estimated expenditures for 1901	758,729,475

This table shows that the greed of empire will next year cost the people about $7.00 per capita more than the per capita prior to the Civil War, and $4.53 per capita more than prior to the Spanish War. It further shows that said annual rate of expenditure is nearly $100,000,000 more than the value of our corn crop, far more than the value of our wheat and cotton crops and nearly thirty times the value of our tobacco crop. It also shows that it takes more money now to run the Government one year than it took to run it from 1790 to 1844—a period of fifty-four years.

OFFICIAL FIGURES AS TO TWINE PLANT

Report of Board of Prison Managers Nails and Refutes Every Lie Sent Out By the Republican Henchmen.

Instead of the Alleged Deficit of $300,000, the Balance Sheet Shows Net Profit of $16,000 for the Year.

The Report of the Board of Prison Managers is a complete and splendid refutation of all the charges made against the state twine plant by the opposition. Glaring falsehoods fabricated out of whole cloth cannot deceive the people.

THE DETAILS OF THE REPORT.

Lack of space will not permit of giving the report in full, but we quote the following:

"The twine statement shows that Aug. 1, 1899, the prison had on hand in manufactured twine 1,820 pounds of pure manila, 91,605 pounds of mixed, 1,020 pounds of standard and 1,320 pounds of sisal, in all 95,765 pounds, worth $6,623.66. There was manufactured during the year a total of 6,119,465 pounds, and the sales were 6,027,555 pounds, leaving on hand at the inventory Aug. 1 last 40 pounds of pure manila, 64,320 pounds of standard and 123,315 pounds of sisal, a total of 187,675 pounds, worth, at 6 cents a pound (a low valuation), $11,260.50.

"In connection with the inventory for Aug. 1, 1900, it is explained that the valuation of the twine raw material on hand at that date is lower than the current market value at that time, but it was taken as a basis of estimating the profits of the institution, as it was what in the best judgment of the board was a fair price, fibre prices for some time having been raised by temporary causes, chiefly the war in the Philippines."

The inventory on hand Aug. 1, 1899, plus the expenses of the entire year up to Aug. 1, 1900, amounted to $662,039.07. The inventory of stock on hand Aug. 1, 1900, plus the amount of sales made during the year equals $678,050.58, leaving a net profit of $16,011.51 for the year.

THE TWINE TRUST AND THE COST OF FIBER.

Last spring the Fibre Trust and the Twine Trust between them had cornered the market of fibre and raised the price several cents per pound. In this connection the report says: "The raw material for the year 1900 cost $559,000, as against $314,000 for the year 1899, an excess of $245,000." And now the opposition would blame the administration for being obliged to pay $245,000 more for the raw material this year than last and the previous, when the notorious fact of it is that a Republican trust had cornered the market of fibre and had raised the price to suit itself, and in this way robbed the farmers of the state of several hundred thousand dollars, and now the trusts have sent their Republican lackies abroad into the land to tell the people that there are no trusts, and that they should be given a chance to run the country so as not to interfere with the interests of the trusts.

THE PRICE OF TWINE.

The law requires that the price of twine for the entire season shall be fixed by the 1st of March and shall not be changed at any time during the season. In this connection the report says: "The price of twine had been fixed on Feb. 8th, 1900, at 10 cents per pound for sisal, at which time the price of raw material in New York was 9 cents a pound, to which was to be added freight, cost of twine, oil (increased in price 200 per cent from the previous year), the allowance of 50 cents a day for convict labor, and all expenses of the manufacturer." Almost the entire output of the plant for the season was sold to farmers during March on orders for future delivery at 10 cents per pound, while at the same time the price of the twine made by the trust was from 1½ to 2½ cents per pound higher. During harvest time the trust did indeed cut prices and throw some inferior grades on the market at a great reduction, yet no twine of the same grade as that made by the prison twine plant was sold at a lower price than that fixed by the Prison Board.

THE TWINE TRUST, ITS PURPOSE AND ITS HENCHMEN.

The prison twine plant saves to the farmers of Minnesota thousands of dollars every year. As long as the prison plant sells twine to farmers at a reasonable price the trust will have to sell its product at the same price. If the trust could discredit the prison plant in the eyes of the people and get a pretext for having it shut down, the farmers would have to buy all their twine of the trust and pay whatever the trust saw fit to ask. In pursuing this object the trust can well afford to hire orators and buy up newspapers. If the trust could only get the prison twine plant back again into the hands of its Republican friends, it would soon manage to have it run in such a way as not to interfere with the interests of the trust or even have it shut down completely, as the Republicans did with the prison twine plant in Kansas.

The farmer will find that nearly every Republican politician and dealer in twine, is howling about the way the twine plant at the prison has been mismanaged. By selling directly to the farmers the prison twine plant has incurred the ill will of the dealers, and it is their object to destroy this competition so that they can help the twine trust to rob the farmers as it was done in former years.

There is, however, one thing that the farmers of this state would like to know—they would be very much interested to hear Tams Bixby tell how much money the twine trust has contributed to assist Republican orators and newspapers to destroy the prison twine plant.

WEIGHMASTER'S REPORT

Unequalled Records by Weighmaster Ed. O'Brien for the Year Closed.

The following, from the weighmaster's report, refutes Republican charges of gross mismanagement:

"The total number of cars weighed during the year was 214,490, and the revenues accruing from all sources was $53,993.50. Covering the same period the expense account was $53,069.23, showing a surplus of $929.27. The total number of bushels of grain weighed during the same period was 173,311,380.

"A comparison of last year's figures with the above will not be out of place here. Shortly after I came into this office in 1899, the duty devolved upon me of furnishing you with the fourteenth annual report. In that statement it was shown that 202,293 cars had been weighed and that the revenues from all sources was $34,485.41. The expense account for that year was $57,448.68, indicating a deficiency of $22,958.27. Total number of bushels of grain weighed, 160,940,006. In some respects the showing thus made was an excellent one, but the large deficiency was an unpleasant feature to record.

"Shortly after the beginning of the present grain year, in October, 1899, your honorable board raised the price for weighing cars from 15 cents to 25 cents, thus adding largely to the receipts of the department. It was one of the necessities and though some fault was found with this, the justice of it soon became apparent to all. The board of appeals, created by act of the last legislature, added from $18,000 to $20,000 to the expense of the grain department and this, if no other reason existed, would have justified the advance. Then, too, there is a vast difference between the car of ten years ago, or even five years and that of today. The capacity of the former would not average but little over 600 bushels, while the latter, built in these times, will average from 200 to 300 bushels more. The thousand bushel car of the present time is becoming quite common. With these changed conditions the weighing of a car of wheat now, in reality, is almost as reasonable as it ever has been.

"The year just closed, it is gratifying to state, sees the department self-sustaining. The deficiency of almost $23,000 in 1899 has been turned to a surplus, small though it be, of $929.27 in 1900.

"Going back to the birth of the department in 1885, but one year has excelled this in the number of cars weighed. That was the big crop year of 1897. I desire to say, too, that while the number of cars weighed during the past year was 12,197 more than during the previous year, still the expense account of the department was less by $4,269.45. To be more explicit, the year ending Aug. 41, 1899, showed an expense to the department of $57,338.68, while the year which closed Aug. 31, 1900, showed an expense of $53,069.23."

An example of the increased strictness and general efficiency achieved under the present administration is shown by the statistics of the weighing department. Minnesota export wheat is weighed out at Duluth and weighed in on arrival at Buffalo, the other end of the lake route. Comparison of the Duluth and Buffalo weights, therefore, shows the accuracy of Minnesota grain department officials in weighing. The following table tells a significant story. The loss in pounds per 1,000 bushels for the past seven crop years follows:

Crop year.	Loss per 1,000 bu.
1894	35 lbs.
1895	36 lbs.
1896	30 lbs.
1897	17 lbs.
1898	20 lbs.
1899 (Last Republican year)	17 lbs.
1900 (Lind Administration)	8 lbs.

In other words, the loss in weight during the Republican administration of the Duluth department ranged from 17 to 36 lbs. per 1,000 bushels, as against the bagatelle of 8 lbs. under Governor Lind's new regime. The average loss in six years of Republican administration was 25 lbs., which is three times that of the first year of the new control. This shows that the new broom sweeps clean in weighing as in inspection, while being a less heavy burden upon the taxpayer, and a source of far greater justice to the producer and general business public.

Issued by the Minnesota Democratic State Central Committee, St. Paul, Minn., L. A. Rosing, Chairman; Geo. S. Canfield, Secretary.

ELECTORAL TICKET.

Voters should be careful as to how they vote for Presidential electors. Put your cross marks opposite the nine electors where it is marked on the ballot, "VOTE FOR NINE."

Also Bryan voters should be careful to vote ONLY for those NINE ELECTORS, and be sure not to make the mistake of also putting a mark opposite the "Social Democrat." To do so might lose your whole vote.

Proof Positive of the First District Congressman's Connection With the Minneapolis Lumber Combine.

One of the salient points of attent again Congressmen J. A. Tawney, of the First District is his connection with and subservency of the Northwest Lumber Combine. When he denied serving the combine to get the $2 tax on lumber, the boys who are after him overwhelmed him with the record of his vote and official action at Washington. When they charged him with being the main stay and chief advisor of the Mississippi Lumberman, he denied, and the friends of L. L. Brown, Tawney's popular opponent, produced the most positive proof. Finally they ran Tawney down to having been present at Minneapolis at a meeting of the lumbermen when Mr. Tawney was present. Tawney vigorously denied it, and declared that he was not in that part of the state on the occasion mentioned, and now the boys don't do a thing but reproduce in fac simile the page of the West Hotel register, showing the names of the lumber barons and Mr. Tawney registered in their own hand writing.

Examine the above and be convinced.

CLAUSEN vs. REISHUS

Clausen's Fatal Admissions Under Republican Investigation.

Investigations report, by the Jacobson committee, Jan., 1899. This was to investigate specific charges that under Clausen "the department of grain inspection has become corrupt; that the inspection has been conducted in the interests of the buyer as against the shipper and producer; that grain would be inspected in as No. 2 or 3, and inspected out as No. 1; that the dockage has been unreasonable, unjust and excessive; that the department has employed incompetent and corrupt men as inspectors."

The report: We find from the evidence produced that the grading of wheat has not been uniform; that prior to the month of October, the new crop of wheat had not been graded solely on its merits, it being the policy of the inspection department to give lower grades than later.

That the system of appeal from the inspector's decision is impracticable and of little benefit.

That it appears that some of the inspectors have been incompetent or careless.

That the weighing of the grain at the terminals is carried on in a loose manner.

From the investigation had before this committee, it clearly appears to this committee that wheat inspections have not been uniform throughout the year; that the grading of wheat has been rigid during the first three or four weeks of each season, and less rigid during the balance of the year, and we cannot in too strong language condemn this practice, as it must necessarily result in GREAT LOSS TO THE PRODUCER, FROM THE FACT THAT A LARGE PROPORTION OF THE CROP HAS BEEN MARKETED BEFORE THE CHANGE TAKES PLACE, AND ON ALL WHEAT SOLD PRIOR TO THAT TIME, THE LOSS MUST NECESSARILY FALL ON THE PRODUCER.

Clausen's admissions, when on the stand to meet the charge that "early in the season the inspection made by your inspectors was very severe against the producer, and that subsequently, later in the season, somewhere about the middle of October, and from that on, much more liberal grades were given." Clausen's explanations were not satisfactory to the committee of investigation, and contained such admissions as these (pp. 5-7, Appendix, House Journal, 1899):

"A. I will concede that statement is true to a certain extent, but it is true of every crop of wheat we have ever handled since the department started in 1885.

"A. I thought I made myself clear on that; I want to say here that the tendency from the beginning of the year to the close is to press the grades down, press them down, and in order to have a little margin, one on which we can carry our crop through on, without exercising apprehension on the part of eastern buyers, we start out not knowing what we have to contend with; in other words, we take the benefit of the doubt on the line wheat.

"Q. You don't give the farmer early in the season the benefit of the doubt?

"A. We take the benefit of the doubt until we get started because we don't know what we are getting into; if we should start out in any other way with the pressure that is brought to bear on us we should get the grades down so low they would be below the standard, and if we once get below we cannot tighten up, we can never get back. There was never known such a thing as tightening up a grade.

"Q. In other words, the rule never worked both ways?

"A. No, sir."

Mr. G. H. Tunnell, then chief deputy inspector at Minneapolis, was placed on the stand.

"Q. You have testified that early in the season you have to inspect closer?

"A. Yes, at the very start."

The committee in closing its findings from the evidence produced before it, made this statement:

"From this it appears that NEARLY ONE-THIRD OF THE CROP HAS BEEN MARKETED EACH YEAR BEFORE THE FARMER IS ENABLED TO GET THE GRADE THAT HIS CROP MERITS."

DID THE HANDSOME THING.

A Marrying Minister Who Found No Fault with Gambling Phrases.

In a volume of reminiscences just published entitled: "The Wedding Day in Literature and Art" a minister relates his experience with two weddings in the same town on the same day, one in the morning, one in the afternoon. "The first wedding fee I received was $10," he says, "a very large remuneration for the place and people. After the second wedding the best man called me into a private room and thus addressed me:

"'What's the tax, parson?'

"'Anything you like, or nothing at all,' I answered. (I have frequently received nothing.)

"'Now,' said he, 'we want to do this thing up in style, but I have had no experience in this business and do not know what is proper. You name your figure.'

"I suggested that the legal charge was two dollars."

"'Pshaw,' he said. 'This ain't legal. We want to do something handsome.'

"'Go ahead and do it,' I said. Whereupon he reflected a moment and then asked me how much I had received for the wedding of the morning.

"'Ten dollars,' I replied.

"His face brightened at once. Here was a solution to the difficulty.

"'I'll see his ante,' he remarked, 'raise him five dollars and call.' Whereupon he handed me $15."

THE CAMPAIGN

GREATEST POSSIBLE EARNESTNESS AND ENTHUSIASM AMONG THE REFORM FORCES.

Reform Forces Gaining Ground on Every Hand—Lind Much Stronger Than Two Years Ago—Disposition to Vote the Ticket Straight—State Weighmaster's Report—Splendid Showing—More Work and Less Expenses—Bureau Notes, Etc.

REFORM PRESS BUREAU.
ST. PAUL, Oct. 29, 1900.

The Reform forces are making a very satisfactory and encouraging campaign throughout the state. The redoubtable General Apathy, of whom we hear so much, has failed to get even within gunshot of our meetings. The greatest possible earnestness and enthusiasm has prevailed everywhere and gives us the best possible assurance for the outcome at the polls on Nov. 6.

Governor Lind has been speaking in a great many counties and he has always drawn large audiences. His clear, earnest, concise exposition of national and state issues, has made him hosts of new friends wherever he has spoken and has strengthened the old ones. The people see in him more than ever the champion of their interests and of their rights, the opponent of dishonest corporations and grasping syndicates.

Thomas J. Meighen, Democratic-Peoples candidate for lieutenant governor, has also been making hosts of friends. His active and efficient work as a member of the state board of equalization in forcing certain corporations and syndicates to bear their honest share of the burden of taxation, is becoming better known and making friends for him every day.

The confidence which the laboring men have in M. E. Neary, Democratic-Peoples candidate for secretary of state, and which they have in former times expressed by electing him to positions of trust and honor in their organizations, has been growing constantly and will make him a strong candidate with the people throughout the state.

The large circle of friends which Henry C. Koerner, Democratic-Peoples candidate for state treasurer, has in every county of Minnesota, gives him an advantage such as few men possess. In every county of the state Mr. Koerner has personal friends, irrespective of party, that will stand by him and work for his election and the election of those on the state ticket with him.

The reputation which Robert C. Saunders, Democratic-Peoples candidate for attorney general, has won as an attorney in advancing the rights of the people and enforcing the laws of the state, especially in the enforcement of taxes against standing pine on exempt land grants, is appreciated by voters, irrespective of party, and makes him a tower of strength for the entire state ticket.

Among the things to which the present administration points with special pride, and which more than anything else have proven it to be the friend of the people of the state, the champion of their interests and welfare, there is none which deserves greater praise than the work of the present railroad and warehouse commission. P. M. Ringdal and T. J Knox are members of this commission. They have reduced the freight on grain from a large section of the state to the markets. This reduction will save the farmers of Minnesota about $400,000 per year.

During six years previous to their administration, Duluth weights on grain fell short at Buffalo an average of 25 pounds per 1,000 bushels. Since they took charge, this shortage has only averaged 8 pounds per 1,000 bushels. If you want this kind of service to go on, vote for them. They are candidates for re-election, and vote also for S. M. Owen to keep them company. He is editor of The Farm, Stock and Home, and so well and so favorably known, that anything we could say would be superfluous.

State Weighmaster's Report.

In the speeches supplied to him by the Republican state committee, Captain Van Sant has been making vigorous attacks on the work of the state weighmaster, Mr. Edward O'Brien. Charges of gross mismanagement, heavy deficiencies, "less work and more expenses," he poured forth in mighty torrents, and all this long before any report had been made, and long before he or the committee that supplied him with speeches could know whether such charges were founded on fact or not.

The Captain certainly must feel as cheap as a 10 cent bargain counter now that the official report comes out and shows more work and less expense, a surplus instead of the deficiency of the preceding administration. It is a record of honesty and efficiency such as every supporter of the present administration will point to with pride.

We publish from the report the following extract:

"The total number of cars weighed during the year was 214,490 and the revenues accruing from all sources was $53,993.50. Covering the same period the expense account was $53,069.23, showing a surplus of $929.27. The total number of bushels of grain weighed during the same period was 173,311,380.

"A comparison of last year's figures with the above will not be out of place here. Shortly after I came into this office in 1899 the duty devolved upon me of furnishing you with the 14th annual report. In that statement it was shown that 202,293 cars had been weighed and that the revenues from all sources was $34,485.41. The expense account for that year was $57,448.68, indicating a deficiency of $22,958.27. Total number of bushels of grain weighed, 160,940,006. In some respects the showing thus made was an excellent one, but the large deficiency was an unpleasant feature to record.

"Shortly after the beginning of the present grain year, in October, 1899, your honorable board raised the price for weighing cars from 15 cents to 25 cents, thus adding largely to the receipts of the department. It was one of the necessities and though some fault was found with this, the justice of it soon became apparent to all. The Board of Appeals, created by act of the last legislature, added from $18,000 to $20,000 to the expense of the grain department and this, if no other reason existed, would have justified the advance. Then, too, there is a vast difference between the car of ten years ago, or even five years and that of today. The capacity of the former would not average but little over 600 bushels, while the latter, built in these times, will average from 200 to 300 bushels more. The thousand bushel car of the present time is becoming quite common. With these changed conditions the weighing of a car of wheat now, in reality, is almost as reasonable as it ever has been.

"The year just closed, it is gratifying to state, sees the department self-sustaining. The deficiency of almost $23,000 in 1899 has been turned to a surplus, small though it be, of $929.27 in 1900.

"Going back to the birth of the department in 1885, but one year has excelled this in the number of cars weighed. That was the big crop year of 1897. I desire to say, too, that while the number of cars weighed during the past year was 12,197 more than during the previous year, still the expense account of the department was less by $4,269.45. To be more explicit, the year ending Aug. 41, 1899, showed an expense to the department of $57,338.68, while the year which closed Aug. 31, 1900, showed an expense of $53,069.23."

Deliberate falsehood and misrepresentation is very treacherous ground for making a great political campaign on. Every voter instinctively feels that no party would choose such ground if it had any other. A campaign of falsehood is an admission of incompetence. A party won't depend upon falsehood if it has anything else to depend on.

It is almost saddening to what extreme the Republican campaign managers are forced, in order to manufacture campaign thunder out of whole cloth, and then submit to the mortification of seeing their flimsy frabric ripped, raveled, and torn into shreds before it even comes to the notice of the public.

Among their latest fabrications is a story how a certain grocer, P. O'Grady, was unjustly arrested at the instance of Major Bowler, head of the dairy and food department, and had to be released because the injustice of the arrest was glaringly shown up, etc., etc., etc.

In answer to this came the testimony from Assistant County Attorney Zollman, declaring that the case against P. O'Grady was brought by one C. J. Lyon, not in any manner connected with the state dairy and food department, and who did not have any instructions from that department, and that the state dairy and food department had nothing whatever to do with it, except so far as the prosecuting attorney called in the services of the state chemist as a witness.

If Tams Bixby wants the voters to make a comparison between the work of the present and past administration of the dairy and food department let him submit to them the following official figures:

Report of Convictions, Dairy and Food, in 20 Months of 1899 and 1900.

	Convictions.	Fines.
Adulterated milk	31	$ 2 00
Baking powder	17	401 00
Vinegar	17	366 00
Oleomargarine	81	2,030 00

Adulterated mixed paints	5	125 00
Preservatives in butter	5	150 00
Adulterated white lead	5	125 00
Adulterated jellies	3	85 00
Manufacturing butter from unclean milk	1	25 00
Unclean milk	1	25 00
	216	$5,079 00

Report of Convictions, Dairy and Food Department, Years 1897 and 1898.

	Convictions	Fines.
Illegal butter	1	$ 25 00
Illegal milk	13	190 00
Baking powders	6	150 00

Illegal vinegar	6	65 00
Illegal cheese	2	50 00
Selling milk without license	15	60 00
Illegal sale of oleomargarine	8	215 00
	53	$790 00

Oleomargarine confiscated, 655¾ pounds.

In 20 months the present administration secured 216 convictions, with fines amounting to $5,079, while the Republican administration during the two preceding years (24 months) secured only 53 convictions, with fines amounting to only $790. Which shows the most vigorous work? Which will the people endorse?

It is timely to warn the people against the roorbacks and campaign lies that are likely to be sprung by the Republican managers just before election day.

Two years ago Mr. Vandiver, the present head of the Republican Press Bureau, published in the St. Paul Dispatch a bogus speech of Governor Lind, for which The Dispatch was afterwards fined and obliged to pay to Governor Lind $600 indemnity.

For this feat Tams Bixby appointed Vandiver head of the Republican Press Bureau and there is nothing so low and contemptible in the way of campaign lies and roorbacks but what the people may safely expect it from that source.

MINNESOTA NEWS.

Set Fire to Timber.

C. E. Selye and Harry Shearer were found guilty in the United States court at Duluth of starting fires among the timber on the Chippewa Indian reservation in Itasca county. It was alleged that the defendants set the fires in order to damage the timber on the reservation, which, under the dead and down timber act, the Indians are permitted to sell. The principal witnesses for the prosecution were Chippewa Indians. Both Selye and Shearer are well known in this section, the former having for several years past been a prominent lumberman. This is the first case of its kind that has ever been tried in this district and has created considerable interest among lumbermen. They were sentenced to eight months in jail.

Cannot Get Fish.

The water in the ponds and sloughs along the Mississippi has been so high this fall that the superintendent of the Willowbrooke state fish hatchery, below Indian Mounds Park, has been unable to obtain the usual supply of bass and croppy fry.

These fish are not propagated at the hatchery and for many years the hatchery employes have obtained the supply needed to stock lakes and streams from the river. The small fish are caught in seines, taken to the hatchery and sent out from there in immense cans to the different points where needed.

Usually the hight of the water has not interfered with the work. This fall the river stage has been unusually heigh, and the places where the little fish are usually caught are flooded.

Hung Himself.

Within an hour after being locked up at the central station in Minneapolis for robbing the poor box of the Church of Notre Dame de Lourdes, Henry C. Landre, a St. Paul cigarmaker, hung himself to the bars of his cell, where he was found, dead and cold, by Officer Novak and Janitor Kellogg.

Landre had entered the open door of the Church of Notre Dame and attempted to secure what small money there was in the poor box. In so doing he rang an alarm bell in the basement of the church, which caused the housekeeper to go upstairs, where Landre was discovered in the act.

Assistant Pastor Father Gabrile Andre followed him to Central avenue and compelled him to go up to the fire station No. 11, from where he was taken by the patrol wagon to central lockup.

State Prison Census.

The state prison census has just been completed by the board of corrections and charities. It is for the year ending June 30. There are 360 prisoners in the counties of the state, not including Hennepin, Ramsey and St. Louis. In the jail workhouses etc., there were 131 prisoners. There were 106 prisoners held for trial. In Hennepin county there were 154 prisoners in the state prison or reformatory; in Ramsey, 81, and in St. Louis 50. In the jail workhouses, etc., Hennepin had 97, Ramsey 81, and St. Louis 109. In Hennepin the prisoners held for trial were 21, in Ramsey 30 and in St. Louis 197.

Will Not Accept It.

The monument commission is not satisfied with the Hinckley fire monument, and has notified the Arnold Granite company, of St. Cloud, that it will not be accepted. The commission claims that the monument is crooked; that the different sections were not laid in strips of lead, as the contract calls for; that the workmanship is inferior; that the coping is not properly set; that the debris has not been cleared away and, last, that certain bills for labor performed remain unpaid.

A Large Raft.

The largest raft of lumber in the history of the lumber business on the upper Mississippi passed through Winona. The raft was handled by Wiman's steamer, John Douglass, and bowboat Satellite. It contained 9,360,000 feet of lumber, besides many thousands of dollars worth of lath and shingles.

The estamate value of the raft was $650,000. It was fifty-two cribs long and eight wide. The ordinary lumber raft is about fifteen cribs long.

A Noted Knight Templar Owes His Health to Peruna.

Colonel T. P. Moody, a prominent Knight Templar, is well known in every city in the United States west of Buffalo, N. Y., as a Jeweler's Auctioneer. In the city of Chicago as a prominent lodge man, being a member of the K. T.'s and also of the Masons. The cut shows Colonel Moody in the costume of the Oriental Consistory Masons, 32nd degree.

In a recent letter from 5900 Michigan avenue, Chicago, Ill., Mr. Moody says the following:

"For over twenty-five years I suffered from catarrh, and for over ten years I suffered from catarrh of the stomach terribly.

"I have taken all kinds of medicines and have been treated by all kinds of doctors, as thousands of my acquaintances are aware in different parts of the United States, where I have traveled, but my relief was only temporary, until a little over a year ago I started to take Peruna, and at the present time I am better than I have been for twenty years.

"The soreness has left my stomach entirely and I am free from indigestion and dyspepsia and will say to all who are troubled with catarrh or stomach trouble of any kind, don't put it off and suffer, but begin to take Peruna right away, and keep it up until you are cured, as you surely will be if you persevere.

"My wife, as many in the southwest can say, was troubled with a bad cough and bronchial trouble, and doctors all over the country gave her up to die, as they could do nothing more for her. She began taking Peruna with the result that she is better now than she has been in years, and her cough has almost left her entirely. The soreness has left her lungs and she is as well as she ever was in her life, with thanks, as she says, to Peruna. Yours very truly,

T. P. Moody.

Colonel T. P. Moody, of Chicago, Had Catarrh Twenty-five Years and Was Cured by Peruna.

Catarrh in its various forms is rapidly becoming a general curse. An undoubted remedy has been discovered by Dr. Hartman. This remedy has been thoroughly tested during the past forty years. Prominent men have come to know of its virtues, and are making public utterances on the subject. To save the country we must save the people. To save the people we must protect them from disease. The disease that is at once the most prevalent and stubborn of cure is catarrh.

If one were to make a list of the different names that have been applied to catarrh in different locations and organs, the result would be astonishing. We have often published a partial list of these names, and the surprise caused by the first publication of it to all people, both professional and non-professional, was amusing. And yet we have never enumerated all of the diseases which are classed as catarrh. It must be confessed, however, to see even this partial list drawn up in battle array is rather appalling. If the reader desires to see this list, together with a short exposition of each one, send for our free catarrh book. Address The Peruna Medicine Co., Columbus, Ohio.

ST. VITUS' DANCE

Three great and complete cures effected by Dr. Greene's Nervura Blood and Nerve Remedy.

Mrs. J. A. Ferre, who resides near 905 Main Street, Hartford, Conn., says:

"My daughter Lulu became very ill with St. Vitus dance over a year ago. She became so bad that she lost the use of her right arm and side, and we thought at one time she would lose her speech. Her tongue was almost paralyzed. She was so bad she could not feed herself, and at night she would get so nervous I had to sit and hold her. I tried several doctors, but they did not do her any good. I did not find anything that would help her until I tried Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy. She is now, by the use of this medicine, entirely cured."

C. H. Bailey, Esq., of Waterbury, Vt., writes:

"I am more than glad to write about my little daughter. Until a short time ago she had always been a very delicate child and subject to sick spells lasting weeks at a time. She was very nervous, and our family doctor said we would never raise her, she was so delicate and feeble. We tried many remedies without the least good. We felt much anxiety about her, especially as no doctors could benefit her, and had great fear for her future. Learning of the wonders being done by Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy, I determined to give it to her. She soon commenced to improve under its use, and rapidly gained in every respect. She eats and sleeps well, and her nerves are strong. The medicine has done wonders for her and it is the best we ever knew. I recommend Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy, to everybody."

Mrs. J. Learmonth, of 776 Broadway, South Boston, Mass., says:

"At ten years of age my daughter became affected with a nervous condition which soon developed into St. Vitus' dance. It was pronounced by the attending physician to be a very severe attack. The mouth would be drawn spasmodically far to one side, the hands and arms were restless and constantly twitching. Her limbs also were weak; her ankles bent under her so that it was almost impossible to walk. She was so nervous that she would scream almost like a maniac and then have fits of crying. After two months' treatment without a cure, I concluded to try Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy. Three bottles entirely cured her. She is now thirteen years old, and has been well ever since, and to-day is a picture of health."

Sport of Kings.

The first yacht race ever recorded was that sailed in 1662, when Charles II. matched a yacht of 25 tons called the Jamie against a small Dutch yacht, under the duke of York, from Greenwich to Gravesend, when the king in his capacity of amateur helmsman was successful in beating the boat steered by his brother, says a London newspaper. The first yacht known was the Mary, which was presented to Charles II. by the Dutch. Hitherto even the name had been unknown in England, and it is only during the last 100 years that yacht racing has become at all general.

Catlin, who is actively canvassing the county would, if elected, be a model auditor. He is very bright, well fitted for the position and as honest and reliable as he is efficient. When the war with Spain broke out, he left everything and with patriotic ardor hastened to the front. The hardships he endured in the Philippines, followed by a long spell of sickness since his return, have naturally created a widely extended sympathy for him. If you appreciate his services to his country, if you admire his pluck and high principle—as you surely do—remember A. G. Catlin on the sixth of November when you deposit your ballot.—Wayerly Tribune.

COKATO Minn., Oct. 31 1900

Thinking perhaps some voters might be influenced by the statements in the last week's issue of the Eagle in regard to A. P. Ritchie, we take the liberty to show just what truth they contain. In the first place, it declares that Mr. Ritchie attended Hamline University but ONE year '96-'97, instead of TWO as stated in his circular letter, and gives as proof an extract from a letter written by the Sec'y, of Hamline University. Now we know nothing at all concerning the present Secretary's knowledge of Mr Ritchie's attendance at Hamline, but we do know that either the author of the Eagel's article did not consult Mr. Zech, the one most interested in having the article published, or that Mr. Zech has a very short memory. For Mr. Ritchie yet has in his possession letters written by Mr. Zech to Mr. Ritchie at Hamline in the year of '94. If this is not proof we would refer doubters to Chas. Hawker and F. H. Lindsley of Delano, to almost any citizen of Annandale at that time, also to the following letter published in the Gazette Nov. 2 1894

HAMLINE Minn.,
Oct. 29, 1894.

MR. A. P. RITCHIE,
ANNANDALE, Minn.

Dear Sir—I am glad to learn that you have been nominated for the position of Supt. of Schools for Wright Co. and I hope you may be elected.

I consider you well qualified for the position and believe you would perform the duties of the offices with credit to yourself and with satisfaction to the people.

I am yours sincerely,
G. H. BRIDGMAN,
Pres. of Hamline University.

Now in regard to his graduation from Western University. Very fortunatily for Mr. R. not being born with a golden spoon in his mouth, he was persevering enough to carry on his studies in connection with his teaching. Here he also has a little the better of the Eagle, in giving him until June, 1900 to complete a college course, while as, a matter of fact he completed it in March, 1900. If deriving no other benefit from his work it enabled him to obtain a First grade PROFESSIONAL State Certificate, while according to the Eagle his political opponent holds but a First grade STATE Cirtificate. Though others may, the Eagle seems to see no difference between the two cirtificates. We will explain. First-The STATE Cirtificate requires examination in twelve subjects, the PROFESSIONAL in thirty one, only the slight difference of nineteen subjects. Second-The holder of the former is qualified to teach in any GRADE below the High School, while the latter entitles one to hold ANY POSITION IN ANY PUBLIC SCHOOL OF THE STATE. We do NOT say that Mr. Zech has held nothing but a state certificate. He has held a SECOND Grade Professional State Certificate, but these have been declared invalid by Attorney Gen. Douglas.

Democrats have not been so harmonious and confident of success in Wright Connty as they are now, for years. They expect Bryan, Lind, Truelsen and several others on the ticket to receive majorities in the County.

The Democratic meeting at G. A. R. hall in Rockford Wednesday evening was fairly well attended considering the condition of the roads. Capt. Joseph E. Osborn, of Minneapolis, made the address. He is a forcible and impressive speaker. Candidates Spath and Cutting made short speeches. Candidates Catlin and Bugbee were also present. A feature of the meeting was the singing by the Rockford Democratic Glee Club, which called forth great praise from Capt Osborn.

Imperialist or Office Hunter.

At the time of Page Morris' last election, the industrial trusts, though protected by our tariff rates were in there infancy. The fundamental right of the public, that this was a good government for the people and was untouched. More as that we stood on that principle outside of this republic, and that was our strenght, that all oppressed looked on the United States as the shinning star of liberty.

Our rule was at that time not in imperialistic style, inspired by destiny to buy eight million of people like a herd of cattle and force the yoke of the American money power on them, against their consent. But Page Morris, though he did not know what road our ruler would take, told those who send him to Washington that he uphold unhesitatingly the hands of the ruler. If Mr. McKinley would have stuck to the principle that possible agression was crime and played in the Philippines the role of a liberator instead of an oppresser he would have supported him. If McKinley should have considered this enormous industrial swindle, called trusts a danger to the national welfare and instead of protecting this swindle would have put his foot on it, he would have agreed. And if McKinley did not change his mind and did not tax imports fron Factories he would not have taxed them. Page Morris the former Democrat did not go to Washington as a Republican. He did not go there as the servant of the people, but as the servant of the ruler, with the object to cover with his vote any act the government porposed. He is either a servile imperialist or an office hunter who uses his voters as stepping stones. No Republican would attack the dissenting votes of our Republican Senators Davis and Nelson on the tariff question of Porto Rico with the assertion that they worked for the trust. He might have covered his vote, that it was in the interest of the tobacco growers here to protect them. He is simply a government servant and those who are bound to elect him again might present the ruler, instead of him with a wooden doll whose vote the ruler might direct by pulling a string.

TALK of reorganizing the Democratic party is going on. The friends of the party are not among the howlers. Only those who deserted and have helped in bringing about the last defeat are favoring a re-organization. Let the present organization alone. When the next convention meets the platform and candidates can be selected in the regular way. Nobody wants to follow the enemies in reorganization.

IT is openly charged that large sums of money were used in the last election for the purpose of electing certain candidates. When voters cast their ballots only for men who have sufficient money to treat and to hire everything that they want the country is certainly drifting into imperealism. When men cannot be elected on their worth, on their popularity, or on anything else but for their money, the country is in danger. When men advocate principles of government vital to the life of a free government vital to the life of a free country, of a republic and admit that the candidates are honest, upright and men to be desired as officers and go to the polls and vote against them something is wrong.

After Election

The Presidential election is over. Republicans claim the largest number of electors ever chosen with vote for McKinley. They claim the Senate and the House of Representatives will have Republican majorities. They claim to have endorsed McKinley's administration. His idea of runing military governments in islands of the seas; his tarriff between territories under our flag, his army canteen, his big navy and his standing army are endorsed; his national banks founded on bonds of the United States, or debts of the country, his benevolent assimilation, all are approved of.

People are now anxiously expecting to see the prosperity of the whole country. To see the full dinner pail, the plethoric pocket book of the husbandman, the big bank accountsof business men.

War was to cease in the Philippines immediately upon receipts of the news that McKinley was elected. Business was to take a boom all along the line in this country. Everybody was supposed to come up the morning after election smiling and happy.

BRYAN may have been beaten in this campaign, but Bryanism is no more dead now than it was four rears ago. The same principles of "Life Liberty and the pursuit of Happiness" being the "unailianable right of all" of every individual, and of every country, permeates the minds of all liberty loving people.

What the N. Y. Tribune Says in May.

Editor of the Times:—I cut the following article from the New York Tribune of May 10th, 1898:

The Hoisting of Prices.

Some of the trade journals are beginning to suggest that prices are being pushed too high by some new combinations. "The Iron Age" says that "on some commodities an unreasonable height has already been attained" and that "consumption will be checked by the growing conviction that prices are too inflated to last," and instances the advance in copper, which has in fact risen fron 12.9 cents for Lake on January 1 to 19 25, an abyance of 49.2 per cent. This is in large degree a foreign rather than a domestic change, as the price is mainly controlled by the London market and the foreign demand. The same paper observes that "iron and steel producers are not altogather without blame in this respect." It would seem not. For instance, wire nails are quoted at $2 10 against $1.25 last December, an advance of 68 per cent, which is considerably more than the rise in copper. The public castigation of the milder sinner is not readily explained.

Cut nails have advanced since January 1 about 63 per cent. Bar iron at Pittsburg has advanced about 58 per cent. Tank steel plates at Philadelphia have advanced about 76 per cent. In some respects the worst sinner of all is the tinplate combination, which has advanced prices from $2 55 for hundred-pound boxes to $4 05, or 54 per cent, because the industry owes its existence to the help given it by duties on imports, and sets up the foreign price of tin plate as an excuse, though the tin makes but a small fraction of the cost, and has risen since December 1 only 40 per cent. It would seem that such sinners as these might be publicly mentioned as well as the copper people whose market is in fact largely controlled abroad

In general the criticism is entirely just, and ought to de heeded by those who are controlling the great industries It is not exactly the right time to be milking the country to the last drop in order to realize quick and big profits for works largely established by aid of its laws. There is coming a time when such advances in price will be publicly discussed as evidence that the National policy has placed consumers at the mercy of all sorts of combinations which show no sense of regard for the public welfare. That is a charge which will surely be made.

The "time predicted by this administration supporter surely has come but no such acknowlegdements are now premitted. The whole tenor of the editorial is intended to prevent such "Hoisting of Prices," well knowing that the party in responsible for "milking the country to the last drop." It would seem that this admission should satfsy any reasonable person where the balance rests, irrespective of partisan perjudice. No better evidence by the consumer and producer is needed to change his political views. The "prosperity" cry is no argunent against facts. We know now the cause of the incausing price of farm implements and other commodities and the talk of politicians on other themes will not suffice. New Jersy boasts the corporte parentage of over 90 per cent of the big combinations of capital, having given legal existence to 15,000 corporate concerns with an aggregate capital of eight billion dollars. The law in that state is very liberal-the corporate powers are unlimited; stockholders are liable for their subsciptions; the franchise tax is small and as the names of stockholders and the real incorporators are commonly withheld, it is nearly impossible to tax the stock in other states where the business is done. These are the "combinations which show no sense for the public welfare" as they pay from 12 to 30 per cent profit and they will continue to thrive so long as they are "protected" and no competition. A long article would be necessary to even summarize the leading trusts and their workings.

It is needless to refer to the Porto Rico tariff bill in connection with the trust question. It should be "our plain duty" to vote against men who favored such laws.

Must Not Interfere with Mental and Moral Attainments of Students.

Report of Committee Appointed to Investigate Subject Believes Sports Should Be Regulated, Not Prohibited—Existing Evils.

The report of the subcommittee, appointed at a conference of the leading university athletic committees to investigate the entire matter of intercollegiate competitions, has just been made public. The report states that athletic sports occupy a disproportionate amount of attention in many of our universities, colleges and schools, and the main end of all rules must be to prevent outdoor sports and physical exercises from interfering with the mental and moral attainments. It seems far wiser to mend abuses by guidance and regulation than to end them by the abolition of the sports.

It is obvious that all colleges and universities should have requirements as to the scholarship of their teams. Every member should be in good standing. No student should be permitted to make athletics the principal occupation of his college life. Only students who are genuine members of a university should be permitted to appear in public exhibitions and gate money considerations should be wholly eliminated from the games.

The committee considers that there is no reason why college teams, or even parts of college teams, should be assembled for practice during the summer; and when they receive a money benefit by having even their expenses paid, the practice trenches dangerously near professionalism. It would be better if all universities and colleges could be brought to give up even the preparatory practice two weeks before the term opens.

Another practice which the committee considers objectionable is the interference with boys who have developed a taste for athletics in the preparatory schools. In many cases correspondence is opened by graduate committees in search of athletic material, or emissaries are sent out and influence thrown around schoolboys to induce them to enter certain institutions. Sometimes even financial aid is promised toward an education. Some of our universities are reported to have a regular system of looking up likely athletes among the schools.

The committee believes that the large sums of money taken in at many of the football games form a constant temptation to extravagance and to the illicit use of money, and recommends that gate money should be reduced to a minimum by agreement of all universities. A set of rules is also submitted and recommended for adoption. Many of these are already in force at the principal universities, but, as the committee remarks, "their enforcement is not all that could be desired."

WOMAN USES HER FISTS.

Puts to Ignominous Rout Two Men Who Were Pummeling a Poor Conductor.

"I could not sit on the car and watch two big men pummeling a poor conductor who was much smaller than either of the men, so I jumped over the seats and licked them both." Mrs. Valentine, of Hoboken, N. J., thus told of her exciting experience. She was riding on a Second avenue surface car. Two obstreperous passengers refused to permit the conductor to close the door, and when he persisted assaulted him. Mrs. Valentine came to his assistance and knocked one of the fighters to the floor. That settled him and he fled to a near-by saloon.

She then went at the other man, and he, too, was forced to beat a retreat. Mrs. Valentine then jumped off the car and followed the man into the saloon, where she held him until a policeman arrested him. Outside the conductor pointed out the other man and he was arrested also. The next day the men were fined $5 each.

"I can fight as well as any man of my size," said Mrs. Valentine, "for I have been training all my life. I am a great believer in physical culture for women, and exercise every morning and evening. This is the first time, however, that I have applied my abilities as a boxer to any practical purpose." She is about 25 years old.

GOLD IN LABRADOR.

Deposits Richer Than Klondike Found by Harvard Students.

Return from an Exploring Trip Through the Northern Country—Tell Interesting Stories of Their Adventures.

A gold country which may rival the Klondike and Cape Nome regions has been discovered by the Harvard explorers who spent the last summer in Labrador. They have just returned after a season of excitement and adventure, and all tell interesting stories of the discoveries they made. The party consisted of Dr. R. A. Daly, Huntington Adams, H. B. Bigelow, L. B. McCormick and H. W. Palmer, of Harvard university, and Prof. Delabarre, of Brown university.

They report the discovery and naming of a great mountain, the huge pile being called Mount Eliot, for President Eliot, of Harvard. Another mountain found was named Mount Faunce, for President Faunce, of Brown university; another Mount Elizabeth, after the daughter of a trapper whom they found there. The expedition started from St. John's, N. F., June 25, in the schooner Brave. For nearly three months they scoured the coast of Labrador, reaching Cape Bauld July 4.

The inland trip was the most interesting part of the expedition, for it gave an excellent idea of the country, which is mountainous in the extreme. As to their finds of gold, the explorers will not go into details. They say, however, that their discoveries warrant the belief that the precious metal can be mined out later to supersede the Klondike and Cape Nome. All of the party plan another trip next spring, when they will go in a larger vessel and carry utensils for procuring a quantity of the rich minerals that abound there.

NEW NAVAL STATION PLANNED

Cavite Likely to Be Superseded by a Superior Location at Subig Bay.

There will probably be a new naval station on Subig bay, Luzon. Admiral Melville, engineer in chief of the navy, has criticised Cavite and has recommended Subig bay. He says: "A most prominently important station for the establishment of an extensive and modern machinery plant is that in the Philippine islands, whether at Cavite or at a more suitable location probably obtainable. Pending definite determination of this point the bureau has improved the Cavite plant by sending out such power, tools and supplies as can be installed in the available buildings and readily operated. In the interest of both expediency and economy I strongly urge the early selection of the most desirable site for a complete naval repair station there and the erection of suitable buildings for the needs of this bureau, in order that it may provide for all machinery repair work required by our vessels in the east."

Admiral Melville's suggestion of Subig bay is based on information which he has received from officers in the Philippines.

It is an indorsement of the recommendation of Naval Constructor Hobson, who examined the place carefully and reported it as available in every way for naval station purposes.

TO AID YOUNG RUSSIANS.

An American Helps Establish "Society for Moral and Physical Improvement of Young Men."

The "Society for the Moral and Physical Improvement of Young Men," an organization similar in all respects to the Young Men's Christian association, was successfully launched in St. Petersburg the other afternoon in a building specially fitted up for the purpose. This has been done largely through the personal efforts of Franklin Gaylord, the representative of James Stokes, the philanthropist, of New York, who has invested a princely fortune in such buildings at London, Paris, Berlin and at Rome. The honorary curator is Prince Alexander Petrovitch Oldenberg. The other officers are B. K. Orden, chamberlain of the imperial court, two assistant secretaries of the minister of the interior, three influential priests of the Greek church, P. T. Verinitzki and P. A. Potehin, prominent men of letters.

Boston Common a Bedlam.

When the Salvationists invaded the common there was quite a fight in the courts over the question of open-air services. The Salvationists won the day. And as a result Boston common has become a veritable "Holy Fair," against which religious and secular papers are equally in arms. From Unitarians to Salvationists the whole gamut of theology is sounded and under the guise of sermons red-hot anarchy is freely disseminated among the thousands of idlers who gather on the mall.

All the conductors of the Brookfield (Mass.) trolley line have been made special officers.

WHEN MY NEIGHBOR SINGS.

I sometimes wish my neighbor, Munn,
would never try to sing,
For, oh, it's such a sad attempt at imitating tune,
That when among his acres wide he gives his lungs full swing
It seems to break a string upon the sweet-toned harp of June;
Yet when I stop a-listening, and creep up through the corn
And see what gladness lights his face all through his singing mood,
I sort of hush my protests 'gainst his effort so forlorn,
For it doesn't hurt me any, and it seems to do him good.

We've got to take the bitter with the sweet in life, of course,
And oftentimes what seems to us a strain of bitterness
Is Nature's way of sweetening some fructifying source
Of benefit, that later brings a gladdening caress;
If it wasn't for the cackling we would lose the eggs, perhaps;
But for the direful tuning up the violin were dumb;
The blessed rain oft reaches us through shocking thunder claps,
And other benefits in wake of things unpleasant come;

And arguing thus, I conclude, regarding neighbor Munn,
(For he's a heart as golden as the pumpkins that he grows,)
That though his style of singing's like the bursting of a gun,
It's just his way of tuning up his heart's good-natured throes;
So when his vocal clamorings make fractures in the air,
And startle all the denizens of orchard, grove and wood,
I nowadays just laugh, instead of starting in to swear,
For it doesn't hurt me any, and I know it does him good.

One and One Make Two

By Henry Wilton Thomes.

(Copyright 1899 by Daily Story Publishing Co.)

AS THE Empire State express rumbled out of the Utica station a traveling man for the Buffalo Flat Ware company lay back in his seat and wondered if that train had ever carried anyone so happy as himself. For the twentieth time he took out the dainty missive of Dora Hildebrand, unfolded the heliotrope sheet and read the delicious words: "Of course I love you, you great goose. Why didn't you ask me before I left Buffalo? I shall count the minutes until the 21st."

But the Flat Ware Man counted the seconds as the glung-lung-a-lung of car wheels told them off and brought him nearer to Dora. Only a month since she had gone home, but a busy month for him, spent largely in scheming to get the house to send him to New York. Once there, he assured himself, he would not be such a laggard in asking the father as he had been in avowing his love for the daughter. He knew his little book. To Mr. Hildebrand he would go boldly, and without any beating about, say:

"I love Dora"—no, that wouldn't do; too familiar. "Sir, I have been fortunate enough to win the love and esteem of your daughter. I am able to support her. My sales are growing bigger each year. Will you give your consent to our marriage?" That was the business way of performing the task, and as a business man Mr. Hildebrand would not fail to appreciate it.

The train began to slow down. A guard called: "Albany! Albany!" Two young men, one in a brown derby and the other wearing a very light fedora, entered and took places in the seat ahead of Wentworth.

"Now, I'll show you that picture, Charley," said the Fedora, as the train rolled on again. He took out a photograph and handed it to the other, who held it before him in such a position that the Flat Ware Man could not miss seeing it.

"By Jove! A stunner!" exclaimed the Brown Derby. "What eyes! Say, old man, you're in luck."

If the Flat Ware Man could not help seeing the picture at first, he could not help bending forward now close to the others' backs and glaring at it between their shoulders. Well, there was no getting away from the horrid fact. The face was that of Dora Hildebrand, and the hat was the same as one he had seen her wear. He knew it by a peculiar aigrette. But what in thunder was this chap doing with the picture?

"Yes, she's a mighty pretty girl, Charley, and as clever and good as she is pretty. And what's better than all, she loves me. Think of it. Loves me, a Hollow Ware drummer. Old man, I'll bet I'm the happiest salesman or any other man on this or any other train."

The Flat Ware Man dived into his pocket, brought out Dora's letter and read it for the twenty-first time to make sure that there was no catch in her words. No. There it was in violet and heliotrope: "Of course I love you, you great goose." What did it mean? Ye gods, big and little! Was she trifling with him? Then he called himself a fool and several other things, lay back in his seat again and tried to laugh and reason away the dark misgivings. Astonishing resemblance, of course, but there were so many girls in the world that some must look alike. Besides, how could it be? She never knew any Hollow Ware man. Still, you couldn't tell. Girls were mighty—

"I wonder if it is the family of Hildebrands that my people know in New York?" said the Brown Derby. The Flat Ware Man stopped arguing with himself and was all attention for the new evidence. "I never knew the family myself, but I've heard my mother and sisters speak of them. I think the girls were quite chummy there once. Seems to me they lived somewhere in Central park, west."

"That settles it." The words burst aloud from the Flat Ware Man, and when the others looked around they saw him regarding the bell-rope and humming in bad imitation of a preoccupied man. The Brown Derby winked at the Hollow Ware Man, and the latter remarked:

"By the way, old chap, be ready any time to help me out as best man. The wedding may be very sudden. I have the governor's consent. Don't fail me now."

The Flat Ware Man was about to speak to the Hollow Ware Man and learn the dreadful truth then and there, but the other checked him by continuing to the Brown Derby:

"Better come along to dinner with me. The Hildebrands would be tickled to have you, for it's almost a sure thing that they are the people your people know. Funny, New York isn't such a big place after all."

"That's so," thought the Flat Ware Man, losing his desire to speak. "I'm too hot under the collar over nothing. He's right. New York is not so big a place that there may not be two girls looking very much alike, wearing the same style of hat, with the same surname and living in the same street. I'm wronging Dora even to think that she could think of being false."

When New York was reached, he followed the Hollow Ware Man and the Brown Derby out of the car and along the platform of the Grand Central depot into the shouting crowd of cabmen outside. Bidding his friend good-by, the Hollow Ware Man said: "Yes," to one of the cabmen, and the Flat Ware Man was so close that he heard him give the very number in Central park, west, that was the home of Dora. In a moment he, too, was in a cab and spinning uptown after the other, determined to end the terrible suspense before going to his hotel. Both cabs reached the Hildebrand dwelling at the same time, and the two fares sprang up the steps together, the Hollow Ware Man just enough ahead to ring the bell. They bowed and stood waiting for the door to open.

"Miss Hildebrand," said the Flat Ware Man, holding a card to the cap and aproned maid.

"Miss Hildebrand," said the other, presenting his card, and both were shown into the drawing-room.

In a minute there was a rustling of skirts, and the Flat Ware Man saw the face of his dreams between the portieres and heard its owner cry: "Jack!" and throw herself into the arms of the Hollow Ware Man.

For a moment his power of speech was gone, and not until the lovers had disentwined themselves did he manage to say:

"Well, this is the coldest deal I ever

"YOU ARE MR. SELLERS, I BELIEVE."

got. Heavens, Dora! Can't you see I'm almost mad! What does it mean?"

She gave him a pitiful smile, and answered:

"You are Mr. Sellers, I believe?"

"You believe!" he thundered, a picture of stage anger. "Your memory is short for faces, eh? How is it for letters? Perhaps you don't remember writing that you love me, that you counted the minutes for my arrival this evening. But I have it all in your own hand. Ha! You cannot deny—"

Another rustling of skirts, and again the face of his dreams at the portieres, again a throwing of girl into arms, but this time they were the arms of the Flat Ware Man.

"Well, it's on me, sure enough," he said, while the others laughed. "I've told a few stories on the road about twins, but I never thought I'd have to tell on myself. But it's all one now, eh, Dora?"

"Yes," she said, nestling closer. "One pair."

"No, it's two," said the other girl, and the face above hers gave a hollow ware grin.

Peking's West Gate.

The famous west gate of Peking has the thickness of an ordinary American city block, and in the passage through it there are a dozen gates of different patterns, some opening in the middle, some working on hinges and others falling like portcullises. The walls rise to a height of 80 feet, and over the gate is a temple 100 feet high.—N. Y. Herald.

Stoves of the Bolivian Indians are curious things. A hole is dug in the ground about eighteen inches deep and a foot square, and over this is built a roof of clay, with holes of different sizes to receive the various cooking pots. Roasting is done on spits passed through the holes.

Inquiries for steel rails have arrived within the last few days from South Africa, Australia, Japan, South America and Mexico, and, according to mill agents, it is only a question of a few days when good-sized contracts must be placed by several of those markets at the fixed prices, provided deliveries can be made within a reasonable period.

Sensational newspapers do not enjoy the immunity from retribution in Russia which they do in this country. Two dailies of St. Petersburg which published the current false and exaggerated accounts of affairs in China during the siege of Peking have been severely reprimanded by the censor and their numerous extra editions considerably curtailed.

A new use has been found for paper. An ingenious fabric that shall be a substitute for carpet and supplant the Chinese matting so generally used. The new fabric has a cotton warp and a paper filling, a tough variety of tissue paper being used. The fabric may be dyed and produced in variegated designs similar to any ingrain carpet patterns now in the market.

An entire town has recently been discovered in the dominion of the Czar of the existence of which no one seems to have had any idea. Deep in the forests of the Ural lies a flourishing city, the inhabitants of which speak a curious language of their own, and seem to form a sort of ideal commonwealth, in which taxes and taxgatherers, among other troublesome things, are unheard of.

The flying machine seems at last in sight. Count Zeppelin the other day went up a thousand feet in his airship, traveled a distance of sixty-eight miles, turned about and landed at the spot from which he started, after which he made another ascent of five-eighths of a mile and executed various evolutions. Already the nations are talking about the availability of the Zeppelin airship in war.

Consul Roosevelt writes from Brussels: "Several of the leading newspapers of Brussels use typesetting machines of various makes and of English, Dutch, and German origin. As far as I can learn, no American typesetting machine is used here. The machines at present enjoying greatest favor, is the English linotype duplex machine, costing, with accessories, special material for type not included £624 ($3,036.69)."

The patterns for castings used in foundries are made of wood, and frequently a number of articles are made from the same model. In such case if the same pattern is continuously employed its edges are apt to suffer, and it must either be repaired or renewed. It has been recently suggested that aluminum would be available for this purpose, and that from an original pattern in wood one of two copies could be cast.

Game Warden Johnson, of Colorado, is on record as declaring that larger herds of deer have been reported to him this season than ever before. This statement is corroborated by that of wardens in the northwestern portion of Colorado, as the movements of game southward has begun. The herds are exceptionally large and show a gratifying increase over those of last year, and last year, it may be remembered, was generally considered a record breaker.

Small lots of Florida oranges have appeared on the market of late, and reports from prominent growers South are to the effect that considerable fruit will be marketed this year. The crop is expected to be about 40 per cent. larger than last year, and many groves will ship fruit this season for the first time since the big freeze. Stock received so far has been green, and in most cases it has had to be put in warm rooms to ripen up sufficiently to attract buyers.

The French naval department has an exhibit in the Paris Exposition giving a graphic view of the development of oyster cultivation in France. During 1879-87 the yearly average production of French oysters amounted to $2,120,000, gradually increasing to $4,825,000 for the year 1898, when 15,500,000 French and 3,000,000 Portuguese oysters were sold along the French coasts. The bivalves are a great luxury in Europe, and so dear that only the wealthier classes can afford to eat them.

For several seasons football players have worn long hair to protect their heads. This year it is said they will wear short hair for the same reason. Long hair is very little protection, since baldheaded players get hurt no worse than their chrysanthemum companions. On the other hand long locks flaunting in the face of an opposing college Indian furnish a good grip and are often unmercifully pulled. A player who would be ruled out of the game for slugging can hurt his opponent severely by hair pulling.

A warehouse which has just been built in Oakland, Cal., is to be occupied as a wholesale orange depot. The firm intends to make a decided departure in the orange business as it has heretofore been conducted. It will put in a large orange grader in the warehouse. It then expects to commence the shipment of oranges loose in carload lots, grading and sorting them after they arrive. It is claimed that this will be a great deal less expensive and will result in placing good oranges on the market at a lower price.

McKINLEY ELECTED

The People by Their Ballots Have Indorsed the Administration

REPUBLICANS GET CONGRESS.

Bryan Gains Throughout the Eastern States While McKinley Gains Largely in the West.

NEBRASKA JOINS REPUBLICAN COLUMN.

The Election Proves a Veritable Landslide for the Republican Party. McKinley's Majority in the Electoral College Will be Larger than Before. Republicans Gain Several Congressmen.

New York.

New York, Nov. 7.—McKinley and Roosevelt have swept the country. The republicans wil have a larger vote in the electoral college than in 1896, and they will increase their majority in both senate and house of representatives.

The state of New York has gone republican by a plurality between 120,000 and 150,000. Benjamin B. Odell, Jr., is elected governor and the entire republican state ticket has won by a plurality probably 40,000 less than that given for the presidential electors.

In beautiful landslide weather Bryan, Croker, Jones and Stone have all gone out of sight in a perfect deluge of republican votes. Instead of rolling up 80,000 plurality for Bryan in Greater New York, Croker rolled up less than 28,000.

The actual figures computed are 27,437 for the greater city. Croker gives Bryan 28,240 in Manhattan and Bronx, 19,904 in Queens and 695 in Richmand. On the other hand, McKinley carries the borough of Brooklyn by 34,992.

The Herald and the Times, in the forecast published Oct. 21, said that Greater New York would not give more than 30,000 plurality for William J. Bryan. Croker declared that the papers were crazy and did not know what they were talking about.

The Herald and Times, in their forecast of Oct. 21, predicted McKinley would have 281 electoral votes and Bryan 166. Every democrat in the country declared the papers biased, instead of telling the news, and trying to influence the election. They, too, probably think differently now.

Returns from some of the states are very late coming in. For instance, Nebraska and Kentucky are considered doubtful states, simply because the returns are meager. The indications are that McKinley has a little the better of it in Nebraska, while Bryan's chief paper supporter in Kentucky has given up the state.

Never before was such a tremendous vote polled in this country, and never before were such tremendous majorities rolled up as are recorded in some states. To start with, the registration was phenomenal, all records having been broken, east and west.

Pennsylvania reports a plurality of 300000 for McKinley. Texas, on the other hand, reports a plurality of 215,000 for Bryan. Illinois, which Bryan was led to suppose was doubtful ten days ago, has given to McKinley a plurality of 170,000. In 1896 it gave him a plurality of 142,000. Wisconsin, which in 1896 gave to McKinley a plurality of 102,000, now swells it to 115,000.

Kansas, which the Herald predicted would go for McKinley, the signs clearly indicating a change three weeks ago, has gone for the republican ticket by a landslide among the populists and grangers.

In and around New York state the McKinley wave rolled almost as high as it did in the middle west. The New England states present a solid sound money front. Connecticut is republican by 25,000, and McLean, republican, is elected governor, running 10,000 behind his ticket. New Jersey's swelling figures are up to 65,000 and may reach the wonderful plurality of 87,000, which the state gave four years ago.

Delaware, Maryland and West Virginia are all in the republican column again. All these states have been indicated likely to go for McKinley in the Herald's forecast. Naturally, with such heavy voting and such a big trend to one side, everything has been carried for McKinley, sound money and the policy of expansion.

In the state of New York the Republicans gained six or eight representatives. The republican majority in the house of representatives will likely be thirety-five. The republicans in the present house have 180 and the opposition 168.

The indications are that while McKinley is sure to go to the White House, Bryan is not likely to go to the senate. The latest reports are that the fusion legislative ticket in Nebraska is weak, and that the republicans may have the legislature.

In New York state the republican organization gained eight state senators and nine assemblymen. Although the supporters of Bryan at a late hour are claiming the state of Washington, it seems almost certain that all the Pacific coast states have gone for McKinley. Wyoming, which was carried by Bryan in 1896 by 593 plurality, has gone for McKinley by 2,000 plurality.

South Dakota also has apparently gone into the republican column, but the fate of Senator Pettigrew is in doubt. The republicans are making a desperate effort to capture the legislature, so as to prevent his return to the senate, and the fusionists, aided by the gerrymander, are making a hard fight to carry the legislature and reelect him.

Senator Jones, chairman of the Democratic national committee, at an early hour last night conceded the election of McKinley.

In yesterday's landslide even Idaho hung in the balance. Bryan carried the state by about 800, which is a remarkable change from four years ago, when he had a plurality of 6,439. It is believed Nevada will elect Farrington, republican, to the house of representatives.

The reception of the news of McKinley's triumph in New York was attended by scenes of unexampled enthusiasm. Never before did such crowds throng Herald square and the six other points at which Herald bulletins were displayed. The crowd literally went wild, when, after the returns indicating McKinley's victory had been displayed, a bulletin was thrown out reading: "Says the barber to Mr. Croker, 'you're next.'"

By midnight the headquarters were nearly deserted only the officials and a few enthusiastic politicians remaining.

Reports confirming the defeat of Senator Pettigrew in South Dakota were received at 11:30 by Vice Chairman Payne, and that gentleman gave vent to a lively expression of pleasure. "We have beaten Pettigrew," he cried, waving a telegram over his head. "Send the news to Hanna. He promised to celebrate with me is we beat Pettigrew, and I guess we will do it."

Kentucky and Nebraska, which until a late hour were claimed by the democrats, have both gone republican by a safe majority. In the former state the republicans have elected Yerkes governor.

Bryan lost his own precinct, city and state.

Indiana has broken its record of pendulum politics, giving a majority of 30,000 to McKinley.

Chicago, Nov. 7.—Chairman Babcock of the republican congressional committee said that reports received up to to 11:15 last night pointed to an increase of his estimate of 187 republican members of the house. Dispatches from the country districts had not come in to any extent, he said, but those received showed gains.

Reports from 147 congressional districts out of a total of 356 indicate that the republicans have gained two seats in the house of representatives and the democrats have gained one, giving the republicans a net gain of one.

Washington, Nov. 6.—Representative Richardson, chairman of the democratic congressional committee, at 11 o'clock, declines to make an estimate on the complexion of the next house. He said the returns received up to that time were too incomplete to determine the result so far as the house was concerned. It is practically conceded here, however, that the house is republican by a working majority.

Minnesota.

Minneapolis, Nov. 7.—McKinley's plurality in the state of Minnesota will be approximately 75,000, as all returns received up to date outside of Ramsey and Hennepin counties show an average increase over his '96 plurality of approximately 50 per cent.

It is difficult as we go to press to give any absolutely definite estimate on governor, largely owing to the fact that there are practically no returns in from Hennepin county. In '96 Lind left the Twin Cities with an approximate majority of 700; Clough overcame this majority in the country and had 3,000 to spare. Ramsey county has given Lind approximately 700 plurality.

It is expected that Hennepin county will give Van Sant a plurality of at least 1,200, and send him to the country at least without any plurality against him in the Twin Cities.

If so his plurality should be approximately 5,000 as all returns in to date give him a 10 per cent increase over Clough's plurality in '96.

At 2 o'clock this morning the republican and democratic state chairmen were each claiming the election of their gubernatorial candidates by about the same plurality.

Chairman Rosing, of the democratic committee, is a trifle more optimistic, saying that Lind's plurality will be 15,000. Chairman Bixby, of the republican state committee, has not receded from his original estimate of from 10,000 to 12,000 for Van Sant.

These facts alone are sufficient to show that the result is in considerable doubt. The final outcome is all the more difficult to predict because of the manner in which the vote varies in different parts of the state. Governor Lind has made gains in places least expected, and Capt. Van Sant has done the same.

McKinley has carried Hennepin county by a very comfortable majority. The friends of Captain S. R. Van Sant, republican candidate for governor, insist that their man has a plurality of 1,800 behind him. The democrats refuse to concede this. Returns from 20 districts out of 139 in Minneapolis at 2:30 o'clock indicated the following:

McKinley, 2,467; Bryan, 1,336.

Van Sant, 1,323; Lind, 1, 335.

At 2:30 this morning partial returns on the gubernatorial situation had been received from fifteen different counties outside the twin cities. These indicated that Van Sant would be the victor. The returns included St. Louis, Watonwan, Anoka, Lake, Marshall, Rock, Crow Wing, Aitkin, Washington, Winona, Renville, Grant, Dodge, Polk and Redwood counties. McKinley appears likely to increase his plurality of 53,768 in 1896.

McKinley, 7,652; Bryan, 4,023; Van Sant, 6,946; Lind, 5,392.

The latest figures for Ramsey county, including about two-thirds of the precincts, were as follows:

McKinley, 12,243; Bryan, 8,476; Van Sant, 9,894; Lind, 11,129.

St. Paul, Nov. 6.—Six precincts in Minnesota give McKinley 5,125, Bryan 3,197.

On the state ticket Chairman Rosing of the democratic state committee claims the re-election of Governor Lind by 25,000. The republicans give no figures, but do not concede the election of Lind.

Two Harbors, Minn., Nov. 6.—Five polling places in Lake county give McKinley 570, Bryan, 276; same in 1896, McKinley 583, Bryan 325; Van Sant 312, Lind 438; in 1898 to they gave Lind 331, Eustis 222.

Duluth, Minn., Nov. 6.—Eleven precincts out of 100 in St. Louis county give McKinley 543, Bryan 123, Van Sant 440, Lind 201.

Returns on the congressional contest are not in except in a few precincts, but there is no question of Morris' re-election by a large majority, probably 5,000. Thirty-two precincts out of fifty in the Sixth give Morris 2,238, Truelsen 1,362, a majority for Morris of 876 and net gain for Morris over his vote of 1898 of 822. On this showing Chairman Searle does not see how Morris' majority can fall below 5,000, and it is possible that this will be nearly right.

St. James, Minn., Nov. 6.—Three districts heard from give McKinley 410, Bryan 150, Van Sant 307, Lind 281, McLeary for congress carrying everything.

Chaska, Minn., Nov. 6.—The city of Chaska gives a majority to McKinley of 108, Van Sant 78, Heatwole 68.

Warren, Minn., Nov. 6.—This city gives McKinley 196, Bryan 84, Van Sant 140, Lind 150.

Renville, Minn., Nov. 6.—Hector precinct in Renville county gave McKinley 177, Bryan 70, Van Sant 143, Lind 100. The same precinct in 1898 gave Eustis 73, Lind 132. A precinct in the village of Renville gives McKinley 127, Bryan 75, Van Sant 156, Lind 158. A precinct in the town of Emmett gives McKinley 62, Bryan 44, Van Sant 43, Lind 66. A republican gain on governor of 57 in these two precincts.

William McKinley carried Ramsey county by about 4,000 plurality. Van Sant lost the county by about 1,300.

Crookston, Minn., Nov. 6.—Seven districts out of seventy-two in Polk county give for president: McKinley 707, Bryan 460; for governor, Van Sant 570, Lind 554.

North Dakota.

Fargo, N. D., Nov. 6.—Chairman Kleinogel of the state democratic committee conceded the defat of the Bryan electors tnd the state democratic ticket in this state.

WILLIAM M'KINLEY.

The returns are coming in so slowly that it is difficult to make an estimate on the situation. From the comparative reports so far received from only about fifty precincts in the state the indications are that McKinley has carried the state by from 8,000 to 10,000 plurality.

Reports indicate that Bryan electors are running about 60 per cent behind the figures of four years ago, when the republican majority was 5,647.

Reports indicate that Governor Wipperman is running ahead of the Bryan electors in many parts of the state, but the republican majority will be too great to overcome and it is safe to say that the entire republican state ticket is elected, with the possible exception of Comstock for attorney general.

Reports from the legislative districts indicate that the democrats have made some gains, but the republicans will control both branches of the legislature by safe majorities. Republican leaders now claim the state by 12,000 for McKinley and by 10,000 for the entire state ticket. The indications are that the final count of the ballots will bear out the last claim. The vote in the state seems to have run about 50,000, which is rather lighter than the chairman of the republican committee anticipated. The weather was ideal and the farmers in some sections continued the work of flax threshing and fall plowing.

The count of the ballot is progressing very slowly and some of the heavier precincts will not be entirely completed before daylight.

Forty-two precincts in North Dakota give McKinley 1,076 majority over Bryan. The same precincts gave McKinley a majority of 501 in '96. McKinley's majority in the state is now placed at 10,000.

One-half the precincts in Pettigrew's home county give McKinley 764 majority, a big republican gain. The state legislature will probably be republican.

Six out of the nine precincts of the city of Fargo give McKinley 870, Bryan 404. In 1896 the same precincts gave McKinley 653 and Bryan 471. The six wards of Grand Forks gave McKinley a majority of 398. Returns from Cass county show that McKinley has made big gains.

Fargo, N. D., Nov. 7.—Republican state committee claims the election of McKinley electors by 12,000; state ticket by 10,000. The total number of votes is less than expected. Chairman Kleinogel of the independent democratic committee concedes the defeat of the democratic state and electoral ticket with the possible exception of John Carmody for attorney general, who is running ahead of ticket because of the opposition of prohibitionists to Comstock on account of his alleged re-submission sentiments. For congress Marshal will defeat Hildreth by a large majority. Max Wipperman, fusion candidate for governor, is running ahead of Bigan, but there are no hopes for his election.

The legislature will be republican with possible democratic gains in isolated counties. This is a summary of the democratic concessions rather than of the republican claims.

South Dakota.

Sioux Falls, Nov. 6.—In twenty-one out of forty-two precincts in this (Minnehaha) county, including the cities of Sioux Falls, Dell Rapids, Valley Springs and Garretson, McKinley has a majority of 764 over Bryan, a pronounced republican gain. This is Senator Pettigrew's home county, and as the republican legislative ticket is running well up with the head of the ticket he will lose seven members of the legislature here.

The city of Sioux Falls, complete on vote for president, gives McKinley's plurality 493 over Bryan, a republican gain of 413 over four years ago.

Eighteen precincts outside of Sioux Falls: McKinley, 2,159; Bryan, 1,243.

Huron, S. D., Nov. 6.—Sixteen out of forty-two precincts in Beadle county gave McKinley 521, Bryan 265, and the republican state ticket about the same as McKinley. E. N. Vance, senator, and A. W. Wilmarth and J. P. Davis, representatives, all republicans, are elected by 150 majority.

Parker, S. D., Nov. 7.—The chairman of the republican state central committee says Turner county will give McKinley the republican ticket by 1,000 majority.

Sioux Falls, Pettigrew's home, gives 495 plurality to McKinley.

Iowa.

Des Moines, Nov. 7.—At 1:30 it is apparent Iowa is republican by 100,000 and a solid delegation of 11 republicans will be sent to Washington. Because of the late closing of the polls all over the state, 7 o'clock, but 523 out of 2,137 precincts have been heard from. These give McKinley 299,707 and Bryan 205,842, a net republican gain of 20 to a precinct. If this ratio is maintained, and there is little doubt it will be, McKinley's plurality will be 104,000, the largest on record in the state. In 1896 McKinley's plurality in Iowa was 65,552. Chairman Weaver says:

"Iowa is McKinley by over 100,000, and we have elected all the congressmen. Rumple in the Second district, the only close district, is elected by 350 plurality."

Chairman Huffman, of the Democratic central committee, says: "We concede the state to McKinley by 50,000. We claim the election of Vollmer in the Second district."

The entire republican state ticket is elected by the largest pluralities ever rolled up in Iowa.

Milwaukee, Nov. 7.—Election returns received up to midnight indicate that Wisconsin has gone for McKinley by from 105,000 to 115,000 plurality. The republican state ticket, headed by Robert M. LaFollette, will receive a similar plurality.

The legislature will be overwhelmingly republican, and the congressional delegation is also republican.

At midnight Gen. George E. Bryant, chairman of the republican state central committee, gave out the following statement:

"We have carried the state for McKinley by from 105,000 to 115,000. La Follette is running even with McKinley and their pluralities will not differ materially. We have stopped receiving returns and have enough to show that Wisconsin will have a solid congressional delegation, and that the state legislature will be overwhelmingly republican."

Chairman A. F. Warden, of the Democratic committee, deserted his headquarters before midnight. He concedes the state to the republicans by 75,000 majority, as does also National Committeeman Timothy E. Ryan. E. C. Wall, ex-national committeeman, concedes the state to the republicans by 110,000, and all three gentlemen concede the election of 10 republican congressmen.

Des Moines, Ia.—Nov. 6.—At 10:30 this evening Chairman Weaver, of the republican state central committee, said:

"Returns from 231 precincts in Iowa, so far received, show a net gain for the republicans of seventeen votes to the precinct. This ratio carried out will mean a majority for McKinley and the state ticket in Iowa of over 100,000.

"Certainly Iowa will give that much, which would be the largest majority ever given by the state for any party."

The majority for McKiniey in 1896 was 65,000. Chairman Huffman, democrat, concedes Iowa by 50,000.

Returns show that a heavy vote has been cast all over the state. result in the congressional fights cannot yet be told, although the indications are that all the republican congressmen will be elected.

In the second and sixth districts the fight is close.

In Muscatine, in the second district, Rumple, republican, has a majority of 500. There seems no doubt that the amendment to the state constitution for biennial elections instead of annual ones has carried.

Polk county, in which is Des Moines, will give about 6,000 majority, an increase of about 2,000 for the republicans.

One hundred and sixty-three precincts out of 2,145 give McKinley 26,855, Bryan 15,281. The same in 1896 gave McKinley 25,916; Bryan, 17,308.

Twenty precincts received by the Register from all over the state give McKinley 2,224; Bryan, 1449. Net republican gain of 331.

Nebraska.

Omaha, Nov. 7.—At midnight 300 precincts out of 1,611 in the state had returned results of yesterday's election, 40 of them being in Omaha and Douglass county. A majority of them give republican gains, which, if they hold good throughout the state, will indicate a republican plurality of from 2,000 to 5,000.

However, the fusionists say the returns are not significant of the real result, and the outlying districts will overcome these gains, and give the state to Bryan by from 5,000 to 8,000.

The result of the vote on the national ticket will no doubt also determine the victories on the state ticket, both running very close together in nearly all cases.

Although not a factor, the prohibition ticket shows a gain over four years ago. It will require a pretty full count to determine the complexion of the legislature, and both sides are claiming a majority on joint ballot.

Chairman Hall, of the democratic state central committee, was reticent with regard to the result and refused to give any figures.

Chairman Lindsay, of the republican state central committee, said all their returns indicated a complete republican victory with a plurality of from 8,000 to 10,000 for McKinley, with no definite returns on the state ticket and the legislature.

Illinois.

Chicago, Nov. 6.—Chairman Rowe, of the republican central committee, gave out the following statement:

"I see no reason to change the figures of the state central committe issued before election. McKinley has carried the state by 80,000 outside of Cook county. In Cook county the indications are that both McKinley and Yates will have a majority, with McKinley in the lead by about 15,000. I estimate his plurality in Cook county at 25,000."

Chairman Watson, of the democratic state central committee, refused to concede the state to McKinley and claimed that Alschuler, democratic candidate for governor, had carried the state by a small plurality.

From returns received by him Chairman Watson also claimed that the democrats would have a working majority in the lower house of the legislature.

Judge Yates, who was at republican headquarters all evening, claimed his election as governor by a substantial majority.

Bloomington, Ill.—In Adlai E. Stevenson's home precinct the vote was: McKinley, 306; Bryan, 112.

North Carolina.

Wilmington, N. C., Nov. 6.—Bellamy (dem.) re-elected to congress in this, the sixth district, by overwhelming majority. Bryan's majority in this state estimated at 25,000. In democratic primary for United States senator, Simmons defeats Carr by large majority.

The Chinese Situation.

The cause for the present Chinese entanglements is not religious differences, but the abuse of the Chinese immigrants by the foreign powers. Another great revolution comes from the abuse of the stomach. Overtaxed digestion produces constipation, indigestion, dyspepsia and flatulency. Hostetter's Stomach Bitters is the best medicine to take. It will restore a healthy tone to the entire system, and thus prevent nervousness, sleeplessness or despondency. Don't fail to give it a trial.

CURE SICK HEADACHE.

HOW WEAK CHILDREN ARE MADE STRONG, VIGOROUS AND WELL

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Hallows, of Peckham St., Globe Village, Fall River, Mass., have cause to thank Dr. Greene's Nervura for restoring to health, and probably preserving the life of their little son. Almost from infancy Everett Hallows was troubled with indigestion and nervous troubles, and nothing seemed to help him. Finally Dr. Greene's Nervura was recommended and tried with success. A few bottles were sufficient to effect a cure, and to-day the little one is enjoying the best of health. By the use of Dr. Greene's Nervura the sickly child was transformed into a happy, hearty, robust boy.

Dr. Greene's Nervura | for the Blood and Nerves

Thousands of other children can thank Dr. Greene and his wonderful remedy for the strength and health they enjoy. Children to whom it is given have less sickness, better health, better growth, and longer and more vigorous lives. Parents should realize that it is their duty to give it to every child who is not in perfect health. There are no diseases more dreaded by parents than fits, epilepsy, and St. Vitus' dance. Yet no child would be troubled by them if Dr. Greene's Nervura were given when the first symptoms appear.

Charles L. McBay, a highly esteemed police officer, who resides at 14 Myrtle St., New Bedford, Mass., says:

"About two years ago my little daughter became run down in health and suffered from St. Vitus' dance. Soon after she was prostrated by rheumatism, which severely affected her low limbs.

"After trying various remedies without obtaining relief, she began taking Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy, and experienced immediate benefit. She continued its use, and after taking five bottles her rheumatism was practically cured. Her appetite returned, her pains disappeared, she was again able to walk without lameness, her general health was restored, and she was able to attend school and to play like other children."

Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy, is the prescription and discovery of the well-known Dr. Greene, of 35 West 14th Street, New York City, who is the most successful specialist in curing all forms of nervous and chronic complaints, and he can be consulted in any case, free of charge, personally or by letter.

Ohio.

Columbus, O., Nov. 7.—Democratic Chairman Long at midnight gave out the following:

"The returns from Hamilton and Cayahoga counties show substantial Democratic gains.

"While a majority of the country precincts reported show republican gains of five to a precinct with about 120 heard from, this ratio of gain, if kept up with corresponding Democratic gains in the cities as now indicated, will give McKinley the state at about the same as in 1896.

"Comparisons are made on the vote of 1896.

"Lentz's election to congress in the Columbus district is reasonably sure.

"We have no advices from Dayton or the Twentieth district, where we believe the Democratic candidates are elected. This means a gain of one congressman.

"The northeast part of the state will show large republican gains in counties near Pennsylvania, where there has been wholesale naturalization of Finns, Hungarians and Poles, regardless of certainty of legal residences.

"They were uniformly voted for the republican ticket. (Signed)

"GEORGE S. LONG, Chairman."

The democrats have gained about 3,000 in Cleveland and as much in Cincinnati and less in some other cities.

The republicans have gained in the rural districts and in this city—Canton, the home of the president, Akron, the home of Chairman Dick, and in a few other cities.

Democrtic State Chairman Long conceded the state to the republicans and expects a gain of one congressman over the last delegation from Ohio, in congress, which stood 16 republicans and five democrats.

Michigan.

Detroit, Nov. 7.—There was a veritable republican landslide in Michigan yesterday and President McKinley carried the state by a majority variously estimated from 75,000 to 100,000. The entire republican state ticket has also been elected, although by a smaller majority.

Mayor Maybury, of Detroit, the democratic candidate for governor, has run far ahead of his ticket. The state legislature, which elects a successor to James McMillan, will be overwhelmingly republican and Senator McMillan's re-election is a certainty. At midnight it seemed almost certain that the republicans had elected all their congressional nominees.

When seen at midnight Chairman Campau, of the democratic committee, said:

"Mr. McKinley has carried the state. The returns, however, are so meager that I cannot make any statement as to the state, congressional or executive tickets."

Chairman Deikema, of the republican state committee, was one of a jolly party celebrating the republican victory in Senator McMillan's office when he was seen at midnight.

"The state has gone republican from 75,000 to 100,000," said he. "The republicans have elected their state ticket, all their congressmen and have an overwhelming majority in the state legislature. Col. Bliss, the republican candidate for governor, will run about 10,000 behind his ticket."

Pennsylvania.

Philadelphia, Nov. 6.—The indications are that William McAleer (dem.) was defeated for re-election in the third congressional district by Henry Burk (rep.) One of the fiercest congressional fights in the country was waged in this district.

Pennsylvania's legislature is composed of 50 senators and 204 members of the house of representatives. The entire membership of the lower house was balloted for today, as was also half the senate. The other half of the senators hold over two years more, as after being chosen for a term of four years one-half of the body retiring every two years. This year twenty-six senators were voted for, the second district (part of Philadelphia) retaining a senator to fill the unexpired term of Senator Holzwarth, deceased. The incoming legislature will vote for a United States senator to succeed Quay, whose term expired March 4 last.

Maryland.

Baltimore, Nov. 6.—McKinley has carried Maryland beyond the shadow of a doubt, the only question to be settled being the size of his majority. With practically complete returns from the city he has a majority here of about 6,500, while from the state scattering returns indicate an additional surplus of 3,500, making his total majority in the state about 10,000. There is no reason to believe that the final figures will vary greatly from those given above. Chairman Vandiver of the democratic state central committee admits Bryan's defeat in the state, while Chairman Goldsborough of the republican committee says that McKinley's majority will reach 11,000 at least. It is also certain that the republicans have elected four out of the six congressmen, while the remaining two will probably be democratic, although later returns may change this outlook.

Rhode Island.

Providence, R. I., Nov. 7.—On an increased vote Bryan has made considerable gains in Rhode Island. McKinley's plurality of four years ago was 22,978.

Only half of the 143 districts in the state have been heard from, those missing including most of those in the cities, with most of the 50 in Providence. McKinley's plurality will be about 20,000, it is believed.

Providence, which in 1896 gave McKinley 8,122 plurality, while elcting a democratic mayor, has elected Granger, democrat, by a plurality of less than 1,000.

In 1896 every city and town in the state gave McKinley a plurality. The republican state committee admits a reduced plurality.

Colorado.

Denver, Col., Nov. 7.—Returns received up to 11 o'clock indicate that Colorado has given Bryan at least 30,000 plurality. The fusion state ticket is probably elected by half that plurality, and it appears that the fusionists will have a majority of the legislature. None of the counties have given full returns.

A hard fight has been made by the republicans all over the state on the legislative ticket in the interest of Senator Wolcott, who is a candidate for re-election, and it is possible that republican electors have been elected in some counties that went for Bryan.

Connecticut.

New Haven, Nov. 6.—One hundred cities and towns in Connecticut out of 168 gave Bryan 11,419, McKinley 21,965; republican net loss, 8 per cent; democratic net gain, 37 per cent. On this basis McKinley's plurality in Connecticut is estimated at 23,285. Returns from the cities and towns for governor give McLean (rep.) 21,200, Bronson (dem.) 12,673. McLean's plurality is estimated at 15,000.

Nevada.

Reno, Nev., Nov. 6.—The election passed off quietly throughout Nevada. Present indication point to Bryan anywhere between 500 and 1,000, and Newlands (dem.) for congress by 800. Legislative ticket not yet canvassed.

MINNESOTA NEWS.

Terrible Death.

Robert Pinney, an engineer employed at the government dam at Meeker island, was ground to pieces between a drum and a wire cable. The mass of flesh and torn clothing was wound up in the cable coil, and it took the workmen half an hour to gather the pieces together. It was the first fatality that has occurred at the dam.

Pinney was engineer of one of the fifty-ton cable towers. Between these two towers runs a cable which is used lower material into the dam. The engineer and his fireman, Samuel Scott, received orders to pick up a quantity of material, and the order was megaphoned to the crew on the other side of the river. After everything had been placed in readiness, Pinney stationed himself at the starting gear for the drum. Scott was at the time on the outside edge of the platform. The machinery had not been moving more then a few seconds when Scott heard Pinney scream. At first he thought it was a joke, but he ran to the drum. A horrible sight there met his eyes, and around the drum the mangled body of the engineer was being wound. The machinery was stopped, but then there was nothing more than gather the remains together.

Crime Not Increasing.

Minnesota's 25th annual prison census contradicts the common belief that crime is increasing. The figures collected by the state board of corrections and charities for the previous year were confined in state institutions, and that even this increase was due in a measure to quarantine of jails.

The prison census for 1900 is about the same as for three preceding years, when proper allowance is made for unusual circumstances which padded the figures without actually showing an increased number of criminals.

As compared with the census of 1897, the increase is only 16. Census deductions are supposed to be valuable only when complied through a long period, but the results for the past few years have been such as to enable the state board to assert that the facts do not support a belief that pauperism and and crime are growing evils.

Child Labor.

Child labor law seems to be a failure, although they have been piling up since 1803, and the state labor commission will petition the next legislature to try a more effective method of the abuses of the law which exists at present.

The law allowing the granting of excuses under which children of school age can work is said to be the most objectionable. The compulsory education law of 1885 fixes the age of school attendance at from eight to 16 years, and this is contradicted by the factory laws of 1895 and 1897 placing the age at from 14 to 16 years.

Public sentiment, according to the labor commission, does not support the enforcement of the child labor laws, and the census shows that out of 17,105 among this number are 553 boys under 16 years of age and 239 girls.

Burned to Death.

William Rapp, a brakeman on the St. Paul & Duluth division of the Northern Pacific, was burned to death in a wreck near Hinckley.

The accident happened when the limited, due in Minneapolis at 6:55, ran on a siding and collided with a freight train standing there.

Rapp was in the caboose at the time the big engine of the limited plowed through the caboose and was pinioned so he could not escape. A can of oil was broken and the inflammable fluid took fire and soon the caboose and the car ahead of it became a mass of flames.

The unfortunate brakeman could not be released and perished in the blazing wreck.

Freight Train Robbed.

There is a gang of organized train robers operating between Hopkins and Albert Lea, and although they have been at work for some time the matter was not brought to the attention of the police until recently. The robare not daring enough to attack passenger trains, but limit their work to laborers who manage to secure transportation from Albert Lea to Minneapolis on freight trains over the Minneapolis & St. Louis road. A case was reported by a man who had been held up in a freight car by two masked men and at the point of a revolver robbed of $14.60.

News in Brief.

The season for catching whitefish and trelipies in inland lakes in Minnesota will open Nov. 1 and continue until Dec. 15. According to the law, these fish cannot be caught for market and cannot be sold.

Two moose calves were unloaded at at the Great Northern station at Crookston, having been shipped from Kennedy, Kittson county, and were consigned to Grant M. Moss, state game and fish warden, Detroit, Mich. They were very fine specimens and were and were much admired during the couple of hours they remained in the station.

A Fargo lady stumbled over a ladder that had been negligently left lying on a Crookston sidewalk, and the city is asked to pay for the injuries which she sustained, which were quite serious.

The United States land office is being overwhelmed these days with correspondence relative to the opening of the four townships on the White Earth reservation, and the clerks are kept more than usually busy.

William Randall and family narrowly escaped suffocation in Minneapolis from fire caused by a lamp.

A deal is now pending whereby the Erie Button works of Erie, Penn., will buy or lease the button factory in Winona and double its capacity.

A mad dog scare agitated the people of Red Wing, and all dogs were ordered muzzled.

The striking dressmrkers of Minneapolis propose to start a co-operative establishment.

Ben Knudson, elevator boy at the Chamber of Commerce building at Duluth, was instantly killed. He was working on the top of the car, when it suddenly flew upward, crushing his head.

A large barn belonging to Mr. Quackenbush, near Le Sueur, was destroyed by fire. The tenant, John Green, colored, lost everything, as the whole season's crop was in the barn. Loss about $1,200; no insurance.

MISCELLANEOUS ITEMS.

The value of Mexican oranges sent to the United States last year was $186,948, an increase of $52,000.

It is estimated that the number of Americans in Paris is not less than 75,000, of which 35,000 are living in apartments and 40,000 are transients. They spend at least 1,500,000 francs ($30,000) per day in the French capital.

The climate of Guam is trying in the extreme. The temperature is cooler than in the Philippines, except when there occurs an interruption of the northeast trade wind, during August and September. Then the monsoons sweep over the land and the heat is almost unendurable.

One of the greatest essentials with regard to the recommendation of a London footman is not only his height, but the size and form of his legs. To suit the needs of those who have not been gifted with a well-formed leg the livery-makers supply artificial calves, which pad out the leg to a respectable size. A pair of these pads cost about five shillings.

There are millions of feet of flooring in the Philippine islands which have been hewed out with the adz. Some of the floors of the best houses of Manila are of this kind. One can see the rough places where the chips have been cut out, but the grain of the wood is so fine that, from daily sweeping and scrubbing, it has taken a polish like that of a plate glass mirror.

A good deal has been said about the precious collections of laces owned by some of the royal ladies of Europe, but it is now well known that there are several ladies in America who have laces more valuable than those owned by any European potentate. The laces of the Astor family are valued at £60,000, and those of the Vanderbilts at £100,000. More lace is bought in New York than in any other city of the world. The pope is said to own lace to the value of £175,000. Queen Victoria has £75,000 worth, while those belonging to the princess of Wales are valued at £50,000. The dress worn by her majesty at her wedding was trimmed with a magnificent piece of Honiton lace, which must have cost quite £1,000.

SAVING A SUMMER RESORT.

A Protective League to Keep Moneyed Idiots from Raising Prices.

"I spent several weeks last summer in a quaint, delightful little mountain village in South Carolina," said an old clubman the other evening, relates the New Orleans Times-Democrat, "and I found a rule in force there which could be adopted with advantage at numerous other localities. I went to the place by mere chance, and one of the first things that impressed me after my arrival was the total absence of the extortion one usually encounters at even the smallest resorts. Everything was amazingly good and reasonable, and I marveled how the natives had been kept unspoiled. One afternoon during the first week of my stay I found out. I was sitting on the porch of the little hotel when a buggy drove up and a well-dressed man descended. He was a new arrival, who had been taking a ride in the mountains. 'What do I owe you?' he asked of the countryman who drove the rig. 'Oh, I reckon a dollar's enough,' drawled the other. 'Pshaw!' exclaimed the stranger, 'it's worth more than that, Here's a two-dollar bill.'

"The money was about to change hands when a broad-shouldered chap from Louisville, who had been staying at the hotel all summer, jumped up from a chair at my side and stepped between the pair. 'Hold on!' he said, firmly. 'We can't allow that. Give the driver what he asks but no more.' 'Well, I don't see that this is any of your business,' drawled the newcomer, in great surprise. 'I propose to make it my business,' retorted the Louisville man. 'Give him a dollar and let him go.' 'I'll be hanged if I will,' said the stranger, getting red. 'I'll pay him what I blamed please.' 'Then you'll have me to lick,' said the Kentuckian, calmly, and peeled off his coat. The other man took a look at his torso and weakened. 'Oh, well,' he said, 'it isn't worth fighting about,' and with that he tossed the countryman a dollar and strode inside. 'We have to do this in self-defense,' said the Louisville man, apologetically, as he resumed his seat. 'A few of us discovered this resort, and now we're trying to keep it uncontaminated. About all the pleasant loafing-places in Europe and America have been spoiled by confounded idiots who have more money than brains and insist on overpaying for everything they get. The consequence is that they bull prices to such an extent that fellows of moderate means like myself can't afford to take a vacation, and some of us old boarders have quietly organized a protective league to hold things down to a reasonable level. We've had to lick two New Yorkers and a dude from Philadelphia, but altogether the scheme has worked first-rate.' I applied for membership immediately, and never enjoyed a visit more in my life. There ought to be branch leagues all over the country."

Japanese Immigration.

Immigration to this country from Japan has brought a higher class with the laborers, and one whose coming is a compliment to our educational system. Education is relatively hard to get in Japan, where wages are so low that a student cannot afford to support himself and go to school, too. But the public schools in San Francisco and the two great universities at Berkeley and Palo Alto are free to them, and ambitious young men of the upper classes have been glad to come to California, where they could work as servants in private households and hotels while preparing to take their degrees. To such an extent does this practice prevail that two years ago it was estimated that there were 5,000 Japanese seeking education in California alone.

Only about 1,225 were on the whole Pacific coast in 1890. In the next two years 2,634 arrived at San Francisco, and many more came by way of Victoria and the northern ports. The arrivals in San Francisco were 1,380 in 1893, 1,931 in 1894, 1,150 in 1895, 561 in 1897, 826 in 1898, 1,667 in 1889, and 2,664 for the fiscal year just ended.—Ainslee's Magazine.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases of of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

Motherhood

$5,000 REWARD

Owing to the fact that some skeptical people have from time to time questioned the genuiness of the testimonial letters we are constantly publishing, we have deposited with the National City Bank, of Lynn, Mass., $5,000 which will be paid to any person who will show that the following testimonials are not genuine, or were published before obtaining the writers' special permission. — LYDIA E. PINKHAM MEDICINE CO.

How shall a mother who is weak and sick with some female trouble bear healthy children?

How anxious women ought to be to give their children the blessing of a good constitution!

Many women long for a child to bless their home, but because of some debility or displacement of the female organs, they are barren.

Preparation for healthy maternity is accomplished by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound more successfully than by any other medicine, because it gives tone and strength to the parts, curing all displacements and inflammation.

Actual sterility in women is very rare. If any woman thinks she is sterile, let her write to Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass., whose advice is given free to all expectant or would-be mothers.

Mrs. A. D. Jarret, Belmont, Ohio, writes:

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I must write and tell you what your Vegetable Compound has done for me. Before taking your medicine I was unable to carry babe to maturity, having lost two—one at six months and one at seven. The doctor said next time I would die, but thanks to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, I did not die, but am the proud mother of a six months old girl baby. She weighs nineteen pounds and has never seen a sick day in her life. She is the delight of our home."

Mrs. Whitney's Gratitude.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—From the time I was sixteen years old till I was twenty-three I was troubled with weakness of the kidneys and terrible pains when my monthly periods came on. I made up my mind to try your Vegetable Compound, and was soon relieved. The doctor said I never would be able to go my full time and have a living child, as I was constitutionally weak. I had lost a baby at seven months and half. The next time I continued to take your Compound: and I said then, if I went my full time and my baby lived to be three months old, I should send a letter to you. My baby is now seven months old and is as healthy and hearty as any one could wish. I cannot express my gratitute to you. I was so bad that I did not dare to go away from home to stay any length of time. Praise God for Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound; and may others who are suffering do as I did and find relief. Wishing you success in the future as in the past, and may many homes be brightened as mine has been."—MRS. L. Z. WHITNEY, 4 Flint St., Somerville, Mass."

BUFFALO GAZETTE

DELANO, FRIDAY, Nov. 9, 1900.

OFFICIAL PAPER OF THE VILLAGE OF DELANO.

DELANO DIARY

—Fairday in Delano tomorrow, Saturday Nov. 10.

—Read inside of this paper for election returns of states.

—Dr. A. A. Ames was elected on the Republican ticket Mayor of Minneapolis.

—Three cases of smallpox are quarantined in the south west corner of Franklin town.

—During August we understand the patrons of the Delano creamery consumed 2250 lbs of butter.

—The returns show that Wright county went republican for all candidates except Sheriff and County Commissioner from the third district.

—On Wednesday Eph Ball announced that, now that McKinley is elected, I am going to expand; and borrow $2800. and in company with my brother-in law buy another farm.

—John Sherry has sold his farm and purchased the house on Third Street lately built by Mr. Strauch which he will occupy next week. Mr. Frazee will move into Miss White's house on North Third Street.

—Quite a numbef of bets were made on Lind and Van Sant by some of Delano's sportsmen on Wednesday. The returns being shown to come in and both States Central Committees claiming to have won.

—The troublesome drain down the alley back of W. D. Freeman's residence is being connected with the ditch on Bridge street. Quite an improvement. Several other places need attention notably the pond in the rear of Gross' and Maxfield's residences. It should be drained.

—Election is over. It was more than usually quiet during the day, in Delano. Early in the morning a few flakes of snow fell; then the sun came out and the weather was fine. A large vote was polled in both Franklin and Delano. Sixty three women voted in the village; in the town three women voted.

—A terrible death must have been that of the little three years old daughter of Frank Meka, of Independence, who; while playing with kerosene and matches got her clothing on fire, and while an older child ran to the field to tell her mother, died. She was buried here on Wednesday. The family have the sympathy of the community.

—Mrs. Andrew Williams who lives south of town, fell, on the cellar steps, this morning, and fractured her leg, below the knee. Being alone in the house she crawled up stairs and waited for someone to come along; consequently had no assistance until the afternoon, when the limb was dressed and the patient made as comfortable as possible.

Robert Goshant, of Albion lost a valuable cow last week by eating sugar beets.—Messenger.

It is astonishing how many voters failed to mark their ticket properly. About 30 that were, evidently intended for Bryan, were wrongly marked and were thrown out by the judges of election in Franklin. Quite a number shared the same fate in Delano village Voters ought to be careful and not disfranchise themselves. A few marked opposite two for Governor, thereby voting for none. A voting school is in order, to learn people how to mark and cast their ballots.

Political Claims.

MAPLE PLAIN, Nov. 6. 1900

This is the 40th anniversary of Abraham Lincoln's first election as President of the United States. There have been marvelous changes since then in this country as well as in many other nations. In fact from the time Mother Eve partook of the forbidden fruit, in the Garden of Eden, there has been unrest and discontent.

It was my good fortune to hear at Buffalo, on last Thursday evening the Hon. Senator Knute Nelson speak. The Court House was packed full and Mr. Nelson gave us a talk of about two hours I should think. He was not abusive to the other side, but worked quite hard to make out his side of the case. While there were many things to commend, there were many things to which I took exception. I noticed that he said nothing about Mark Hanna and the poor working man's full dinner pail. That was too small for a man like Nelson to mention. He said in his speech, we acquired the Philippine Islands by conquest, and they are ours. He referred several times to the Democratic gospel. but said nothing about the Sulton, taking the religious creed from the book of Mormon. He also spoke of the Trinity, of which Aguinaldo was the head, one was the Kansas City convention, and the other was going around the country making speeches meaning Bryan. He also said that Aguinaldo was the Democrat's George Washington. In conclusion he said boys vote for Billy McKinley and the whole Republican ticket. He also quoted a part of the army song. "Just Before the Battle Mother". This is what he quoted:

"Tell the traitors all around you
That their cruel words we know.
In every battle kill our soldiers. By the help they lend the foe."

This said he is what our soldiers are now singing over in the Philippines, and I suppose he meant this for the Democrats.

Four year ago the Democrats were traitors because they beleived in free silver, and now they are troitors because they do not believe in a war of subjugation, and conquest. and because they do not believe in right our flag should float over an Island filled with slaves and concubines, and protected by the United States.

If the Democratic is as vile and full of filthy meanness as the Republicans tell about they had better inaugurate a war at home and kill us fellows off and then perhaps, they will have a clean government They repeat that same old story "we have no kings, but Caesar"

PIETY IN BASKET FACTORY.

Religious Fervor of Employes Compels a Total Suspension of Work.

Owing to the results of a revival held at Sharpstown, Md., at the Methodist church a large basket factory had to close down recently. Soon after eight o'clock the other morning about 30 young women employed in the factory became so affected with religious fervor that they began to sing, pray and shout.

The men at work in another department were attracted to the scene. The proprietor of the factory, who is a Methodist, was called. He made no effort to control the girls, but told them to shout and rejoice and he would pay them as much for this as for working.

News of the unexpected demonstration spread, and so many persons visited the factory that the work was brought to a standstill. Probably 500 persons visited the factory, and, without stopping for food or rest, the services were continued until late in the afternoon, when the people went to their homes exhausted. Several conversions were reported.

SEARCHLIGHT FIRE ENGINE.

An Addition to the New York Fire Service Which Costs More Than a First-Class Pumping Engine.

Fire Commissioner Scannel, of New York, has closed a contract with a fire engine manufacturing company for the purchase of the Croker searchlight fire engine. Chief Croker, at whose instance the machine was built, said that it had demonstrated its usefulness in the department and was a success. At a fire in Mercer street the engine did excellent work by lighting up not only the front of the building but the various floors as well. The firemen were thus enabled to locate the fire and strike it from the rear, as well as the front. The contract price of the engine was $5.900. The engine is more expensive than a first-class pumping engine, which costs $4,700.

Lucky for Ladysmith.

The bicycle and the motocycle have done much to deprive horseflesh of its value in many civilized countries. But if the bicycle and the motocycle had driven the horses out of Ladysmith, says the Chicago Inter Ocean, the beleaguered inhabitants would now be short of their daily rations.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Regular Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, D. C. Nov. 2, 1900.

Chairman Richardson, of the Democratic Congressional Campaign Committee, who has been dividing his time between the New York branch of national headquarters and Washington, returned to Washington this week. The work of the committees, both national and congressional is done, and the result is in the hands of the voters. Mr. Richardson is confident that democratic victory is in sight and that it will include a majority of Congress as well as the Presidency. Said Mr. Richardson: "The reports received at democratic headquarters in New York from the different state chairmen are most encouraging and full of confidence of success at the polls." Of Mr. Bryan's extraordinary reception during his speaking tour of New York, Mr. Richardson said: "There is not another man in the world that could create enthusiasm equal to that aroused by Mr. Bryan on his trip through New York. It was marvelous. There is nothing like it on record."

If proof were needed that the life of a private in the U. S. army under existing conditions is not a pleasent one, it is furnished by the annual report of the Adjutant General, just made public, which shows that there were 3,993 desertions during the last fiscal year. The large repectable element which oppose the "army canteen" are given a slap in the face by the report, which says that the "army canteen" has grown to be an absolute necessity and that a business of $1,915 862, with a net profit of $464.504, was done by them during the year.

The growth of the U. S. in population during the past ten years – nearly 21 per cent – as shown by the official figures given out this week – 76,295,220 has been entirely satisfactory. Wheher the same can be said of the growth, manliness, independence, and political intelligence cannot be positively stated until after the election, which will show whether a majority of the voters will vote their known convictions or will allow themselves to be driven to the polls and to vote as the local bosses in the pay of the trusts shall dictate. American manhood vs. serfdom is an issue as well as the republic vs. the empire.

Mr. John M. Sherrouse, a New Orleans business man and a brother-in-law of Representative Robertson, of La., was in Washington this week. He said of the political outlook: "I hope that Bryan will win. I am opposed to aggressive expansion and also to benevolent assimilation through the cannon's mouth. In the case of the Philippines we are attempting to conquer lands thousands of miles away and assimilate a people whom Infinate Wisdom has made so different as to render all our efforts fruitless. We have already an alien race with us that has grown into an national problem, and it will be only adding fuel to bring more alien races in."

How some New York republicans regard Mr. Bryan may be judged by these remarks, made in Washington by Mr. W. D. Pearson, a prominent member of the New York bar: "I don't believe there ever has been a Presidential candidate who was so deserving of success as is Mr. Bryan. I am bound by principle, as a good republican, to cast my vote against him, but I could almost cheer if I learned that he was elected. He is absolutly sincere, and just such a man as would make a good President. I think there are a good many more republicans in the empire state who think as I do, and the republican leaders are not at all certain of carrying the State"

Some idea of republican methods in West Virginia may be had from the following statment, made by Mr. H. M. Richards, of Wheeling: "Hanna is working hard to capture West Virginia. When I left Wheeling the two Circuit Court judges were working overtime to naturalize the gangs of foreigners run into the State by Steve Elkins and the Republican Campaign Committee. It is the most disgraceful incident in the history of the Commonwealth."

The prediction made some weeks ago by Senator -elect Blackburn, that the republicans intended to try to carry Kentucky by the use of a small army of U. S. deputy marshalls, has been fully verified by the news of the week, even to the name of the man who is at the head of the movement Judge Evans of Louisville. The desperate sort of move, togather with things of the same kind in other close states, makes it evident that the republican bosses are far from being as confident of Mr. McKinley's re-election as they pretend to be. Men who believe they can win fairly and squarely do not resort to illegal methods to gain votes.

The demoratic managers of the campaign believe now as they have believed from the first that Bryan and Stevenson have a good fighting chance to win, and they are going to keep on believing and fighting until the last ballot has been deposited, and then they are going to keep a close watch to see that there is no trickery in the counting. They have been through too many campaigns to be frightened by republican assumption of confidence.

Carrying out Instructions.

Now that the administration has been indorsed, by such an overwhelming majority interested parties are prepairing to carry out prosperity with a vengance. Prices of meats have been advanced in Chicago one cent per pound by butchers and middlemen who claim to have been doing business at a loss! Consequently retailers are forced to a raise on account of loss of bone and other offal, of five cents per pound, causing laboring men and other consumers to pay about one fourth more for meat or go without one fourth the amount. The stock raiser and farmer don't just see where he is benefited by the raise either.

Mr. Proctor of the Senate committee on military affairs has already urged the president to call for an increase of the army which according to laws made at the last session should be back to 27,000 in July next. He wants a standing army of from 55,000 to 60,000 men with the priviledge given the president to make it 100,000 when he pleases to do so. If we are to hold the Philippines, keep Cuba in subjection and tax the Porto Ricans more than others this will be necessary.

Admiral Crowninshield is out in a demand for an increase in the number of officers and men in the navy. He claims that there is now 131 vacancies on the list of naval officers, and that there is not men enough to man our present fleet to say nothing of our new vessels. He wants laws to increase the numbers, and that at once. Only 237 seamen have enlisted in the last year.

Admiral Crowninshield wants Congress to authorize an expenditure of $600,000 for seamen's quarters at New York and at League Island $100,000; to be made immediately available What do we want of all these men and expenditures, if we are going to continue a peaceful republic and depend upon our volunteer soldiers in times of necesity?

Of 8813 enlistments in the navy there were 86 deaths and 2452 desertions.

Secretary of the Navy Long will ask for $37,000,000 for naval expenses for next year.

The grand total of naval and military expenses is figured at $215,000,000.

It looks as if our administration is preparing to conquor the world or satisfy those who desire militarism to the fullest extent.

War Still Going.

MANILA, Nov. 11.—The results of the elections in the United States have been quietly recived here. So far as the Filipinos are concerned, no noticable change in the situtions has ensued, nor is any likely to occur in immediate future. They are for the greater part non committal.

News of the outcome will slowly work its way through the country to the armed insurgents, where the assurance to the leaders that Mr. Bryan would certainly be elected must first be overcome.

Last week's scouting resulted in several minor engagements with what the official reports describe as "small casualties," namely, four Americans killed and ten wounded.

FROM reports at the front in China, it is claimed that the Chinease were the first to discover America. If we keep on digging up old records we may find shat we are not in America but some other land.

Admiting the facts that the Chinemen were on this continent in 499 a. d. and the Norsemen in about 1000 a. d. history still shows that Columbus was the first to discover the road to this continent to the advantage of civilization. A.

Another Corporation Attorney Heard From.

Judge Wilson's Congratulations.

Among the telegrams of congratulation received by President McKinley was the following from Judge Thomas Wilson, once democratic candidate for governor of the State of Minnesota.

"No party has ever been more misrepresented and abused: no one has conducted himself with more dignity and none has received a more deserved and flattering indorsement. Though a democrat, I heartily congratulate you and the country. Our party had no candidate."

This is a pretty bad break for Judge Thomas Wilson, who ran as the Democratic nominee for Governor of Minnesota a few years ago, but when many of his party wanted him to run the second time, accept a situation with one of the railroads. Dan Lawler is attorney for an other railroad. Now they are agreed in sending such slurs on the party to McKinley as congratulations, or in otherwise opposing Jeffersonian democracy in its purity. Out on all such "democrats". We want none of them. In trying to belittle Mr. Bryan, in the eyes of the public such men only make his pure character to shine forth in radient splendor in contrast with those whose principles apparently have become perverted, with a change in position from a democratic candidate to a railroad attorney.

Wants Army Increrse.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 11.—Senator Proctor of the senate committee on military affairs and Adjutant General Corbin of the war department held an informal conference with the president yesterday, relative to the legislation to be asked of congres in connection with the proposed increase of the regular army.

"Under the existing law," said Senator Proctor, at the conclusion of the conference, "the present strength of the army—65,000 regulars and 35,000 volunteers—will be reduced on the first day of next July to 27,000 regulars This is an absurdly small number, and congress will be asked by the president to recognize the army upon a larger basis. It will be impossible to keep any troops in the Philippines unless the army is increased, to say nothing of the garrisons for the forts in this country.

"My own judgement is that congress will provide a regular army of about 55,000 or 60,000 men with discretion given the president to raise the the total to 100,000 if he finds the larger number necessary. I have no doubt that this legislation will be enacted at the coming session."

As to the Philippines

It seems to us to early to decide that the permanent retention of the Philippine Islands is desirable, as the Beverage resolution declared: it is also unnecessary to make such a dicision now. The whole question is so new, its conditions are so different with those which have attended our other territorial acquisitions that it is not easy to find where the balance of advantage lies, to the Filipinos and to ourselves. Time will throw much light upon the subject.—Boston Transcrip.

After Election Thoughts.

"And the Jews cried: Away with Him! Crucify Him! We have no king but Cesar," In substance this is what Mark Hanna and Roesevelt have been saying of Bryan. They said "Bryanism must be killed now and forever," and in their own imaginations they have done it. But many learned men, Republicans as well as Democrats, say W. J. Bryan has no peer in this country as a Statesman, and logician, the only trouble is he is no tool, or foot ball, and wears no padlock on his mouth. "And not a bone of him shall be broken."

Yes the Republicans have swept everything from the Lakes of the North to the Rio Grande, and from ocean to ocean, and we hope our Republican friends are cognizant of the fact that upon them, only, rest the responsibility of legislating for this country giving to the people equal and just rights, civil and religous liberty. You have a solemn duty to perfom. You will be held responsible by your fellow man and your God for what you do, during the next four years, and you should have sober thoughts now. Instead of chuckling over your great victory, and making faces at your Democratic friends; Democrats who have helped to make and build up the country; Democrats who aks no man for a living, who pay their taxes and who you depend upon for trade and patronage. But what did you call Democrats in 1896, traitors and disloyal to our country becaunse we believed in free silver, a money dicitated to us by Congress according to the Constitution of the United States? What have you called us in 1900? We have it filed away in cold print, as it came from the mouth of your Gumbo vice President Roosevelt, in his speech at St. Paul. Minn., July 19, 1900. These are some of the words he said in that July speech: "Study thes Kansas City platform and you cannot help realizing that their policy is the policy of infamy (public disgrace.) They stand for lawlessness and disorder, for dishonesty and dishonor, for licence and disaster at home, and cowardly shrinking from duty aboard." In 1900 they call us all this and more too, because we do not believe in waging a war of subjugation against the Filipinos with the army canteen as an annex or appendage that is demoralizing our young men, and bringing on premature death, to say nothing of houses of infamy. They call us disloyal because we do not believe in the American flag floating over the Island of Sulu and its Sutan that has slaves, plurality of wives and concubines. Search your little library and perhaps you will find some where a copy of the Mormons And he said: "Show me the tribute money. And they brought unto him a penny.

And He saith unto them, whose is this image and superscription?

They say unto Him, Cæsar's. Then saith He unto them. Render therefore unto Cæaser the things which are Cesar's; and unto God the things that are God's."

The Republican party cannot during the next four years hold the mean, disloyal, disorderly Democrats responsible for anything whatever. We have nothing to do only watch the Republicans take in the sheckles.

Now if the Democratic party is as the Republicans report them to be, we should be put in exile; guarded by gunboats, rough riders, and a missionary cabinet; our right of franchise should be taken from us, until we become educated by the Republican party. But unfortunately for us we are not living on the Island of Sulu. We are free American citizen claiming the rights by the Constitution of the United States and the flag, to think, speak and vote our sentiments.

The Republicans now have the power to make or unmake anything they see fit or want without asking the Democrats, Tom Walker, or any other man. We hope you fellows will like your job, give us a right law, and just administration; a home for the homeless, and full dinner pail with a cromo of Mark Hanna attached.

A free Democrat not coerced.

Trouble For Blackburn.

Pioneer Press Cable Services

WASHINGTON, Nov 14.—J. S. Blackburn, who recently was elected to the United States senate by the Kentucky legislature, may never take his seat in that body. The right to his seat will be inquired into throughly and the method used in securing his election probed to the bottom. Blackburn owes his lection to the operations of the Goobel law. Which is objectionable to all the Republicans. While no definite plan has been agreed upon by the Republican members of the senate sure that Mr Blackburn is entitled to to bar out the Kentuckian, they make will his seat before he is allowed to take the oath of office.

PIETY IN BASKET FACTORY.

Owing to the results of a revival held at Sharpstown, Md., at the Methodist church a large basket factory had to close down recently. Soon after eight o'clock the other morning about 30 young women employed in the factory became so affected with religious fervor that they began to sing, pray and shout.

The men at work in another department were attracted to the scene. The proprietor of the factory, who is a Methodist, was called. He made no effort to control the girls, but told them to shout and rejoice and he would pay them as much for this as for working.

News of the unexpected demonstration spread, and so many persons visited the factory that the work was brought to a standstill. Probably 500 persons visited the factory, and, without stopping for food or rest, the services were continued until late in the afternoon, when the people went to their homes exhausted. Several conversions were reported.

SEARCHLIGHT FIRE ENGINE.

An Addition to the New York Fire Service Which Costs More Than a First-Class Pumping Engine.

Fire Commissioner Scannel, of New York, has closed a contract with a fire engine manufacturing company for the purchase of the Croker searchlight fire engine. Chief Croker, at whose instance the machine was built, said that it had demonstrated its usefulness in the department and was a success. At a fire in Mercer street the engine did excellent work by lighting up not only the front of the building but the various floors as well. The firemen were thus enabled to locate the fire and strike it from the rear, as well as the front. The contract price of the engine was $5,000. The engine is more expensive than a first-class pumping engine, which costs $4,700.

HER BEAUTIFUL HAIR.

For love and for life you have left me but this:
Only a ringlet to clasp and to kiss!
After the fear, and the tear, and the prayer,
Only a tress of your beautiful hair—
Of your silken, soft, shadowy, beautiful hair!

Hair that Love crowned—that his fingers unwound
In moments when even the Silent seemed sound,
And speech was immortal! When the rise and the fall
Of a flower on your beautiful bosom said all!
And earth moved in music and Love was Love's thrall.

For love and for life you have left me but this:
All gold to my glance, dear, but cold to my kiss!
You have left me but this, and to feel, and to know
The dear brow that wore it lies dreamless below
The green o' the meadow—the white o' the snow.

You have left me but this, of your love and your trust;
The love that lies dreamless in daisies and dust;
But over my heart, in the night of despair,
I shall feel the soft fall of your beautiful hair
'Till I drift to God's Morning and meet with you There.

'TWOULD BE A PITY

So She Made Up Her Mind Not to Spoil His Holiday.

"THE IMPUDENT young scoundrel," cried Mr. Morgan Welch, pushing back his spectacles and glaring ferociously at the letter he held in his hand. "'Many thanks for berth. Am coming down by 2:30 train to have a look round, if you will allow me.—Yours, respectfully, Leo Tunbridge.' That's a fine letter for a secretary to write to his new master! I'll see him hanged before I'll let him look round. It's monstrous!"

"Perhaps he only wants to see what the village is like, uncle," suggested Amy Welch, diffidently. "Being a Londoner, he is sure to think it quiet."

"I don't care a button what he thinks, and I'm not going to alter the village to please anybody, least of all a private secretary. I dare say you'd like me to get a switchback railway and a big wheel down, just to make the poor young man feel more at home. Bah! I've no patience with you."

"But you don't understand me, uncle," protested Amy. "It is natural that Mr. Tunbridge should wish to look around before settling down. There are such a lot of curious places to see, and young Londoners—"

"I want a secretary, not a land surveyor," interrupted Mr. Welch, refusing to be pacified. "Get your hat on, Amy, and run down to the station. You'll be in good time to send him back."

"To send him back," gasped Amy. "Impossible, uncle. You've engaged him."

"Tell him," went on the old man, obstinately, "that I have changed my mind, and that he is perfectly welcome to sue me for compensation. I won't have him in here at any price."

It was a very timid, shrinking figure which stood on the platform of Easby Station as the 2:30 train steamed boisterously in. The girl's first impulse when she saw the door of a third-class compartment opening to the grip of a bronzed hand, was to rush to the notice board and pretend to be studying the time table, but an officious porter was just wheeling a heavy truck behind her, and she was obliged to stand her ground, and strive to look dignified and businesslike. This was an uphill task, seeing that her cheeks were already glowing with a most unprofessional color.

"Mr. Leo Tunbridge, I presume?" she said, bravely confronting the tall, handsome young man who had jumped out of the carriage. "I—I have come to meet you."

He lifted his cap and smiled at her with every feature of his good-humored boyish face.

"That is very kind of you," he said, at his ease in a moment. "Really, it is quite a novelty to find anyone waiting for me when I get out of a train. All my life I've been accustomed to meeting other people and helping them to unearth their boxes from overcrowded vans, and no one ever thought of doing the same for me until now. I haven't any baggage this time, though; it's coming on by a later train. Is your father quite ready for me?"

"Mr. Welch is my uncle," stammered poor Amy, bewildered by the stranger's flow of language. "My father's out in India."

"How charming! So is mine," went on Leo Tunbridge, determined to be agreeable. "I shouldn't be at all surprised to hear that they know each other by sight. It's an awfully small world, and I'm told that everybody is on nodding terms with everybody else out there. Shall we go out now? I'm just longing to get a look at your beautiful village. Let me see, wasn't Lord Byron born here? No? I was always given to understand—"

"Please wait a moment until I ask the porter what time you can go back," interrupted Amy, in desperation. "I'm afraid you will have to wait for an hour or two, but there's a copy of Addison's Spectator in the gentlemen's room, and a few odd volumes of Whittaker's Almanac. You'll find a lot of pages torn out, and some of them are scribbled on, but you won't mind that, will you?"

"I don't gather what you're talking about in the least," said the mystified young man. "Go back! Why, I came down here to stop. Your uncle engaged me to be his secretary, and told me I could start when I liked. There's nothing about Whittaker's Almanac and waiting rooms in the contract."

"Go back while there is time," she pleaded, "and don't ask me any questions. Believe me, I am advising you for the best. My uncle is such a queer old man, and he will hurt your feelings terribly. You will never know when you are safe with him—he acts so strangely sometimes."

"Bless my soul, is he mad?" cried Leo, opening his eyes to their widest extent.

"No, no!"

"Then I don't see why I should go back. Thanks, ever so much, Miss Welch, but I couldn't think of turning tail now. Come along, please; there's no room to talk in this station."

He moved briskly toward the exit, and the only course she could take was to follow him. After all, she thought, it would be easier to tell him the bad news later on, and there was no reason why he should not be allowed a glimpse of the village before he went.

So she led the way into the hay-scented lane, and, laughed in spite of herself at the quaint remarks he made. Everything seemed to afford him delight.

"Mr. Tunbridge," cried Amy, in the midst of one of his rhapsodies, "hide somewhere, quick! O, do look sharp! Uncle is coming down the lane."

"Let him," said Leo, tranquilly. "I don't care."

"But he mustn't see you, he really mustn't! O, don't stand there like a dummy!"—with a petulant stamp of her dainty foot. "Hide, I beseech you!"

"But why in the name of goodness should I—"

"Quick!" whispered Amy, gripping his arm in determined fashion, and pushing his reluctant body to the hedge. "Jump into the ditch, and don't come out until I give the word."

"Miss Welch—"

"I shall get into trouble if you don't," she urged, giving him a glance

SHOT A PIERCING GLANCE AT AMY.

from her violet eyes which made his heart beat a little faster.

Without another word he jumped into the ditch and melted out of sight, and a few moments later old Welch came panting along.

"Have you sent him back, Amy?" he asked, excitedly.

"Indeed, uncle, I—"

"Answer me!" he cried, in a fierce bellow. "Have — you — sent — him — back?"

"No," she answered, setting her lips tightly and preparing herself for the worst.

"Then heaven be praised!" cried the old man, in a tone of such intense relief that Amy was struck dumb with astonishment. "I can't manage without a secretary another hour, and even a scoundrel like Tunbridge will be better than nobody. Where is the cheeky young blackguard?"

There was a rustle in the ditch, and Leo, alert and smiling, sprang up like a Jack-in-the-box.

"Here, sir, at your service," he said, cheerfully.

Mr. Welch blinked furiously, choked a little, and then shot a piercing glance at Amy. She met it without flinching, and he turned with a jerk to Leo.

"Are you hungry, young man?" he asked.

"Just a little, sir."

"Too hungry to work?"

"Not at all. Could work for hours without a morsel."

"Then come to the manor at once. I've lost my spectacles, and I want you to find 'em for me."

"I believe the old man is getting quite fond of me," remarked Leo Tunbridge, a year later. "He doesn't throw his penwiper at me half so often as he used to."

"That's because you're not afraid of him," answered Amy, with a laugh. "If you jumped every time he shouted, or made blots when he kicked your leg under the table, as your unfortunate predecessor had a habit of doing, he would simply delight in torturing you."

"He actually wanted to send me away yesterday," said Leo.

"To send you away!" cried Amy, in sudden alarm. "O, surely not!"

"Only for a holiday, Amy," explained the young man, coming nearer to her and quietly capturing her hand. "Of course, I shan't go—at least, not unless you go, too."

She blushed furiously, and made a feeble attempt to withdraw her hand. "Don't be absurd!" she cried. "How can I go with you?"

"You can make it a honeymoon, dear," he whispered. "What do you say?"

Just for a moment she hesitated.

"It would be a pity to spoil your holiday, Leo," she murmured, happily, "I will go."—London Telegraph.

The number of farms in the United States by the last census is 5,800,000, an increase since 1890 of about a million and a quarter.

The German mails have been closed to sausages; so you will be no longer able to write to your friend in Berlin: "Inclosed find four sausages."

The Hawaiian band is known to every visitor to Honolulu and to the popular music world everywhere. It has just completed 30 years of continuous existence, and the present bandmaster, Capt. Henri Berger, has been in charge of the organization during 28 years of that period.

The census shows that the United States stands fourth in population among the great peoples of the world. The following table shows the relative positions:

China, 386,853,029; India (British), 221,172,952; Russia, 118,014,187; United States of America, 76,295,220; Germany, 52,279,901; Austro-Hungary, 41,231,342; Japan, 40,435,064; France, 38,343,192; Great Britain and Ireland, 38,104,975; Italy, 28,459,628; Turkey, 27,884,000; Spain, 17,565,632.

According to the New York papers, Charles Alvord, the man who stole $700,000 from the First national bank, was one of the committee of three experts appointed by the directors of the bank to devise a system of bookkeeping that would make stealing impossible. He would be much more capable of writing a book on "Stealing Made Easy."

The cotton crop of this country amounted to only 5,000,000 pounds in 1793; last year it was about 5,500,000,000 pounds, representing about three-quarters of the entire crop of the world, and valued at $350,000,000. It called 9,500,000 bales, and the loss by waste incidental to the process of taking samples was not less than $7,000,000.

The island of Guam is shaped like the sole of a shoe, and has presumably a total area of about 150 square miles, although it has never been surveyed. The narrowest part has a diameter of seven miles and is about 15 miles in length. The water there is not good to drink, but it is not missed, for when anybody is thirsty a native climbs a tree and throws down a cocoanut, the milk of which is a refreshing beverage.

Devotees of golf are fond of referring to it as "the ancient and royal game," but probably more royal and certainly far more ancient than most of them have any idea of. At all events a pictured tablet was recently unearthed at Carchemish, the old capital of the Hittites, whereon are depicted men and women engaged in a pastime, which, if not exactly golf as played at present, is something extraordinarily like it.

It is a singular fact that more than half of the present population of the United States, or their parents, have lived in the 159 principal cities of the nation at some time during their lives. The cities of 25,000 or more have been largely influential in making the United States the greatest people on the earth, but back of them, and pushing them on, has been the power of the farms which have created and maintained the cities.

Pneumatic tubes for carrying messages are an old story in the largest European cities. But the largest in use there, those in London, are only three inches in diameter. It is only in the United States that the whole bulk of letter mail is handled between given points. In New York a tube reaching to Brooklyn is 3½ miles long and eight inches in diameter, allowing the passage of a pouch containing 600 letters in about seven minutes.

Chronicles of days long before those of Abraham have been unearthed from the desert sands of Mesopotamia. Dr. Herman V. Hilprecht, curator of the Babylonian section of the University of Pennsylvania museum, returned to Philadelphia from Asia Minor and told of the discovery of the library of the temple of Baal at Nippur. In it were found records of a civilization dating back thousands of years before Christ. Dr. Hilprecht with reason regards this discovery as perhaps the most important archæological work of the nineteenth century.

A German inventor has designed a "musical doorkeeper" which will do away with other kinds of burglar alarms. By means of a weight that passes over a series of reeds at the top of the door, the opening and shutting of the door is marked by a series of musical notes. One can tell by the quick or slow succession of notes whether the door has been opened or shut, quickly and just how far it has been opened or shut. There will be no more sneaking into the house with your shoes in your hand after the lodge meeting.

The total cost of the Pan-American exposition to be held in Buffalo, N. Y., next summer is estimated at $10,000,000. Director General Buchanan, of the executive committee, says that the resources now in sight amount to about $6,000,000. Progress on the work of construction is proceeding rapidly, nearly 5,000 workmen now being employed. The "Midway" at the exposition will cost $3,000,000. The exposition grounds will be half a mile wide and a mile and a quarter long, and will comprise 350 acres. It will open May 1, 1901.

THE NATION'S FINANCES.

United States Treasurer Roberts Makes His Report on the Conditions of the Treasury.

Washington, Nov. 13.—The annual report of the treasurer of the United States, Ellis H. Roberts, on the operations and condition of the treasury, was submitted to Secretary Gage Monday. Mr. Roberts says the growth and prosperity of the country and the general activity of business are reflected in the transactions of his office.

The net ordinary revenues of the government for the fiscal year were $567,240,-862, the largest in the history of the country, exceeding those of 1866, the next highest, by $47,291,288. The increase of $51,-280,232 over the preceding year was contributed from all the general sources, but chiefly from customs and internal revenue. On the side of the expenditures there was a net decrease of $117,358,388 in comparison with 1899, so that the deficiency of $89,111,560 for that year was converted into a surplus of $79,527,060 in 1900. The gross receipts under warrant, including those on account of the public debt, were $1,387,299,262, and the disbursements, $1,195,943,472, a large increase on both sides over the previous year.

Promptly on the enactment of the new financial law the divisions of issue and redemption therein provided for were established, and to them were transferred the records and accounts relating to the issue and redemption of United States notes, gold certificates, silver certificates and currency certificates. Up to October 1, 1900, $22,530,854 in United States notes and $3,-594,708 in treasury notes were redeemed in gold out of the reserve fund of $150,000,000. Each day the notes so redeemed were exchanged for gold from the general fund, so that the reserve was kept intact in amount and character. Besides this reserve fund, the trust funds, consisting of gold coin, silver dollars and bullion, and United States notes, amounted on the day the act became a law to $723,082,283, and increased by November 1, 1900, to $740,965,679.

As the receipts of the treasury were greater than the needs of the government, measures were adopted by the secretary of the treasury for the purpose of restoring the surplus moneys to the general circulation, these measures including prepayment of interest and an offer to purchase four and five per cent. bonds up to $25,000,-000, and notice that the $25,364,500 then outstanding of the two per cent. loan of 1891 would be paid on presentation. Up to November 1 the redemptions under this notice were $23,109,500, leaving $2,255,000 outstanding. The bond purchases under the call for four and five per cents. amounted to $19,300,650, with an additional $2,373,502 for premiums.

The exchange of five per cents., the old four per cents. and the new three per cents. for two per cent. consols, under the provisions of the financial act, has proceeded steadily. The total amount of the exchangeable securities outstanding was $839,146,340, and by June 30, $307,125,450, or 36.6 per cent. of them had been converted into the new twos. The premiums allowed under the provisions of the law amounted to $30,773,552, and in the transactions $30,404,950 was paid out of the treasury, after the adjustments of interest and some other accounts. The saving of interest effected by the operation is placed at $42,592,771, and the net saving at $8,604,317. On October 1, out of $296,755,130 in bonds held by the treasurer as security for the circulating notes of national banks, $263,075,000 were new twos.

The aggregate amount of money of all kinds in circulation on October 1, 1900, is estimated at $2,113,294,983, an increase of $180,-810,744 in 15 months, of which $94,440,930 was due to the enlarged use of gold and gold certificates. The increase per capita was from $25.38 to $27.01. The per capita of gold at the latter date was $10.60, which is greater than that of all the currency in 1862, while the total of gold is greater than all the circulation at any time previous to July, 1879.

The provisions made by congress for the increase of the subsidiary silver coinage to $100,000,000 have been a great convenience, and the department, through the mint, has been able to supply all demands for these coins. The amount of them in circulation, which in January, 1890, was only $54,202,140, rose by October 1, 1900, to $79,432,194. The distribution of minor coins from the offices of the treasury and mint during the fiscal year amounted to $3,174,971, against $1,926,983 the previous year.

The national bank notes presented for redemption during the year amounted to $86,982,607, or 37.25 per cent. of the average volume outstanding, an increase of $6,144,-306 over 1899. The expense incurred in the redemption and assortment, including $31,-767 for transportation, amounted to $122,-985, which sum will be apportioned among the banks at the rate of $1.33558 of their notes redeemed.

NEEDS OF THE NAVY.

Rear Admiral Crowninshield Says It Is Sadly in Need of More Men.

Washington, Nov. 12.—The startling statement is made in the report of Rear Admiral Crowninshield, chief of the navigation bureau, that the present personnel of the navy would form barely one-fourth of the total establishment necessary to fight a first-class European power. It barely sufficed for the Spanish war, and no longer can be considered, the report says, as an effective nucleus about which a larger establishment could be formed in case of war. This need of the navy for officers and men is declared to be most urgent. The naval academy is said to be suffering for want of instructors, and the present high standard of training cannot be maintained. Every bureau in the department is short of officers, and the service, the report predicts, soon will fall behind in the struggle, first, for leadership, and then for equality with the other services. The report severely criticises the ineffective effort of congress at the last session to meet immediate needs for officers by authorizing the employment of retired officers, and demands the immediate repeal of that act. It is recommended that for the next ten years appointments to the naval academy be doubled, the president and representatives in congress appointing two instead of one wherever authorized now, and in addition senators being given the same privilege of appointment as representatives. Then, to meet future needs, it is recommended that whenever congress authorizes an increase of vessels to the navy it also provide, in the same act, for an increase of officers and men to man the ships.

Many Drowned.

Halifax, Nov. 12.—The steamer City of Monticello, belonging to the Yarmouth Steamship company, has foundered in the Bay of Fundy with an appalling loss of life. Of the crew and passengers of the ill-fated steamship 34 persons are reported to have perished in the wreck. Some of the bodies have already been washed ashore. Capt. Harding, in command of the City of Monticello, was among those who was drowned. Among those who perished, it is reported, were many women and children.

Six Drowned.

Boston, Nov. 12.—The three-masted schooner Myra B. Weaver was wrecked in Vineyard sound early Saturday morning and six lives were lost. Among the lost were Miss Mary Emerson, aged 23, of Mobile, and Miss Ella Deboe, aged 15, also of Mobile. The details of the disaster were learned upon the arrival here Saturday afternoon of the steamer City of Macon, Captain Savage, which rescued four survivors.

Carlist Uprising Fails.

Madrid, Nov. 9.—At a cabinet council held under the presidency of the queen regent, Gen. Azcarraga, the premier, said that there was now no Carlist under arms in Spain and that the rising had failed completely. In order, however, to destroy the entire Carlist organization in the country, he said, the suspension of the constitutional guarantees would be maintained.

IN THE PHILIPPINES.

Maj. Gen. MacArthur Tells of Operation and Present Conditions in the Islands.

Washington, Nov. 12.—Maj. Gen. Arthur MacArthur, commanding the army in the Philippines and military governor of the islands since May 5, 1900, has submitted his report to the war department. A considerable portion of the report relates to events which took place previous to the date when he assumed command, and he publishes some of the correspondence and proclamations of the Filipinos obtained before that time. He refers to the change in Aguinaldo's plans in abandoning his army organization and starting a guerrilla warfare. The conditions of the country have afforded advantages for such a policy, he says, as they have enabled the insurgents to appear and disappear at their convenience. At one time they are soldiers, and immediately after are within the American lines in the attitude of peaceful natives. A widely scattered formation of Filipinos quickly followed the guerrilla warfare which led to a corresponding dissemination of American troops, there being 53 military stations in the archipelago November 1, 1899, and 413 stations September 1, 1900. This resulted in a large number of minor affairs, many of which did not assume the dignity of a regular combat, though the casualties between the dates stated were 268 Americans killed, 750 wounded and 55 captured; the Filipino losses during the same time being 3,227 killed, 694 wounded and 2,864 captured. Gen. MacArthur says the extensive distribution of troops has strained the soldiers of the army to the full limit of endurance. He says the apparent desultory work has demanded more of discipline, and as much of valor as was required during the period of regular operations against concentrated field forces of insurrectionists. Gen. MacArthur speaks in the highest terms of the service rendered by the troops amid all labors and hardships.

In closing his report, Gen. MacArthur, after speaking of the establishment of a republican form of government in the islands, says:

"In the light of existing conditions it is difficult to realize that there is any possibility of such a future for the islands, especially so as at present, and for many years to come, the necessity of a large American military and naval force is too apparent to admit of discussion. On the other hand, however, there are many encouraging conditions to sustain such a conviction. For example, in the Philippines there is no dynasty to destroy; no organized system of feudal laws to eradicate; no principles inconsistent with republicanism, which had solidly insinuated themselves into the national life, to displace; no adverse aspects of nature to overcome. On the contrary, nature, which is exuberant, balmy and generous, has nourished into existence several millions of sensitive and credulous people, without allegiance to any existing institutions, but animated by certain inchoate ideas and aspirations, which by some unfortunate perversion of thought they conceive to be threatened by America. These people, fortunately, are intelligent, generous and flexible and probably will yield quickly and with absolute confidence to tuition and advice when thoroughly informed of American institutions and purposes.

"As a future thought in the same direction, it may be suggested that the Aryan races are making their way back into the old continent, which as a consequence is likely, within a generation more, to become the theater of gigantic political activities. Up to this time the practical effect of republican institutions has not been considered in this connection; but the rapid extension of republican civilization in these islands, which is not only possible, but probable, of necessity must exert an active and potential influence upon the affairs of Asia, which, under the inspiration of American ideas, transmitted through Filipinos, may yet exhibit the greatest of political wonders. A rather broad conception, perhaps, but one well calculated to fix the attention of the most casual observer and warm the fancy of the most indifferent."

THE INDIAN SERVICE.

Commissioner Jones Makes Recommendations for Their Support —Indian Schools.

Washington, Nov. 12.—The total expenditure by the government on account of the Indian service from March 4, 1789, up to and including July 30, 1900, has been $368,358,217, according to the annual report of Commissioner of Indian Affairs William A. Jones. The expenditures for the fiscal year ended last July amounted to $10,175,167. Of this amount at least $3,339,000 was devoted to the cause of Indian education.

Under the head of obstacles to self-support of the Indians the report deprecates the ration system, annuity payments and the leasing of allotments. The ration system, says the report, is the corollary of the reservation system. The Indian population of the United States is about 267,900, of which 45,270 receive a daily ration. The ration issued and its value vary according to the tribe. Nearly two-fifths of the number receiving rations belong to the great Sioux nation. The ration has been gradually reduced in the past few years in accordance with the policy of the Indian bureau. If the Indian's claim for full rations as a right is conceded, the commissioner predicts that the time when they will be self-supporting lies in the very distant future, if it comes at all. A number of the Indians also are assisted by occasional issues and at several agencies the old and indigent are provided for. These aggregate about 12,570. Altogether there are 57,570 Indians receiving subsistence in some degree, exclusive of Indian children in boarding schools. The commissioner urges that the indiscriminate issue of rations should stop at once. The old and helpless, he says, should be provided for, but rations should be issued to the able-bodied only for labor, while those who have been educated in Indian schools should depend entirely on their own resources.

Annuities distrubuted last year aggregated $1,507,543, the per capita ranging from $255 down to 50 cents. The report says that large money payments to the Indians are demoralizing in the extreme. They degrade the Indians and corrupt the whites; they induce pauperism and scandal and crime; they nullify all the good effects of years of labor. Unscrupulous people induce the Indian to go into debt, and then, when the debt has accumulated and the Indian's credit is gone, pressure is brought to bear by the creditors upon the government to pay the Indian so that he can pay his honest (?) debts. The state of affairs growing out of this around some of the agencies is a scandal and a disgrace.

There are 250 Indian schools of all kinds conducted by the government, and an increase of 1,412 pupils in enrollment and 1,142 in average attendance shown over the previous year. About 8,000 of the 34,000 eligible school children are unprovided for. Compulsory education of the Indian children is strongly indorsed, and congress is urged to authorize the commissioner to place every one of school age in some school, the selection of the school to be left largely to educated Indian parents.

To Be a Notable Exhibition.

Chicago, Nov. 12.—The international live stock exposition, to be held in Chicago from December 1 to 8, promises to be the most notable event of its kind ever held. There will be 10,000 head of animals on exhibition, including 1,500 head of royally pedigreed cattle, 1,200 sheep, 1,000 hogs and 400 horses. The remainder of the exhibit will be animals of the fat classes. There will be 700 classes represented and about 3,000 premiums, amounting in all to $75,000.

A Hotel Horror.

St. Louis, Nov. 13.—A special to the Post-Dispatch from Poplar Bluff, Mo., says: A fire, accompanied with a terrible fatality, occurred here Monday morning, resulting in the total destruction of the Gifford house, a large three-story frame building. The list of known dead is as follows: Heck Clark, Doniphan, Mo.; Rebecca Owens, Poplar Bluff; Shelby De Hart, Poplar Bluff; Curley Berry, Poplar Bluff. Many others were fatally injured.

PROMISED TO OBEY HER.

How a Sharp Minister Got the Better of a Smart Bridegroom.

The groom entered alone and said confidentially:

"Do you use the word 'obey' in your marriage service, Mr. ——?"

"No," said the minister, relates the Woman's Journal, "I do not usually."

"Well," said the expectant benedict, "I have come to ask you to marry me now, and I want it used."

"Certainly," replied the other, "it shall be done," and presently the couple stood solemnly before him.

"James T——," said the clergyman, "do you take this woman to be your wedded wife?"

"I do."

"Do you solemnly promise to love, honor and obey her so long as you both shall live?"

Horror and rebellion struggled with the sanctities of the occasion on the bridegroom's face, but he chokingly responded "I do," and the meek bride decorously promised in her turn.

After the ceremony was over the bridegroom said excitedly aside to the grave minister:

"You misunderstood me, sir, you misunderstood me! I referred to the woman's promising to obey."

"Ah, did you, indeed?" serenely answered his reverence. "But I think what is good for one side is good for the other, don't you? And, my friend, it is my advice to you to say nothing more about it, for as an old married man I can tell you you'll have to obey anyhow."

Avoid Nervous Prostration.

If you are dangerously sick what is the first duty of your physician? He quiets the nervous system, he deadens the pain, and you sleep well.

Friends ask, "what is the cause?" and the answer comes in pitying tones, nervous prostration. It came upon you so quietly in the beginning, that you were not alarmed, and when sleep deserted you night after night until your eyes fairly burned in the darkness, then you tossed in nervous agony praying for sleep.

MRS. A. HARTLEY.

You ought to have known that when you ceased to be regular in your courses, and you grew irritable without cause, that there was serious trouble somewhere.

You ought to know that indigestion, exhaustion, womb displacements, fainting, dizziness, headache, and backache send the nerves wild with affright, and you cannot sleep.

Mrs. Hartley, of 221 W. Congress St., Chicago, Ill., whose portrait we publish, suffered all these agonies, and was entirely cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound; her case should be a warning to others, and her cure carry conviction to the minds of every suffering woman of the unfailing efficiency of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Minneapolis, Nov. 12.—Seventy-three out of the 82 counties in Minnesota, and nearly complete reports from the other nine, show that Van Sant has made a slight gain over Lind.

The 62 precincts in the state that have failed to report are not supposed to be heavy enough to seriously influence the gain Van Sant has made over Lind. The former has a lead of 2,972. Including estimates of the missing precincts the total known vote of the state stands: Van Sant, 151,529; Lind, 148,557.

The counties so far having failed to report are Beltrami, Cass, Cook, Hennepin, Itasca, Pipestone, St. Louis, Steel and Wilkin.

Secretary C. C. Whitney, of the Republican state central committee, and Eli Warner, called on Chairman Rosing, at the Democratic headquarters in the Merchant's hotel, St. Paul. Capt. Whitney carried with him the returns of the gubernatorial contest as compiled by himself.

The reception accorded them was entirely cordial, and compliments as to the conduct of the respective campaigns were liberally exchanged. Returns were compared, and each seemed of like mind with the other until Capt. Whitney suggested the situation might be relieved and election bets settled if Mr. Rosing would publicly admit Gov. Lind's defeat.

Mr. Rosing very promptly said for the present at least he did not propose to do anything of the kind. The conversation drifted into other channels, both sides hastening to state they did not care anyhow. The Republicans reinforced their indifference by expressing a willingness in the face of certain victory to await the report of the canvassing board.

Mr. Rosing seemed inclined to lay Gov. Lind's defeat to the fact, as alleged by him, that several hundred votes were lost through the candidacy of Thomas H. Lucas, the Socialist Democratic nominee, who drew from fusion strength. On many ballots both Lind and Lucas were voted for, invalidating that portion of the ballot.

Mr. Rosing was not disposed to accept the plurality given Van Sant by the Republican committee and the press. He maintained Van Sant's plurality would not be more than 2,000 when corrected by the canvassing board.

Returns are coming into the secretary of state's office very slowly.

In the 52 counties which have officially reported, Van Sant's lead is 3,267, but most of the strong Lind counties are already in, and the counties remaining may possibly increase Van Sant's lead.

It will probably be several weeks before sufficient official returns from county canvassing boards will be received to make it possible to estimate the votes of candidates on the state ticket other than governor. These boards have until Nov. 16 to meet. Only a few have yet convened and none have made returns.

Even the unofficial returns, for which urgent request was made by Assistant Secretary of State Lomen, are incomplete. The state officials have not one item of information regarding the votes given for any but the presidential electors and the gubernatorial candidates. None will be secured, except through the press, until the official returns are received.

All the ballots marked in the state will be retained by the different county auditors until after Nov. 26, the date upon which the period for bringing contests expires. These will then be destroyed, and no further opportunity for verifying the returns will be afforded.

Page Morris has over 7,000 plurality in the Sixth district.

Stevens wes over 6,000 to the good in the Fourth district.

Eddy has between 4,000 and 5,000 in the Seventh.

Tawney in the Third has a plurality of nearly 5,000.

Fletcher has over 10,000 more than Stockwell.

The state's official canvassing board will not meet until Dec. 18. The returns of the canvassing boards will then be taken up and the final canvass completed. The secretary of state heads the state board and selects his associates, who must, by law, be two judges of the district court and two or more judges of the supreme court. It is understood that Chief Justice Start and Associate Justice Collins will be requested to serve.

REVIEW OF TRADE.

Situation in Many Lines of Business as It Appears to Dun and Bradstreet.

New York, Nov. 10.—Bradstreet's says: "Hopefulness as to improvement in fall demand, now that the election is over and cold weather has arrived, is reported in all sections, and nowhere is the feeling of confidence so marked as in the south. Despite the recent decline in cotton the feeling in that section is notably cheerful. In the west dry goods, clothing, shoes and hardware are moving better. In the east leather, shoes, wool, tobacco and coal are firm, and the outlook for business is regarded as favorable. On the Pacific coast export trade with our new possessions and with Asia has been good. California reports the large area planted in grain helped by recent rains. It is from that long-time barometer of trade, the iron business, that relatively the best reports as to the demand and prices come. While a considerable volume of business was undoubtedly placed, just previous to election, the quantity of sales reported since has been very satisfactory. Chicago reports the last week's sales of pig at 75,000 tons, the largest of any week this year. A similar report comes from Birmingham, where 110,000 tons are reported placed within the past ten days, while Pittsburgh reports the sales of finished material the heaviest since last spring. A similar report as to sales of pig iron comes from Cincinnati. The iron sales have been largely at an advance of 50 to 75 cents per ton, while bars, plates and structural material have either been advanced or the makers are now holding meetings to agree upon increases. A large part of the business in cruder forms is reported to have been on export account."

R. G. Dun & Co., in their Weekly Review of Trade, say: "Iron markets are in an encouraging condition. No violent speculation is threatened, but in numerous instances better demand has caused small advances. The most notable changes thus far is in pig iron, which is eagerly sought at all markets, larger contracts being placed at 25 to 50 cents a ton above the bottom point recently quoted. In partially manufactured forms, such as bars, plates and beams, improvement is definite, while large building operations will keep the structural market moving freely. More ships are planned and bridges require quantities of material. Railroads are buying most products freely. Orders for export are numerous, and foreign makers have been compelled to reduce prices for steel rails.

"Failures for the week were 201 in the United States, against 157 last year, and 18 in Canada, against 23 last year."

SURPRISED THE BOERS.

Methuen Takes Commandants Snyman and Vermass Off Their Guard and Defeats Them.

London, Nov. 13.—The war office has received the following dispatch from Lord Roberts:

"Johannesburg, Saturday, Nov. 10.—Metheun surprised Commandants Snyman and Vermass, near Lichtenburg, yesterday. Three dead Boers were found and 30 prisoners and several wagons were captured. There were no casualties among the British.

"Kelly-Kenny reports that Maj. Mackinlosh, of the Seaforth highlanders, occupied Philippolis November 8. The Boers fled in all directions. Three wounded were brought to our hospital. Surgeon Hartley and seven men were wounded.

"Lyttleton reports that Kitchener successfully surprised the Boers during the night of November 7. A mounted party of the Nineteenth Hussars and the Manchester mounted infantry, under Capt. Chetwode, managed to pass the Boer outpost, and while the latter engaged the enemy's picket the hussars charged the Boers in the moonlight, sabering many. Chetwode and several non-commissioned officers behaved with great gallantry, but the hussars would probably have suffered severely, as they got into bad ground, had not they been supported by the mounted infantry. In the morning artillery and infantry joined Chetwode's force and completed the Boer rout, who are said to have lost heavily.

"Smith-Dorrien's wounded, who returned from the Boer camp, report that Commandant Prinsloo and Gen. Fourie were killed and that Gen. Grobelar was wounded in the recent fighting."

R. G. DUN IS DEAD.

The Head of the Famous Mercantile Agency Expires in New York —His Career.

New York, Nov. 12.—R. G. Dun, head of the mercantile agency firm of R. G. Dun & Co., died in this city Saturday of cirrhosis of the liver.

[Robert Graham Dun was born in Chillicothe, O., in 1826. He began his business career at the age of 16 in a country store. Early in life he came to New York, where he secured employment in the mercantile agency then conducted by Tappan & Douglass. In 1854, six years after he first entered the employ of the firm, he became a partner of Mr. Douglass, under the firm name of B. Douglass & Co. Later the firm was known under the name of Dun, Lymann & Co. In 1859 Mr. Dun purchased the interest in the business held by his partner, and was senior partner in the firm of R. G. Dun & Co. up to the time of his death.

The decedent was a prominent figure in the business world for nearly half a century. The wonderful development and growth of the firm was due largely to his individual effort and untiring application to the ever-increasing details of management. Under Mr. Dun's management the scope of the agency has steadily enlarged. Every year has seen an increase in the number of branch offices and the volume of business done, until in the present year there is a total of 150 offices located in as many different cities throughout the world. The reference book published by the firm contains the names of more than 1,300,000 traders in America. The work of revision each year involves the expenditure of about $2,000,000.]

The Dominion Elections.

Ottawa, Ont., Nov. 10.—Almost complete returns from the Dominion elections show the following results: Liberals elected, 128; conservatives, 76; independents, 3. There are five elections to be held. At present the government majority over the conservatives is 52 and over conservatives and independents 49. As the independents are likely to go with the government the majority will be 55 over the conservatives. The five constituencies in which elections are to be held are also likely to go liberal, four of them being represented by the liberals in the last parliament, giving the liberals a majority of 60 in a full house.

New Coal Trust.

Pittsburgh, Pa., Nov. 10.—A syndicate composed of Pittsburgh and New York capitalists has formed a new coal company, which will be capitalized at $10,000,000. The purpose of this proposed corporation is to develop immense tracts of coal land, practically all of which is located in Washington county. B. F. Rafferty, a well-known ex-coal mine operator, is one of the promoters of this new enterprise, which will be run in opposition to the Pittsburgh and Monongahela river combines.

Deals in Large Figures.

Washington, Nov. 10.—The annual report of Paymaster General Kenny, of the navy, deals in large figures. He shows that last year he spent $10,659,000 on account of construction and purchase of ships, $3,933,000 for repairs to ships, $11,715,000 to keep ships in commission, including pay; $1,589,000 for the marine corps and $56,983 for the naval militia.

MINNESOTA NEWS.

She Runs a Farm.

Mrs. Antoinette Van Hoesen Wakeman formerly a well known newspaper woman in Chicago, has put a herd of grade Jersey and Jersey-Holstein cows on her farm in Dakota county, and made the first shipment of milk to the Crescent Creamery company, of St. Paul.

Mrs. Wakeman believes that Hastings is admirably situated to become a point for the shipping of milk to the Twin Cities. She proposes to devote her place, which is less than a mile from the court house, exclusively to dairy products and fruit, and has built a barn and proposes to have her herd and milk cared for on the lines indicated by Prof. T. L. Haeker, of the agricultural experiment station of the state university. Mrs. Wakeman has has arranged to ship from 20 to 30 gallons of milk daily.

Close the Schools.

The schools of Duluth are to be further curtailed by the closed of the Smithville school on account of smallpox. This is the second to be closed for the same cause. The teacher and children from the Adams that have been quarantined are about to be released, the disease having run its course without serious illness on the part of any one. Many children whose parents refuse to permit vaccination are still out of school, but it is probable that test cases will be taken through the courts at once. The school board is to open cooking schools soon in the Washington building, is to have fire alarm boxes put in each school is to remove the tower of the Longfellow school and fit up a number of rooms in basement for school purposes, there being a crowding of most schools in the city.

Population Increases.

State institutions had a population of 6,131 during the month of October, an increase of 232 over the same month a year ago.

The figures complied by the state board of corrections and charities gives the five institutions for the insane an aggregate increase of 153 patients, in a total population of 3,556.

Three hundred veterans were cared for at the Soldiers' Home, and 242 children were enrolled at the state public school in Owatonna.

There was an increase of 43 in the number at the state training school at Red Wing, and the number at the state reformatory showed a decrease.

There were 467 convicts in the state prison, six of whom were United States prisoners from other states.

It Was Funny.

An amusing incident of the election occurred at Fort Snelling while four residents of that vicinity were going to cast their votes. It appears the companies were out for a drill, and encountered the four. Without noticing them they went through their ordinary maneuvers, presenting their arms to them, making them feel very much like they were in North Carolina, and finally discharging their blank cartridges.

Lieut. Col. Reade, who was drilling his men, treated the would-be voters with the same contempt, carefully taking his notes of the maneuvers of the men. The latter finally recovered from the surprise, if it was not fright, and went to the polls and cast their votes without molestation.

Laws Violated.

It is claimed that the pot-hunters at Heron Lake have formed a combination to prevent regular sportsman from shooting in that vicinity. The combine against spotsmen has been so strong that the pot-hunters' patrols on the lakes have succeeded, it is claimed, in driving every man off the lake who does not shoot for the Chicago markets.

The shipments from Heron Lake to game commission firms in chicago have aggregated from 500 to 1,500 birds a week for nearly a month past. Even this ruthless slaughter has made no apparent effect on the supply. Last week it was reported that the canvasback and red-heads were coming by the thousands.

Numerous Robberies Committed.

Sneak thieves and burglars have been busy the past few weeks in different portions of Red Wing. Several nights ago some one broke into the saloon of Charles Ratz, carrying away a small sum of money and a quantity of cigars. Clothes hanging out to dry in two neighboring yards also disappeared. A business establishment in the center of the city was broken into and a few articles were taken.

News in Brief.

Thomas Taylor, a farmer living a few miles north of Luverne, committed suicide, shooting himself in the head while temporarily insane.

During the past fiscal year the state debt was reduced $70,000. This was in state funding bonds that drew 3½ per cent interest. The state treasurer hopes to have sufficient money on hand before Jan. 1 to pay off another $70,000 at least.

The St. Paul Babies' home, a philantroph institution, is about to go out of existence after ten years of work. During its life the home has sheltered more than 1,000 helpless infants. It is felt that the growing accomodations of the different religious institutions meet the needs of the time.

Winona's population has been announced. It is 19,714, against 20,649 in the state census of 1895, and 18,208 the last government census. The falling off is in the third and fourth wards, where the foreign population resides.

Star postal service has been established from Padua to Grove Lake.

The sash and door factory of Larson & Nelander, 1900 Monroe street northeast Minneapolis was totally destroyed by fire. The loss will be nearly $10,000.

Eveline Warren, aged 7 years died from burns caused by her clothes catching afire.

Some wheat got mixed with the sand used in plastering a house at Thief River. It sprouted and is growing nicely, forming a unique wall decoration, out of the way of frost and flood.

The Woman's Art Class of Winona has taken the initiative in the traveling library movement in Winona county. They have put to gether a collection of fifty books, and placed them with the Winona library for circulation.

While playing football with his companions, Bert Hengen of Minneapolis had his right hip dislocated.

BUSY LIVES ENDED.

Henry Villard, Railroad Magnate, and Marcus Daly, Copper King, Pass Away.

New York, Nov. 13.—Henry Villard, the financier, died early Monday morning at his summer home, Thorwood Park, near Dobbs' Ferry. The causes of death were apoplexy, from which he had been a sufferer for several weeks, and an affection of the throat.

Henry Villard was born Heinrich Hilgard in Speyer, Rheinish Bavaria, on April 11, 1835.

Young Hilgard was educated at schools in Zweibrucken, Phalsbourg and Speyer, but in October, 1853, abandoned his university studies, and set out for the United States, intending to join the colony of his relatives at Belleville. His father's opposition to this step made him borrow the surname of a French schoolmate at Phalsbourg, and he became Henry Villard.

Arriving at Belleville, he became a newspaper reporter and continued in the profession until 1868. In January, 1866, in Boston, he married Fannie Garrison, the only daughter of William Lloyd Garrison. In 1868 he was chosen secretary of the newly-founded American Social Science association, having its headquarters in that city, and did not finally relinquish the post till 1871.

In 1890 he purchased from Thomas Edison his electrical manufacturing interests, and, with the Edison Lamp company of Newark, N. J., and the Edison works at Schenectady, N. Y., as a basis, organized the Edison General Electric company, of which he became president, serving in that capacity for about two years.

In October, 1889, he became chairman of the Northern Pacific board of directors, but the panic of 1893 again occasioned the loss of most of his fortune and led to his withdrawal from railroad management.

New York, Nov. 12.—Marcus Daly, of Montana, died Monday at the Hotel Netherland. Mr. Daly's death had been expected for weeks. He came home from Europe about the middle of September, and soon afterward was obliged to take to the bed from which he never again arose. His physicians informed the relatives some time ago that Mr. Daly could not recover, and they would give assurance of life only from day to day. Bright's disease, complicated with heart weakness, was the cause of death.

Marcus Daly was born in Ireland in 1842. He came to the United States early in life and since 1876 had been a citizen of Montana. He became general manager of the Alice silver mine and later came into control of the Anaconda copper mine. At the time of his death he was president of the Amalgamated Copper company. In politics he was a democrat. The differences between Mr. Daly and W. A. Clark have attracted much attention. The trouble started years ago over some water rights near Butte which Daly wanted and which Clark bought, forcing the other to pay a very high figure. The senatorship became the great bone of contention between the two millionaires last January, and Clark was elected. Daly had the validity of the election contested on the ground of bribery, when Clark presented his credentials to the United States senate. The use of money in the election was freely acknowledged on both sides, though it was claimed that the expenditures were for legitimate expenses only. The contest resulted in the senate voting that there had been no election by the Montana legislature. This year Clark made a fight for the election of members of the legislature in his interest and won. His return to the United States senate next January is assured.

AGREE ON TERMS.

Conditions of the Preliminary Treaty Decided Upon by Foreign Envoys at Peking.

London, Nov. 13.—Dr. Morrison, wiring to the Times from Peking Sunday, says: "Pressed by the common desire for a speedy termination of present conditions, the foreign envoys have finally agreed to the following terms, to be presented in a conjoint note, which, subject to the approval of the governments, will be pressed upon China as the basis of a preliminary treaty:

"China shall erect a monument to Baron von Ketteler on the site where he was murdered, and send an imperial prince to Germany to convey all apology. She shall inflict the death penalty upon 11 princes and officials already named, and suspend provincial examinations for five years where the outrages occurred. In future all officials failing to prevent anti-foreign outrages within their jurisdiction shall be dismissed and punished. (This is a modification of Mr. Conger's proposal.)

"Indemnity shall be paid to the states, corporations and individuals. The tsungli-yamen shall be abolished, and its functions vested in a foreign minister. Rational intercourse shall be permitted with the emperor, as in civilized countries.

"The forts at Taku and the other forts on the coast of Chi Li shall be razed, and the importation of arms and war material prohibited. Permanent legation guards shall be maintained, and also guards of communication between Peking and the sea.

"Imperial proclamations shall be posted for two years throughout the empire suppressing Boxers.

"The indemnity is to include compensation for Chinese who suffered through being employed by foreigners, but not compensation for native Christians."

Paris Exposition Ends.

Paris, Nov. 13.—The booming of a cannon from the first story of the Eiffel tower announced that the exposition of 1900 had ceased to exist. It ended in a blaze of illumination, the final evening being celebrated by a night fete. The attendance, however, was small, visitors being kept away by a cold, drizzling rainfall. Official statistics show that the exposition was a gigantic success from the point of view of attendance, which was double that of the exposition of 1889, when 25,121,975 passed the gates. When the gates of the exposition of 1900 closed Monday evening more than 50,000,000 persons had passed through. The British and Belgians headed the Monument to Maine Heroes.

New York, Nov. 9.—Gen. James Grant Wilson, chairman of the committee on site and design of the monument to the sailors who perished in the Maine disaster and the soldiers who died in the Spanish-American war, announces that the committee, after examining 43 submitted designs, selected as the best three in the first competition those of the following: Austin Hays, sculptor, associated with Donn Barber, architect; O. Piccirilli, sculptor, associated with H. Van Buren Magonigle, architect, and George Julian Zolnay, sculptor, associated with Joseph Henry Freedlander, architect.

Best Part of a Town Burned.

Lima, O., Nov. 12.—The town of Wren, southwest of this city, was almost wiped out by fire. The entire business district was destroyed and half of the residence portion burned. The loss will reach over $100,000. The town is without fire apparatus.

Wants to Be Senator.

Omaha, Neb., Nov. 13.—Congressman David H. Mercer, who has just been reelected in the Second district for his fourth term, is announced as a candidate for United States senator to succeed Senator Allen or Senator Thurston.

HOW A PRETTY SOCIETY GIRL ESCAPED DREADED CONSUMPTION.

Peruna Used in Time Saved Her Life.

All's Well That Ends Well.

It is the same old story of exposure to cold. The cold passing down the bronchial tubes to the lungs; the developing of a settled cold on the lungs, coughing, expectoration. This is a short road to consumption. Thousands of people have traveled it. Thousands more will travel it and the coming winter will develop an untold multitude of new cases.

In the case of Helen Murphy, the ending was a happy one. She started on the road to consumption after catching cold at a reception. Instead of waiting until she became incurable, Peruna was resorted to and her life was saved.

It is a pity that everyone else in this wide land could not know of this very effective remedy in such cases. The news is spreading fast but a great many people have not yet heard that Peruna is a sure cure in these cases.

Peruna cures acute catarrh and chronic catarrh; catarrh of the head and catarrh of the lungs; catarrh of the throat and catarrh of the stomach. Wherever catarrh may have located itself, whether in the digestive organs, kidneys or pelvic organs, Peruna is sure to eradicate the disease promptly.

Another case where consumption was cheated of its prey occurred in the state of Iowa. The report of the case created considerable attention at the time and was furnished us unsolicited by Mr. Henrickson. In a letter to Dr. Hartman he sets forth some interesting details of his rescue from consumption. He made use of the following language:

"I have been for years a constant sufferer from chronic catarrh of the head and throat, which finally worked down into the air passages. In the spring of '98 I took a severe cold and coughed all summer. I thought I had consumption. Then I had a bad attack of la grippe. After taking a course of Peruna I feel cured of all these troubles.

"Whenever any of our children get sick we give them Peruna, and it never fails to cure them. I most heartily testify to the value of Peruna in cases of catarrh and la grippe. I hope this may be the means of others suffering as I did to take Peruna and be cured. We would not be without it in the house."

Henry Henrickson.

Generally the first cold of the season is caught in November. With some people this lasts all winter and lays the foundation of chronic catarrh. In the beginning a few doses of Peruna is sufficient to make a permanent cure.

Send for Dr. Hartman's latest book on chronic catarrh. Address the Peruna Medicine Co., Columbus, Ohio.

Miss Helen Murphy, a popular society woman of Oshkosh, Wis., is an ardent friend to Peruna. The following is a letter written by Miss Murphy, and gives her opinion of Peruna as a preventive as well as cure for catarrhal ailments:

The Peruna Medicine Company, Columbus, Ohio:

Gentlemen---"About three months ago I contracted a severe cold at an evening reception, which settled on my lungs and threatened to be very serious. As my mother has used Peruna with good results, she sent for a bottle for me and I found that it gave me blessed relief. Before the second bottle was consumed I was well.

"We keep a bottle of it on hand all the time and when I have been out in inclement weather, I take a dose or two of Peruna and it prevents my taking any cold and keeps me perfectly well." Yours very truly,

HELEN MURPHY.

CHEAPER THAN A FUNERAL.

He Concluded to Pay the Doctor's Bill as an Economical Move.

A well-known North Dakota magistrate tells the following story, for the truth of which he vouches: At a small town in the state there were two doctors, one of whom had a great reputation for the cures he effected, and the other was not believed to be "much good." The favored doctor found his services in great request, but as payment was not always forthcoming he made a rule that a certain class of his patients should pay in advance.

One winter's night he was roused by two farmers from a hamlet ten miles away, the wife of one of whom was seriously ill. He told them to go to the other doctor, but they refused, saying they would prefer his services. "Very well," replied the medico, "in that case my fee is ten dollars, the money to be paid now."

The men remonstrated, but the doctor was obdurate, and shut down his window. He waited, however, to hear what they wou'd say. "Well, what will we do now?" asked the farmer whose wife was ill. And the reply that was given must have been as gratifying as it was amusing to the listening doctor. It was:

"I think you would better give it. The funeral would cost you more."

The Nickel Plate Road.

Dining Car service on American Railroads has undergone a number of changes in the method of serving meals in dining cars. Many leading roads are now serving from cards a-la-carte, whilst on the other great trunk lines the popular American plan of enjoying anything on the bill of fare and paying the usual price of one dollar. In recent years the "American Club" meal has come to the front, by which guests may choose from a dozen or more bills of fare, neatly arranged in booklet form, ranging in price from 35 cents to $1.00. This latter plan is adopted by the Nickel Plate Road on its through express trains between Chicago, New York City and Boston, except on the dining cars of that line, a choice may be made from various club menus, or a selection may be made from them all, at the price of the higher. In fact, it is claimed for the Nickel Plate Road that its passenger train service is equal to the best, and that its combination dining car meals is an exclusive advantage to patrone of the Nickel Plate Road.

He Snored in Two Keys.

The night clerk of a leading hotel of Washington, D. C., says that last winter a southern congressman came to him and demanded that his room be changed. When asked what displeased him, he replied, angrily: "Well, that German musician in the next room and I don't get along well. Last night he tooted away on his clarionet so that I thought I never would go to sleep. After I had caught a few winks I was awakened by a pounding at my door. 'What's the matter?' I asked. 'If you please,' said the German, 'dot you vould schnore of der same key. You vas go from B flat to G, and it spoils der moosic.'"

PURE BLOOD AND STRONG NERVES

With glowing health all things are possible, small annoyances fade into nothingness and real troubles are battled with successfully. Women who are blessed with perfect health are a constant joy to themselves and all around them. The beauty which health alone can make permanent is a crown which raises a woman above other women. Such beauty is always accompanied by a sweet disposition, for snappishness is a sure sign of ill-health and leaves its mark quickly on the features.

It seems to be the fashion for women to ignore health and sacrifice it to the little every-day trials, or offer it up on the altar of devotion to daily tasks. Then again the nervous organization of women is constantly attacked by woman's natural experiences, so that it is practically impossible for her to retain the beauty which nature gave her, unless she has discriminating advice and right support.

Dr. Greene's Nervura

for the Blood and Nerves.

Trials and troubles are easily overcome by the women whose strength is the genuine strength of perfect health. Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy, bridges the chasm that separates the sickly woman from happiness. It fills her veins with blood that is pure and clean.

Mrs. WM. E. Bosse, of 85 Farrington St., Flushing, L. I., says:

"In regard to myself, I have suffered for years with disease, having been troubled with great nervousness, female complaints, indigestion, and great weakness and prostration. I did not have strength to do much of anything. Knowing the great value of health and strength I consulted doctors and took many medicines, but they all failed to cure me, and I grew worse rather than better. I happened to see in the papers how much good Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy, was doing in restoring to health everybody who took it, and I thought I would try a bottle. I used it and to my surprise I began to gain strength every day. I am so thankful that I tried it! It is certainly the most excellent tonic and strength giver. I recommend it very highly and wish that other people who are troubled in any way would take warning and use it."

TO PRESERVE WOMANLY BEAUTY

At all the stages of a woman's life Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy, is shown to be efficient to ward off the results of nervousness, or overwork, or impure blood. From early girlhood to advanced years, this world-renowned medicine builds up the forces destroyed by disease, grief, or overexertion, and the effects of this great medicine are quickly felt and permanently retained. Let women guard well their health, and consult Dr. Greene freely. Nothing they can possibly do will so surely keep them strong and well, or repair the exhaustion from acute illness, nothing will work so continually to the preservation of beauty as the great health-giving Nervura. Dr. Greene's office is at 35 West 14th Street, New York City, where he may be consulted either by personal call or by letter Women may write in perfect confidence, and get Dr. Greene's advice free.

BUFFALO GAZETTE

DELANO, FRIDAY, Nov. 16, 1900.

OFFICIAL PAPER OF THE VILLAGE OF DELANO.

DELANO DIARY

—Winter has set in with wood and hay difficult to be obtained.

—Building material is coming to town in large quanities this week.

—Some Delanoites are trying soft coal in place of wood. and report favorably for cooking use.

—Last Wednesday farmers of this vicinity hauled their hogs to the Stock yard in Delano for shipment.

—The High school entertainment at the City Hall Friday evening was a success. The proceeds are for an organ.

—The river has partly froze over. We can certainly have a good skate on Thanksgiving Day if cold weather prevails.

—For anything in the line of job work call at the BUFFALO GAZETTE Printing office. All work neatly and promptly done.

—On account of the smallpox scare there will be no services at the Polish church in Franklin town on Sunday. Nor till further notice.

—Storm windows are now in order and most of the inhabitants are improving thier spare time by puting up strom sheds and windows.

—This week is quite winter like flurries of snow fell, but not sufficent to cover the ground. The thermomter has been down to within five degrees of zero.

—Dr. Sharder went out this morn- to fumigate the premises raise the quarantine at the homes of three small pox patients in the town of Franklin.

—A. L. Mealy is to occupy Wm. Mowatts brick building on River St. for his jewlery and bicycle shop. The building affords a good location and is where it can be found.

—Notwithstanding the raise in meats in the cities some of our local cattle raisers had stock for sale at the last Fair day and complained that they couldn't even get an offer.

—Olaf Dahlgren and John Peterson recently made a trade and Olaf now lives on his farm formerly owned by Peterson. John Bukoski has moved into the house in town latley occupied by Dahlgren.

—John Dahlgren and family had a surprise party at their new home last Friday evening. Several nice presents were given them by the visitors and refreshments for everybody. The usual good time was had.

—Rev. M. Savs is engaged in taking a census of his parishioners. He proposes to see, if possible, that all those otherwise entitled to vote, have their papers and exercise their rights. Rev. Savs believes in equal rights to all.

—Owing to the suddeness of the death of Mr. John Mayer a post mortem was held yesterday by Drs. Sharder, O'Connors, and Catlin, The cause of the death determined to be typhord fever and dilitation of the heart.

—Attorney Latham is preparing to suit for Mrs. Vinnie Smith against the village of Delano for damages for injuries sustained on account of defective sidewalk. Good sidewalks come cheaper than law suites. The Mayor recently ordered the Street Commissioner to mend every hole in the sidewalks in the village.

—Quite a number of cases of smallpox has been reported from South west Franklin, and Woodland townships. Quarantine has been established and care is being taken to prevent spread of the disease. But owing to the length of time the cases were allowed to be around before the authorities became aware of the fact many have been exposed, and more cases may be looked for before the community is rid of the epidemic.

—The citizens of Delano were shocked by the announcement that John Mayer is dead, on Wednesday evening. He was injured in a wreck some time ago and came home last Saturday feeling badly butnoe on was looking for his death. He has been a strong, rugged man and one of the most actives of the officials of the G. N. for years. He will be sadly missed by a host of relatives and friends. The funeral is to be from the Catholic church on Sunday afternoon.

St. Peter School Notes.

Pioneer Press:—The Courier-Journal thinks President McKinley can now afford to be "more independent." Independent of what? Certainly not of the wishes of the people. These he will just as earnestly consult during second term as during his first.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Regular Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, D. C. Nov. 9, 1900.

Because Hanna and the trusts have by the use of like methods secured the same result as in 1896 - the defeat of the will of people - is no reason for the democratic party to change or abandon a single one of its pinciples On the contrary, it furnishes a strong reason for the continued agitation of democratic principles. If the power of the corporate rings and trusts which now dominate this government is ever to be broken and our government again be put back upon the constitutional foundation laid by our wise forefathers, it must be done by the democratic party, the only party which recognizes the limits set by our constitution. It is the democratic party that portion of the misguided masses which have, for sordid reasons, joined in riveting the industrial yoke upon their own shoulders will turn for relief when experience shall have taught them - as it will - the grievous mistake they have made. Let every democrat see that the party is kept in condition respond to when appeal for help is made.

Most democrats are rather glad than other wise republicans secured control of the House along with the Presidency. As Tom Reed remarkd when the democrats met with similar success, "Let the tail go along with the hide." If the democrats had elected a mojority of the next House, the republicans, would have made use of that control to sneak out of responsibillity for everything that was done or left undone during the first two years of Mr. McKinley's second term. With the President, the Senate and the House, they must accept full responsibility both for what is done and what is left undone, which cannot fail to be beneficial to the democratic party in the end. Watchfulness and aggressiveness should be the democratic watch words from this time on, until the people again place in control of the government.

Hon. A. S. Dulin, of N J, who was a visitor at democratic Congressional headquarters since election, says the republicans carried that State by the infamous Dudley blocks of five system by which Indiana was carried for Harrison the year he was elected, only they arranged the voters in blocks of ten. Mr Dulin called attention to the fact that the democrats held their own in the Congressional districts of New Jersey.

One of the first official acts of the administration after it was known that Mr McKinley was to ask Great Britain, through the Department of State, to drive the Filipino junta out of Hong Kong, which is British territory. There is no doubt that the request will be complied with, as was a similar reqnest concerning the Spanish officer who went from Washington to Canada at the opening of the war with Spain, and to conduct a Spanish secret information bureau there. It is evident that this thing had all been fixed up before the election, but for some reason, Mr McKinley was afraid to have it known before the voting. As the request is a perfectly natural one, the only reason for any concealment in connection therewith seems to lie in the adage "conscience make cowards" etc.

Representative Sharp, of Miss., who is now in Washington, calls attention to the fact that if the gains made by Mr. Bryan in the East could have been transferred to some of the close states the result would have been different. The more the popular vote is studied the plainer it becomes that there is no reason for demorats to become discrourged over the future.

As soon as they were sure that Mr. McKinley was re elected the republicans began the squbble over the official plums of the next administration, and it is likely to grow hotter and hotter until the distribution is made At least four members of the Cabinet are slated for voluntary retirement. Attorney General Griggs, whose extensive trust pratice was said to be worth like $100,000 a year to him when he resigned the governorship of New Jersey to enter the cabinet because of the relations between him and the last Vice President Hobart, is anxious to quit public life and get rich; Secretary Long, who already has a fortune, wishes to retire and take things easy; Postmaster General Smith is said to prefer returning to his editorial desk to remaining in public life' and Secaetary Hay has not enjoved his public position since he was so harshly and generally criticized for being over-friendly with England and the English. Secretaries Gage, Hitchcock, and Wilson will, according to current gossip, be members of the new cabinet Perry Heath, who so strongly endorsed Neely, the Cuban postal fund thief, and who resigned the position of First Assistant Postmaster General to become Secretary of the Republican National Committee and Hanna's personal representative in the management of the campaign, is to have told friends that he would be Postmaster General under the second McKinley administration unless he concluded not accept the portofolio If he isn't Postmaster General it will not be because he declines to accept That much may be set down as certain.

GENESIS OF A SCANDAL.

"Said Mrs. A.
To Mrs. J.
In quite a confidential way:
'It seems to me,
That Mrs. B
Takes too much—of something in her tea.'

"And Mrs. J.
To Mrs. K.
That night was overheard to say
She grieved to touch
Upon it much.
But Mrs. B. took such and such.

Then Mrs. K.
Went straight away
And told a friend, the self-same day,
'Twas sad to think'—
Here comes a wink—
That Mrs. B. was fond of drink.

"The friends disgust
Was such she must Inform a lady, which she nursed,'
'That Mrs. B.
At half past three
Was that far gone she couldn't see'

This lady we
Have mentioned, she Gave needlework to Mrs. B.
And at such news
Could hardly choose
But futher needlework refuse.

"Then Mrs. B
As you'll agree,
Quite properly—She said, said she
That she would track
The scandal back
To those who made her look so black.

"Through Mrs. K.
And Mrs. J.
She got at last to Mrs. A.
And asked her Why,
With cruel lie,
She painted her so deep a dye.

"Said Mrs. A.
In sore dismay,
'I no such thing could ever say.
I said that you
But stouter grew
On too much sugar—which you do."

SENATOR C. K. DAVIS is still very sick. But little hopes of his recovery is entertained.

FROM C. J. Lynch, and others it appears that the Boer War in South Africa is not yet over by considerable. President Styne and Generals Botha and DeWet are still in the field; while President Kruger is in Europe, and on his way to America to see what he can do by way of eliciting sympathy among the liberty loving people of the United States, and if President Kruger comes here he is bound to find it out for himself.—Life, liberty and the pursuit of hapiness for all is good American doctrine.

AT last the Delano Eagle has come out and expressed itself as regards the "Full Dinner Pail".

It says: "Aguinaldo had better offer to trade his great expectations for a full dinner pail before it is to late."

What else does this mean if not that Aguinaldo had better trade off the last hopes of the people of Luzon, of securing for themselves and posterity, the great principles they have for so long fought Spain to secure, and the same principles our forefathers fought England and secured, for the lovely "Full Dinner Pail".

The question now is: "What is this full dinner pail?" It must be the privilege of living,—because Aguinaldo wants to obtain, for himself and people the same rights we have "Life, Liberty and the Pursuit of Happiness." —under a government without his consent. Is this the full dinner pail the Republican party so generously offered the people of this country before election?—A.

Gold Standard.

Gold standard sounds well, but the question is: "Is it the best for the true loyal American citizen, or is it the best for the men who come here seeking a fortune at the expense of the American people?" I will endeavor to explain this question to the best of my limited ability, as I see it.

There are now something over twenty states or countries who have free silver as a part of their money, and our dollar is now at a premium in all of these states; that is, one of our gold dollars is worth two dollars and six cts. in silver. Now then it is reasonable. that a person taking one of our dollars to any of these old countries having good qualities of goods with our money at a premium can buy two dollars and six cents worth of goods.

This sounds all right so far but now comes the question "Can't we buy twice as much for one of our dollars as you can for two in silver?" The answer is "Yes". "Well then why isn't it all right?" Simply because the man who has the money can buy at this advantage; and the man who has to work by the day, at a ten per cent reduction in wages to make the moneymen, has no money. He has scarcely enough to by coal, sugar, flour or butter at trust's prices without figureing on the transportation from this country to Europe on an Excursion of Tourist to purchase clothes.

Now comes the question "Well don't the men with money buy goods in Europe at this advantage to sell us?" It is a fact that our large capitalists take advantage of every little thing such as this, for the money they can realize from it. "Well how is the money to be made?" It is made by our brokers purchasing ship loads of merchandise at this advantage bringing it across the ocean, entering our ports paying the tariff, selling to the wholesalers who take a 25 per cent rake off for the handling, then the merchants and retailers certainly take 25 per cent more for their little profit.

In figureing up you don't suppose for a minute the capitalist will reduce the handsome profit he can make, by deducting the freight or tariff do you? Why certainly not, (we will say 50 per cent will cover the freight and tariff). We will start out with one dollar and see where it comes to and who pays the tariff and freight. The first thing our capital is one dollar, in exechanging money we receive two dollars and six cents with which we buy goods, the transportation to America and the fine for bringing it is 50 per cent or one dollar and three cents. When we sell to the wholesailers we cannot afford to loose a cent on the dollar, especially when we have some $500,000 invested in a ship load. We figure up our price to the wholesalers at three dollars and nine cents. And the wholesalers certainly make 25 per cent, which will make our dollar, to start with, three dollars and eighty six and ¼ cent. That is the price our merchants pay; and they need to make a small profit so as to pay for damage to goods, breakage, and expense of handling, we will put 25 per cent to cover this last expense and that brings our goods purchased for one dollar at the start to four dollars and eighty three cents ($4.828). "And who pays this to the store keeper?" Why it is the consumer of course, with the falling wheat market.

Well seeing the way the gold standard can be used to enrich the people who has the gold, at the expense of the poor and working men we will see why we cannot offset this by home industry.

We can see at a glance at the map that home industry is protected by thousands of miles of sea transportation, so we can carry enough tariff to run our government and will have our home industry protected. But if things were this way our large end enormous trusts, which are, could not exist on account of competition, so we just shut out competition all together by placing a tariff for protection on imports. Protection of what? The laboring man? No, but the gigantic trusts. "In what way does this protection benefit the trusts?" Well, it shuts out competitors and enables the manufacturers to form trusts, with one man to set the price on everything that is manufactured.

To make this trust business plain we will take for example an island with say one hundred men with families, working on it and earning a living by farming, now say that three of these men find iron and begin the manufacture of farm implements, they finding no other competition, from the out side, get together and form a trust, to the extent of their industry then raise the price of iron. The other ninety-seven men would have to pay what these people want, or go without, will they not? Suppose iron began to be shipped into the island, all that would be needed is a little higher tariff to keep the outside iron out, and then shove up the price of iron a little higher to pay for the brain work used in saving the trust at the expense of the people and not let them know it. But tell them it is needed to run the government with, or for the protection of the laboring man or farmers.

Now is it better to have the few grow rich at leasure, or to have the whole community prosper and be able to live and be happy?

SMALLPOX IN MICHIGAN.

State Health Board is Now Taking Active Measures.

Special to The News Tribune.

HOUGHTON, MICH., Nov 20.—The state health board has detailed a physician to the Upper Peninsula of Michigan and he will take charge of an aggressive campaign against the small pox. The disease is really varioloid and has caused only one death, that of a child two weeks old. It has been mild in all but a few cases, but with the cold weather it will eventually gain in virulence. The first outbreak here was ten weeks ago and it is now disseminated through both the iron and copper districts. No person ever vaccinated has as yet been attacked by the diaease.—Duluth News Tribune.

We reprint the above simply as a specimen of the "wisdom" of some of the reporters of the outbreaks of that exceedingly dangerous desease small-pox. It will be noticed that the item says: "The desease is really varioloid." Consult your Webster's Dictionary and find that veroloid is, "The small-pox as modified by previous inoculation or vaccination." The two weeks old child that died must have been vaccinated much earlier than the average children are; or possibly the reporter didn't think when he wrote that "No person ever vaccinated has as yet been attacked by the disease."

Small-pox has been an epidemic in the Southern, Eastern Middle and Western states for several years. Minnesota is now having the most cases of any time in her history. Usually the cases are very mild, occasionally not. The best medical talent of our country have time and again, investigated thoroughly, cases in different localities and decided that no matter how light some may have the disease, it is small-pox and capable of killiug some people who may get it.

It is better to admit that the disease is what it is than to call it only "varioloid" thereby throwing people off their guard. No matter if those having the small-pox are not very sick they should at the first occurence of the symptoms keep themselves at home, and others away. They should be strictly quarantined as the only way to rid the country of the disease.

COM PAUL AT MARSEILLS.

Wildly Welcome.

According to reports from Marselles, Nov. 22. President Kruger received a warm welcome on his arrival at Marselles. Thousands of French and Dutch delegates being present to receive him. He is said to have surprised everybody with the forcible tone of his response concluding with;

"Justice of men may fail us; but justice eternal will not. In the latter we shall continue to place our entire confidence. If ever the independence of the Transvaal and the Orange Free State be lost, it will be because the entire race of Boers, men, women and children, have been wiped from the face of the earth."

Terrible storms have swept the country during the week near Nashville Tenn., and Mississippi. Many lives were lost and large amounts of property destroyed.

Democratic Reorganization Will be by Progressive Wing.

No Let up in the Effort to Secure a Trimph of Democratic Principles.

To The Democratic Clubs and Societies of The United States:

The defeat of the Democratic candidate for President imposes on the Democrats everywhere the practical duty of organizing their forces. This important work must be undertaken now and continued vigorously until the national government is once more controlled by the spirit and purpose of its founders.

The nation has rendered a decisive verdict on the issues submitted to the people, and the administration of the affairs of the country has again intrusted to the Republican party. All Democrats loyally accept and support the decision of the majority. The defeated leader of the Democracy has borne himself with dignity, and even those who assisted in his defeat acknowledge his honesty, couage and manly patriotism. He has vindicated the American name by his unflinching sincerity.

There will be time enough in the future to weigh and analyze the cause of the defeat. The immediate duty of Democrats is to prepare elements of victory by making their clubs and societies permanent organizations. Every club formed during the campaign just ended should be continued and increased.

It is the purpose of the National Association of Democratic clubs to promote the growth of the broad doctrines of Thomas Jefferson by unceasing efforts. The National organization therefore appeals to Democrats in every State, county and precinct to renew the struggle for good government at once, and see to it that Democratic clubs and societies are maintained permanently in every neighborhood. It is the duty of every good citizen to belong to some political organization so that the collective virtue and intelligence of the nation may be brought to bear on questions of platforms and candidates in an orderly and deliberate manner.

This is the time for Democrats to go to work. Two and half million citizens are now enrolled in the membership of the National Association of Democratic Clubs. They should stand togather now and in the future. All who believe in Democratic principles regardless of past political difference are invited to assist in the great work which lies before the Democracy.

The national headquarters of the clubs will be kept open in New York until a Democratic President is seated in the White House.

W. R. HEARST,
President of the National Association of Democratic Clubs.

THE ONE-PRICE HEIFER.

Yew wanter buy thet heifer, Zeb? I don't believe yew can;
I wouldn't sell thet heifer, sir, to any livin' man.
No, sir, if yew should come an' lay a fifty in my hand
I'd go an' shet the stable door an' let thet heifer stand.
I'd let her stand right where she is till she is old an' gray
Afore I'd sell one side of her, thet's all I've got to say.
Yew heerd I wanted to dispose? Yew must hev heerd it wrong;
I'd buy a dozen like her, Zeb, if yew'd bring them along.

Of course I've got a lot of stock, more stock 'en what I need,
An' I am short of stable room, an' some what short of feed;
But ez for sellin' thet there beast I wouldn't, no siree!
Let forty dollars come between thet heifer, Zeb, an' me.
I am a one-price critter, Zeb, no man kin beat me down;
She's wuth a heap more'n forty, Zeb, ask any man in town.
Hi Hunker wants her purty bad, an' so does Deekin Hale,
But ez I said before, of course, the heifer ain't for sale.

She's gentle an' she's good an' kind, an' slicker then an eel;
A child could milk her any time, she'd never raise a heel.
She never hooks nor jumps the fence, she never runs away,
An' comes around at milkin' time ez reg'lar ez the day.
You'd orter see the milk she gives, it's yaller, thick an' sweet,
An' ez for quantity, by gum, thet heifer can't be beat!
They's junks of butter floatin' round inside the milkin' pail,
An' speakin' of her butter, Zeb—but then, she ain't for sale.

Yew say yew're bound to hev her, Zeb? Yew want her purty bad?
The slickest piece of cow-flesh, sir, a farmer ever had!
Wuth thirty dollars ez she stands, an' not a dollar less;
For I'm a one-price critter, Zeb, yew'll find thet out, I guess.
Wuth thirty dollars ez she stands. I'll tell yew what I'll dew:
I'll swap her now for twenty-five—'twixt me an' her an' yew.
Jest twenty-five, no more or less, for I'm a one-price man,
An' if yew'd want to swap her back, why durr it, Zeb, yew can.

Finders and Losers

BROADLY speaking, girls are divided into two great classes—the ones who find and the ones who lose.

Meta is a girl who finds. Ownerless earrings and brooches and shirt studs are scattered along her pathway, entreating her to pick them up, whichever way she strolls, and little things like horseshoes and four-leaved clovers seem to leap up in the most unlikely places at the first sound of her step.

"Guess what I found to-day?" is her regular form of greeting; so no one was surprised when the question came that day at Georgia's tea.

"Oh, I don't know," said Lilian, indifferently. "Probably a cotton handkerchief or somebody's other glove." Lilian is one of the girls who couldn't find anything if they would. Possibly that's the reason she assumes the manner of one who wouldn't if she could.

Meta gave a withering glace at the scoffer. Then she removed her Ladysmith hat and extracted from its crown a roll of money, which she spread upon her lap. A $50, a $20 and a $10 bill stared out.

"Counterfeit!" gasped Lilian.

"No, sir. Uncle Mac says they're as good as any ever made."

"You didn't find them, Meta; you're joking," protested Georgia.

"No joke about it. I was walking down Wabash avenue, and stacks of people were passing in both directions, too, but suddenly there was an open place about a yard square right in front of me, and straight in the middle of it lay this money, all rolled up. It just seemed as though the crowd parted, and everybody looked the other way on purpose to let me have it."

"Well, I never!" sung the chorus.

"What are you going to use it for, Meta?" somebody asked, but Lilian, whose interest had revived wonderfully, didn't give her time to answer.

"Use it for?" she cried. "Do you s'pose Meta would spend that money? Think of the poor woman who lost it!"

"Woman, indeed!" retorted Meta.

"Uncle Mac doesn't think that. He says there's a little pocket just inside the waistband of his trousers where he keeps a wad of bills—whenever he has one—and that it's the easiest thing in the world to slip the money in back of the pocket instead of into it. And I asked him if that ever happened to him. You ought to have seen how guilty he looked when he said: 'Once—but don't tell Ellen!' That's my aunt, you know. Well, we think—Uncle Mac and I—that some rich club fellow lost it, and that he'd put it to some extravagant use even if he had it again."

"But I can't help thinking about some poor old washerwoman who hadn't another cent in the world," murmured the blue-eyed innocent.

"Washerwomen without another cent are so likely to go strewing $80 rolls around!" said Meta.

"More likely 'twas a school-teacher with her month's salary—and teaching is such nervous work!" suggested Lilian.

"Or a fagged-out woman clerk," added Georgia.

"Well, I wouldn't take it from a woman any sooner than you would," declared Meta. "Of course I wouldn't mind so much if it belonged to a man. But I intend to advertise it, anyway."

"Certainly!" exclaimed Lilian as if she'd been thinking of that all the time. "That's the proper thing to do," and blue-eyed innocent added: "I should just use that money for advertising every day in every paper until there wasn't a cent left."

Meta pursed her lips. "Well, I'm taking Uncle Mac's advice about this," she said. "He says to study the papers a day or two and see if the loser advertises. Then, after that, he says to advertise: 'Found—Sum of money, at such a place, at such a time.' Not a word to give a false claimant any help in identifying the bills, you see. But he doesn't think I'll ever find the owner, and, say, girls, if he shouldn't turn up, what do you say to a lake trip together or some kind of a regular spree with this money?"

"I couldn't enjoy it," said the righteous Lilian.

"Not unless you gave half to a hospital," amended another.

"Oh, I don't know," dissented Georgia. "I think my conscience would take in a trip to Mackinac."

"Good for you!" replied Meta, as she rolled up her wealth and put on her hat. "We'll spend it all for gum if we want to, Georgia; and we won't treat them, either—see if we do!"

They didn't see her again for three weeks, and then she came flying into luncheon at Lilian's with a look in her eyes as if she'd just fallen heir to a million in gold.

"I've had the loveliest experience in the world!" she announced. "You remember that money I found? Well, I waited a few days, as Uncle Mac said, and no one advertised the loss; so I put one in myself. Told them to address X, the newspaper office, you know—the way they do. Next morning I went down to get the returns. There were nine answers, and of all the pathetic things! Not one of the people who wrote had lost their money on the day or at the place I found mine, but they were just as hopeful, for all that, and they actually made me feel responsible for their losses.

"First there was a man who had dropped a small, flat, black book, with a pawn ticket, a laundry bill and two two-dollar bills in it. And distressed over it! You'd think he'd lost a gold mine. And he was so sure 'twas his money I'd found—poor fellow! Then a woman poured out a whole sheetful of her heart, and drew a picture of the purse she'd lost, and told me how the money in it belonged to her sister, who was in the hospital and who needed it dreadfully, and how I'd be blessed forever if I only restored it. Next there was an old man who had dropped two $20 bills, and he went on in a shaky, feeble hand to explain that the reason he was carrying it was because he couldn't trust the banks; and then another girl, who told about an alligator-skin pocketbook containing a latchkey and a time pass over the Cincinnati, Jackson & Mackinac road. When I showed that to Uncle Mac afterward he said that road was a regular joke, because it didn't run to any of the places mentioned in its name, and he just shouted over the pass, because it had expired September 30, 1897. But it wasn't funny to me. I thought the girl must be in a sad way to be banging on to an expired pass over a road like that for three whole years. Besides, she mentioned in a postscript that there was a five-dollar bill in her purse.

"I got awfully worked up over those letters. Then, suddenly, I had a brilliant idea. I just made up my mind to wait a week and then, if no one claimed that $80, to send for all those forlorn people and pay them what they had lost out of what I had found. I didn't dare tell Uncle Mac the scheme until the week had passed and I had really written notifying them all to be at his office at ten o'clock this morning. Then I just gave him the news all in one piece. I don't believe in breaking things, especially when you've set your heart on doing them. Oh, he thought I was crazy, of course, and wished he'd answered my 'ad.' himself and claimed the money. Said he could have done it through some one else so I would never have suspected, and then could have kept the money for me until this fit of sentimental foolishness had passed off—and all that sort of talk. But the end of it was that he took a chair over by the window in his office and let me have things all my own way with the people I had sent for. They all came, mind you, and of all the surprised-looking beings! Each one was expecting to find the identical purse he had lost, and at first everyone looked suspicious of everyone else. They couldn't seem to grasp the situation.

"I had the money, all changed into the right amounts and lying in tempting little heaps on Uncle Mac's desk. First I made a little speech and then I served gold and silver refreshments. It took every cent of the money, and I had to put in a dollar besides, so there goes our gum, Georgia; but you wouldn't grudge it if you'd been there. Such larks! I never felt so much like a beneficent fairy in my life. Oh, dear—fun! Vaudevilles are nowhere—and, say, the man who lost the pawn ticket will never get over his grudge against me because I couldn't give that back. He thinks I've lost him a fortune! But the rest were more than sweet. Girls, I've been blessed and hugged, and the old man with the two $20 gold pieces actually kissed my hand. Think of that—will you? And the woman with the sister in the hospital was so happy! And I cried. Me crying—can you see it? And Uncle Mac needn't pretend he wasn't wiping his own eyes, either! But when they were gone he squared around at me, stern as stern, and said, in a disgusted way:

"'Well, of all the girly-girly performances!'

"I looked straight back at him and just said: 'How would you have a girl, Uncle Mac, if not girly? Do you want me manny?' And honest fact, he didn't know a single thing what to say."—Chicago Daily Record.

The cigarette smoker is having a hard time nowadays in finding a job. The Northwestern, the "O," the New York Central, and the Pennsylvania will not employ a cigarette smoker; Macey's, Wanamaker's, Siegel, Cooper & Co., and McCreary will not employ one in their big New York stores, and all the smaller institutions are getting into line. Pipes, cigars and chewing tobacco are not barred, but the cigarette is beyond the limit.

Charles R. Flint's Arrow, under contract to be the fastest ship ever launched, has been pushed into the water at New York. It has been guaranteed by the builder that the boat will easily make 42 miles an hour, and that in an emergency can be pushed up to 50 miles an hour. This seems to be about the limit in speed at sea, but when we thought that limit was reached 15 years ago when an 18-mile-an-hour vessel was built.

It is now claimed, as a result of experiments in London hospitals, that bacteria in sunlight and electric light cure certain diseases when all other remedies fail. Bright sunlight, it is said, will kill the bacillus prodigiosus, the germ of typhoid microbes, in one hour and a half. Old Diogenes, it seems, knew what was good for him when he asked Alexander the Great as the only favor he desired from the latter to stand out of his sunlight.

According to the census returns the Indian population of the United States is about 267,900, and experts say that there are probably as many or nearly as many Indians on the continent now as there were when it was discovered. As the Indians are slowly increasing in number and, according to Prof. Starr, of the Chicago university, the rest of us are becoming Indians, the next adventurer who discovers America will find the red men very numerous.

There are millions of people in China who do not yet know and may never know that the Americans and the powers drove the Chinese horde before them in retreat and captured the imperial city of Peking. The late mails from China brought copies of a Chinese poster which has been stuck up in conspicuous places in most of the Chinese towns, in which the representatives of the various powers are shown praying to Prince Ching for the cessation of hostilities.

An inventor has just perfected a new idea for protecting the rear end of trains from collisions at night time, and everyone is now wondering why the thing was not thought of before. He has an electric headlight, mounted on top of the engine cab and pointed to the rear. The light may be swung around in a half-circle and used for signaling. There is no reason why trains should not protect each other by having such a signal code as is used by vessels at sea, and the sooner such a method is required the better it will be for all concerned.

According to the most recent census the population of Belgium is 6,750,000, which for its 11,378 square miles of territory gives 593 inhabitants a square mile, making Belgium the most thickly populated country on the globe. Holland's population is 5,145,000, which gives for the 12,582 square miles of Dutch territory 408 inhabitants a square mile, making the land of dikes and windmills the second most densely populated country. In 1875 Holland had but 3,767,000 inhabitants. The present population shows a steady increase of 55,120 inhabitants a year.

How much the American export trade really amounts to is shown by the statement that at the present time we are exporting goods of American manufacture to the value of more than $1,000,000 every day, including Sundays and holidays. This is beyond our wildest dreams of a few years ago, but there really does not seem to be any good reason why the total should not be still further increased. Having learned how to capture foreign markets Americans are prepared to turn the knowledge to practical account in every country in the world.

MINNESOTA NEWS.

Twine May Cost More.

During the past month or two there has been a steady advance in the price of manila fiber, which is now worth about 10 cents per pound in New York. The fiber pool has about 250,000 bales of manila fiber in the Philippines and is practically in position to control the markets. If the price continues to advance, farmers will be compelled to pay more for their twine next season than has been paid for the past eight years. Another feature which makes it more difficult to operate a twine factory with any degree of certainty as to the amount of twine that can be sold next season, is the fact that millions of pounds of twine have been carried over from the past season. This is stored in warehouses and many farmers also have stocks on hand that could not be used the past season owing to the shortage in the crops. It is estimated that eastern manufacturers alone shipped at least 7,000,000 pounds of twine into Minnesota last summer, which was not sold and is being stored.

A Bold Robbery.

A bank book holding between its leaves $250 in cash and $50 in checks was stolen from Miss Carrie Dexter, cashier of the Russell Coffee house, while she was standing in front of the receiving window of the Security bank in Minneapolis. She was about to make a deposit and had taken the bank book from a small tin box which she carried and laid it on the window. As she did so she felt some one touch the box and, intending to rescue that, as it contained a large amount of silver, she paid no attention to the bank book. When she looked for it it had disappeared. She reported the robbery to the police.

Three Crops.

William Ray, postmaster at Richfield, reports the latest and strangest freak of a wholly unique season. On his farm at Richfield Mr. Ray dug a good crop of potatoes and plowed and seeded the same ground for fodder corn. The late wet and hot weather gave him a good crop of corn and then the ground went back to potato raising of its own accord. The other morning Mr. Ray opened some of the self-seeded hills and found a good number of half-grown potatoes in each. They were as large as the first new potatoes which are put on the market in the spring.

Undrawn Appropriations.

The total amount of undrawn appropriations for the thirteen state institutions, five of which are for the insane, is $85,831. Of this, $58,665 is credited to the insane institutions, and belongs in part to appropriations made for improvements, additions and the construction of new buildings. The new hospital at Fergus Falls also has a balance undrawn, amounting to exactly $1 less than that of Rochester's insane hospital which has $18,495. The condition of affairs obtains at the close of the state's fiscal year, In case of appropriations undrawn at the close of the fiscal year, they are canceled and revert to the general treasury.

State Board.

The state canvassing board will not meet until Dec. 18, and the official vote for governor will not be known until that time. The secretary of state heads the state board, and selects his associates, which must consist by law of two judges of the district court and two or more judges of the supreme court. It is understood that Chief Justice Start and Associate Justice Collins will be requested to serve. Both were candidates for re-election but neither had any opposition, the democratic candidates withdrawing.

Narrow Escape.

Eddie Chuffee of Lake Crystal, a boy about 12 years of age, narrowly escaped death by drowning. He went alone on Lune lake to shoot ducks. When some distance from the shore he discharged his gun, which kicked and caused the boat to capsize. He was rescued by a man from Mankato, who was hunting at Lily lake and heared cries for help. He was in the water until a boat could be carried from Lily lake. He is now in a critical condition.

Prison Reports.

The total amount of money turned into the state treasury by the warden of the state prison was $145,550.79, of which $140,450.14 was received in collection upon notes given by Minnesota farmers for binding twine purchased at the prison. The money thus collected goes into the prison revolving fund and becomes available again for the purchase of raw materials for binding twine, or is otherwise expended.

Nels Christianson was held up by highwaymen in Minneapolis and robbed of $17.

PENALTY IS FIXED.

Princes Tuan and Chwang to Be Imprisoned for Life—Lighter Punishment for Others.

Washington, Nov. 17.—Minister Wu has received from Director General Sheng the following cablegram, which he communicated to Secretary Hay Friday:

"An imperial decree of November 13 deprives Prince Tuan and Prince Chwang of their ranks and offices and orders them to be imprisoned for life; Prince Yih and Secondary Prince Ying to be imprisoned; Secondary Prince Lien to be deprived of his rank; Duke Ian and Ying Nien to be degraded in rank; Kang Yi being dead, no penalty can be imposed upon him, and Chao Shu Chaio to be degraded, but retained in office, and Yu Hsien to be exiled to the farthest boundary."

The Chinese officials mentioned in the decree are among the highest in China and comprise most, if not all, of those against whom the powers demanded rigorous punishment. Prince Tuan stands at the head of the anti-foreign and Boxer movement. Previous edicts have degraded him and taken away his office and servants, but this judgment of life imprisonment is the most severe thus far given to any of the leaders responsible for the trouble. From a Chinese standpoint, it is an extreme penalty to a prince of the blood, but it remains to be seen whether the powers will regard it as adequate to Prince Tuan's offense. The others mentioned were Tuan's active associates and two of them were specificially mentioned for punishment, along with Tuan, in Secretary Hay's note of October 3, advising the Chinese government that this country would expect these officials to receive their just deserts. Kang-Yi is one of the officials who died suddenly after the demands for punishment had been made, probably by suicide. Yu Hsien is another who was thought to have committed suicide, but the edict indicates that he is still alive.

London, Nov. 20.—The Morning Post's Peking correspondent, wiring Saturday, says: The edict inflicting punishment is milder than the first reports suggested. Prince Tuan and Prince Chwang are only banished, and not imprisoned. Duke Lan is merely dismissed. The foreign envoys cannot accept the edict, owing to the inadequacy of the punishments.

Paris, Nov. 20.—Official advices from Gen. Voyron, commander of the French troops in China, announce that international columns are occupying the tombs east and southwest of Peking. He reports a small engagement with the Boxers, in which they lost 300 killed, the foreign troops sustaining no casualties.

London, Nov. 20.—"The French consul here reports," says the Shanghai correspondent of the Daily News, "that severe persecutions of Catholic converts continues in the province of Kiang Si. Mr. Goodnow (United States consul) hears that the Protestants in the province of Che Kiang are similarly persecuted. The governors of both provinces are Manchus, and violently anti-foreign."

AN AWFUL FATE.

Colored Brute Is Burned at the Stake at Limon, Col., for Murder of a Little Girl.

Limon, Col., Nov. 17.—Chained to a railroad rail set firmly in the ground on the exact spot where his fiendish crime was committed, Preston Porter, Jr., or, as he was familiarly known, John Porter, Friday evening paid a terrible penalty for his deed. It was 6:23 o'clock when the father of the murdered Frost girl touched the match to the fuel which had been piled around the negro, and 20 minutes later a last convulsive shudder told that life was extinct. What agony the doomed boy suffered while the flames shriveled up his flesh could only be guessed from the terrible contortions of his face and the cries he gave from time to time.

The executioners, who numbered about 300 citizens of Lincoln county, had not the least semblance of the ordinary mob. Their every act was deliberate, and during all the preparations, as well as throughout the sufferings of the negro, hardly an unnecessary word was spoken. Grimly they stood in a circle about the fire until the body was entirely consumed and then quietly they took their way back to Limon, from whence they departed for their homes shortly afterward.

A Heavy Shortage.

Cincinnati, Nov. 19.—United States Bank Examiner Tucker took possession of the German national bank at Newport, Ky., Saturday and posted a notice that the bank would remain closed pending an examination. Examiner Tucker also announced unofficially that Frank M. Brown, the individual bookkeeper and assistant cashier, was missing and that an investigation showed that Brown's alleged shortage was about $191,500. Brown had been with the bank 18 years, was one of the most trusted men ever connected with this old bank, and it is stated by the experts that his operations extended back as far as ten years.

Wreck Caused by Open Switch.

Zanesville, O., Nov. 19.—A passenger train on the Wheeling & Lake Erie railroad ran into an open switch here Sunday afternoon, badly wrecking the engine. The engineer, John Somers, of this city, jumped, but fell under the wheels and was killed. Four trainmen were hurt by jumping and Mrs. Sarah Schaing, of Louisville, Ky., was thrown over a seat and badly bruised.

A Wonderful Feat.

Minneapolis, Minn., Nov. 16.—Prof. F. P. Leavenworth photographed the asteroid Eros through the telescope at the State university observatory Thursday evening. Considering that the diminutive planet is said to be 34,000,000 miles away, it was a long shot. The professor said that the planet could not be seen with the naked eye or through the telescope.

Yellow Fever Stamped Out.

Santiago de Cuba, Nov. 19.—Three hundred years of continuous yellow fever in Santiago culminated in the terrible epidemic of 1899. In December the last case was cured, and to the everlasting credit of the intelligence, vigor and fearlessness of the United States army officers and sanitary inspectors a year has passed without a single case.

Comforting Poor Papa.

A well-known business man whose head is bare, yet who wears a luxuriant growth of whiskers, was being railed recently for being bald by some of his intimate friends in the presence of his small daughter. Little Mabel didn't understand that it was all in jest, and crawling upon her parent's lap put her arms about his neck and turned defiantly toward his tormentors: "My papa w'ud ruvver hav' his top hair on his chin, w'udn't you, papa?"—Chicago Chronicle.

FADED IN HER YOUTH

Pretty faces and graceful forms of young women! Why is it they are so soon replaced by plainness and lankness? It is because the young girl just entering into womanhood does not know how to take care of herself and has no one competent to instruct her. It is not necessary that there should be anything weakening or wearying about the obligations of a female organism. Parents of young girls should inform themselves and prevent their dear ones from making costly errors.

That young woman has a just cause of complaint, who is permitted to believe that great periodic suffering is to be expected, that severe mysterious pains and aches are part of her natural experience as a woman. These things are making constant war on her health, her disposition and her beauty. It is a wanton sacrifice, absolutely unnecessary and cruel. It is more—it is criminal.

Dr. Greene's NERVURA

for the Blood and Nerves

Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy, is the right medicine for every young girl who is just entering the first stage of womanhood. It prepares the system in every way to act normally. It enriches the blood supply, and keeps the nerves calm and steady. Fortified with this great medicine, all the womanly duties may be undertaken and experienced without the slightest jeopardy to health. It preserves the gifts of nature and assists their development into glowing, healthful beauty.

MRS. MARY FRANCES LYTLE, of 2 Hunter Alley, Rochester, N. Y., says:

"I was very pale and delicate—had no color. I took Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy, and now I am well and strong, my face is plump, and cheeks red, and my complexion pure."

MRS. WILLIAM BARTELS, 239 East 87th St., New York City, says:

"Dr. Greene's Nervura made a wonderful improvement in my health, and that dark, sallow look left my face. My friends hardly know me. I have gained flesh and am like a different person."

The nervousness in women which invariably comes with pain is of itself certain to stop the development of beauty in face and figure. Excited nerves make sharp lines and hasty speech. The beautiful curves which make women so attractive are not possible when the female organism is out of order, as it surely is when discomfort and pain are always or even periodically present. It is only necessary to look in the faces of young women everywhere to know that this must be so. Else why are they so pale and thin?

GET FREE ADVICE FROM DR. GREENE

Real beauty is rare. It belongs to perfect health. It is possible to every woman who takes the matter in hand intelligently. Get advice from Dr. Greene, the great specialist in these matters. He will tell you why all this is so, and show you how to avoid the stumbling blocks that bar woman's way to happiness. You may consult Dr. Greene without cost by calling or writing to him at his office, 35 West 14th Street, New York City. Don't throw away your beauty. Write to Dr. Greene to-day.

The Nickel Plate Road.

Dining Car service on American Railroads has undergone a number of changes in the method of serving meals in dining cars. Many leading roads are now serving from cards a-la-carte, whilst on the other great trunk lines the popular American plan of enjoying anything on the bill of fare and paying the usual price of one dollar. In recent years the "American Club" meal has come to the front, by which guests may choose from a dozen or more bills of fare, neatly arranged in booklet form, ranging in price from 35 cents to $1.00. This latter plan is adopted by the Nickel Plate Road on its through express trains between Chicago, New York City and Boston, except on the dining cars of that line, a choice may be made from various club menus, or a selection may be made from them all, at the price of the higher. In fact, it is claimed for the Nickel Plate Road that its passenger train service is equal to the best, and that its combination dining car meals is an exclusive advantage to patrons of the Nickel Plate Road.

LIEUTENANT PETERSON

Says Peruna is The Finest Tonic And Invigorator He Ever Used.

Lieutenant Charles Peterson, Hook and Ladder Co. No. 21, writes the following letter to The Peruna Medicine Co., from 827 Belmont avenue, Chicago, Ill.:

"Last year I had a severe attack of la grippe which left me very weak, so that I was unable to perform my duties. Several of my friends advised me to build up on Peruna, and I found it by far the finest tonic and invigorator I had ever used. In two weeks I was strong and well, and if ever I am exposed to unusual hardship incident with my duties at fires, I take a dose or two of Peruna and find that it keeps me in good health." Charles Peterson.

Lieut. Chas. Peterson.

The above is only one of fifty thousand letters we have on file attesting the merits of Peruna.

There are a great multitude of people in all parts of the land who have entirely lost their health as a result of la grippe; who have recovered from an attack, but find themselves with weakened nerves, deranged digestion, and with but very little of their former powers.

There is no disease known to man that leaves the system in such an outrageous and exasperating condition as la grippe.

For this class of sufferers, Peruna is a specific. Peruna should be taken according to directions and in a few weeks the sufferer will be entirely restored to his accustomed health.

REASON FOR THANKSGIVING.

KEEP Thanksgivin'! Well, I reckon
I can show a first-class reason
Why this household—baby, wife and me—and even our old dog,
Should thank God for all His goodness
in a song of praise this season,
Though my gen'ral disposition is to grumble like a hog.
For, if ever man had special cause to hold a celebration
Of Thanksgivin'—in his heart of hearts—that very man is me.
If you'll listen for a moment to a word of explanation
I am sure that when my tale you've heard to this you will agree.

Though for years I've been a member of a church, yet I'm confessin'
That my vicious, wicked temper and fault findin' spoiled my life,
It has turned to bitter sorrow days that should have proved a blessin'
And has marked deep lines of care upon the brow of my dear wife.
She has hoped and prayed and waited, while she patiently expected
That some day her prayer of faith would bring an answer from above;
And at last, in God's own time and way, the change has been effected,
For my heart lost all its anger when it found a Saviour's love.

How it happened? Well, I'll tell you. See that dog there? Come here, Rover!
He ain't much for looks or breedin', but that dog no man could buy.
See! he hates to leave the baby—though she's five years old and over,
Still I allus call her "baby;" she's the apple of my eye.
Monday mornin', bright and early, came my neighbor, Squire Carroll,
And he told of signs of turkey in the timber down the creek;
So I called the dog and shouldered my old trusty double-barrel,
And I grinned when Mary mentioned that this was "Thanksgivin' week."

Well, we soon got in the timber, and we walked and walked and hunted,
But no turkey! So, as usual, I got mad and almost cussed.
And, in spite of all Squire Carroll said, I grumbled, growled and grunted,
And I felt I'd have to kick the dog or else I'd surely bust.
So my neighbor said he reckoned there's no use in us a tryin'
Any longer, since 'twas very plain the birds had gone away;
And he laughed and says; "I see no use in grumblin' or in sighin',
For it's ten to one there's better luck for us some other day."

So we parted, and I walked on, gettin' madder every minute
At the turkeys, at the squire and at myself the most of all
For my wicked, foolish anger—I knew well there's no sense in it—
Well, sir, just then "Gobble, gobble," came the turkey's welcome call;
Down I dropped, and when I saw him it just made me warm all over,
"For," thinks I, "you're just about the size to suit Thanksgivin' day."
But before I got a bead on him, this dog of mine, old Rover,
Done some fool thing—least I thought so—and my turkey flew away.

What did I do? Like a coward, grabbed that poor dog by the collar,
And I own I beat him shameful, but he didn't even moan,
Then I turned my gun upon him, just because he wouldn't holler;
Like a mad man pulled the trigger, and he dropped just like a stone.
Well, sir, I can't tell my feelings; why, I thought I'd surely smother.
When I saw him fall I turned away in horror from the sight,
And I thought I knew how Cain felt when he left his murdered brother,
As I walked I cared not whither till I saw 'twas coming night.

When I got near home I noticed how the air was growing colder,
And a cloud bank rolled up gloomy to the west'ard, threatenin' snow,
So I hurried on, and wondered what would wife say when I told her
About Rover. She and baby thought so much of him, you know.
As I reached the corner yonder I could see the lamplight burnin'
At the window, and I knew the folks were waiting there for me.
And I walked on in the darkness slowly,

"I OWN I BEAT HIM SHAMEFUL."

though my heart was yearnin'
To sit down once more by Mary, with my baby on my knee.

At the open door, awaitin' with a welcome smile, stood Mary.
"Where is babe?" "She went to meet you when she heard old Rover bark."
So she answered, and my heart fell as I looked out on the prairie,
Just to think of her a wanderin' alone out in the dark.
"She's all right; the dog is with her," says her mother, speakin' cheerful;
But, you know, I knew he wasn't, so I stood without a word—
And just then we both were startled by a dog a howlin' fearful,
Somethin' like a coyote yelpin'; just the worst I ever heard.

"Goodness me," says wife, "that's Rover! But I never heard him cryin'
Out in such a dreadful way as that"—then, suddenly, once more
Came that doleful sound a-ringin', just as if the brute was dyin'
An' was asking us to help him, so I dashed out through the door.
See those cottonwoods, just yonder? All the ground there's full of water,
Soft and marshy, full of pit holes, deep enough to hide a steer.
As I ran along I prayed that God would save my baby daughter—
Then I thought of murdered Rover, and I wished that he was near.

It was darker than a pocket, but that made no diff'rence to me,
So I run on calling "Baby" till it echoed all around,
Then I stood stock still and listened, and a thrill of joy went through me,
For I heard my baby callin', and I blessed the welcome sound.
"Here I am, come help me, papa! I'm a-sinkin' in the water!"
How my heart beat as I dashed on, prayin' God with ev'ry breath,
Till at last, waist deep in mud and slush, I found my baby daughter
With old Rover—bruised and battered—holdin' on to her like death!

Well, it didn't take me long, you bet, to get her on my shoulder,
And the dog crawled out behind us till we safely reached the trees.
Then I hollered out to Mary—such a yell of joy, it told her
That our babe was safe—and then and there I fell down on my knees.
There, I guess that's all—O, Rover? Why, I'm glad to say I missed him
With my shot; but his poor head and back were shameful bruised and sore.
But my Mary washed and nussed him and, to tell the truth, she kissed him
And we all just love and pet him as we never did before.

So to-morrow load your folks up in the wagon and come over.
After church we mean to spend the day in prayer and songs of praise.
For this fam'ly—baby, wife and me—and faithful, dear old Rover,
Mean to make it just the happiest of all Thanksgivin' days.

—Tom Sullivan, in Chicago Times-Herald.

A RURAL PEACEMAKER.

A Thanksgiving Story.

THEY did not pay much attention to Thanksgiving in the country school district in which I taught in the west a good many years ago. Christmas was the chief holiday of the winter, and it was celebrated without any special demonstration, for most of the people were poor and there was not much sentiment in their general make-up. Old Hannah Dorton, with whom I boarded, was of New England birth, and she had not come to the west until some years after her marriage. She was a woman of a good deal of force of character, and no one in the neighborhood had a nimbler tongue. One evening about two weeks before Thanksgiving I said to her:

"Do the people observe Thanksgiving very generally in this neighborhood?"

"No, they do not," replied the old lady with considerable emphasis. "And it has always been a good deal of a trial to me that so little attention was paid to a day that we made so much of back there in dear old New England. It was the greatest holiday of the year to us, and how we did enjoy it!"

"BLEST BE THE TIE THAT BINDS."

"Why do they pay so little attention to it here?"

"Well, I guess it is just because they have never got in the way of paying any attention to it. They never celebrated the Fourth of July as it ought to be celebrated until my husband got them started to doing it ten years before he died, and now we have a big celebration every year."

"Some one ought to start them to celebrating Thanksgiving."

"So they ought. But who is to do it?"

I reflected for a few minutes, and then I said:

"Suppose we start them off in that direction."

"How?" asked the old lady dropping her knitting into her lap and manifesting eager interest.

"Suppose we get up a Thanksgiving dinner in the schoolhouse. Invite all the folks in the district to come and bring their dinner with them. There does not seem to be any social life in the neighborhood unless one can call occasional spelling matches and singing schools in the schoolhouse social diversions. The people never eat and drink together in a merrymaking of any kind. Don't you think that the idea of a Thanksgiving dinner in the schoolhouse would take?"

The old lady reflected for a moment and then said:

"Yes, I think it would. It would be a novelty to every one, and I think the folks would turn out big, only—only—"

"Only what?" I asked.

"Well, the fact is, there are so many folks in this neighborhood that don't speak to each other. I never saw anything like it. There is old Squire Bent, who won't speak to his daughter because she married John Watters against the squire's wishes. There was nothing against John, excepting that he was poor, and he had a brother that had been in jail, but John couldn't help that, and he has done splendidly ever since he married, and it is my opinion that the squire would like to make up with John and Nellie, only he is too proud to make any advances, and they won't either. Then there is Kate Whiting and her sister, Lucy Patch, who had a falling out years ago, and ain't spoke to each other since, and before that one was the very shadder of the other. Reuben Hoopes and his brother Silas and their families fell out over the property after old man Hoopes died, and they ain't spoke since. Then the Anderson and Robey families had a falling out five years ago, and they don't speak, and before that they were as thick as flies around a molasses bar'l. Then there are other families in the district that ain't as friendly as they ought to be, so your Thanksgiving dinner might end in a riot if all these people come together in the schoolhouse."

"Not with a woman of your tact at the head of it," I said.

"Well, you go ahead and get it up, and I will aid and abet you all I can. It will be a break in the monotony of things here even if there is a fight."

I spent all of my time before and after school during the next ten days in calling at all of the homes in the neighborhood and inviting the people to come to the schoolhouse on Thanksgiving day with well-filled baskets. The schoolhouse was unusually large, and there would be room for all if we took out a part of the seats. Three days before Thanksgiving old Mrs. Dorton said:

"I guess you'll have the house full Thanksgiving. Nancy Ross was in here to-day, and she says that the whole district is coming, and Nancy knows if anyone does, for she spends most of her time trotting about picking up gossip and retailing it out again. She is as good as the local columns of a newspaper for giving news about what folks are saying and doing, and she says that the idea of the Thanksgiving dinner in the schoolhouse has caught like wildfire. Nancy says she wouldn't miss it for a party."

The larger boys and girls of the school met me at the schoolhouse the evening before Thanksgiving, and we decorated the room beautifully with evergreens and several flags we had been able to borrow. Provision had been made for two long tables to run almost the entire length of the room with some smaller tables in the corners.

"I suppose that we will have to be careful how we seat the people at the tables," I said to Mrs. Dorton.

"You just leave that to me," said the old lady. "I know the people better than you do, and I won't be so apt to make awkward blunders. I'll set 'em down all right."

Nancy Ross was right when she said that the whole district would be present at the dinner. The dinner was to be at one o'clock, and by noon the house was filled by a merry, happy crowd, including almost every family in the district.

There were baskets and boxes and even tubfuls of turkeys and chickens and doughnuts and pies and cakes. There were baskets of big red apples, and Hiram Hawkins brought half a barrel of sweet cider. Some one brought a basket of popcorn balls for the children, and there was an infinite variety of jellies and jams and preserves and pickles brought forth from boxes and baskets.

"There's enough stuff here to feed an army," said Hannah Dorton, as she bustled about from table to table, the happiest and most active person in the house.

A few minutes before one o'clock I heard her say to Mrs. Kate Whiting: "Come, now, Kate; you and your husband and two children are to set at this table over in this corner. Come right along." And when they were seated the old lady bustled up to Mrs. Patch and said:

"Now, Lucy, you and your husband and the children are to sit here at this table."

"And if she didn't plump them right down with the Whitings that they hadn't spoken to for years," said the voluble Nancy Ross afterward. Indeed Nancy was so fond of telling about that Thanksgiving dinner afterward that I think I will let her tell about it now.

"Then," she said, "if that Hanner Dorton didn't set old Squire Bent down at the head of one table with his daughter Nellie at his right hand and his son-in-law, John Watters, at his left, an' their baby in a high chair at its gran'pa's side, an' it wa'n't three minutes before the old squire had that baby in his arms and he et his whole dinner with the little thing in his lap. I heard his daughter say to him 'shan't I take the baby, father, so that you can eat your dinner in greater comfort?' But he held right on to it, and there he sat talkin' to Nellie and John same as if there'd never been any trouble at all. And he had that baby in his arms the whole afternoon, an' went around as proud sayin' to folks: 'See my grandson. Ain't he a mighty fine boy?' It was the first time he had ever seen the child, an' the next week he made Nellie and John come and live with him. Then what did that Hanner Dorton do but put Reuben Hoopes an' his brother Silas and their families at a table by themselves, an' I heard her say to 'em: 'Come, now, you folks want to be sociable an' have a good visit together same as own brothers ought to on Thanksgivin' day.' Their wives have always wanted to make up, an' I tell you they found their tongues mighty soon, an' 'fore that meal was over they was talkin' away as if there had never been any row over property or anything else. An' before they knew it the Andersons and Robey families found themselves at the same table with Hanner sayin' to 'em: 'Now it don't make no diff'rence about the past. This is Thanksgiving day, an' a good time to forget that there has ever been anything but a happy past between you folks.'

"We will now sing:

'Blest be the tie that binds.'

An' ev'rybody sung it, an' then Elder Sharpe asked a blessin' an' the dinner was begun. There never was such a spread seen before in these parts, an' you never would have thought to have seen them people eatin' an' laughin' an' merrymakin' together that there was such a thing in the world as malice or envy or bitterness or ill-will or anything o' that sort, no you wouldn't. After the dinner we had games an' sung songs an' made speeches, an' from that time on there was more peace an' happiness an' sociability in the neighborhood than there ever was before. I tell you, we'd good reason to stand up as we did before we started for home an sing 'Praise God from whom all blessings flow.'"—J. L. Harbour, in Detroit Free Press.

"Now Dont Get the Blues."

When a cheerful, brave and light-hearted woman is suddenly plunged into that perfection of misery, the blues, it is a sad picture.

It is usually this way:

She has been feeling out of sorts for some time, experiencing severe headache and backache; sleeps very poorly and is exceedingly nervous.

Sometimes she is nearly overcome by faintness, dizziness, and palpitation of the heart; then that bearing-down feeling is dreadfully wearing.

Her husband says, "Now, don't get the blues! You will be all right after you have taken the doctor's medicine."

But she does not get all right. She grows worse day by day, until all at once she realizes that a distressing female complaint is established.

Her doctor has made a mistake.

She loses faith; hope vanishes; then comes the morbid, melancholy, everlasting blues. She should have been told just what the trouble was, but probably she withheld some information from the doctor, who, therefore, is unable to accurately locate her particular illness.

Mrs. Pinkham has relieved thousands of women from just this kind of trouble, and now retains their grateful letters in her library as proof of the great assistance she has rendered them. This same assistance awaits every sick woman in the land.

Mrs. Winifred Allender's Letter.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I feel it my duty to write and tell you of the benefit I have received from your wonderful remedies. Before taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, I was a misery to myself and every one around me. I suffered terrible pain in my back, head, and right side, was very nervous, would cry for hours. Menses would appear sometimes in two weeks, then again not for three or four months. I was so tired and weak, could not sleep nights, sharp pains would dart through my heart that would almost cause me to fall.

"My mother coaxed me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I had no faith in it, but to please her I did so. The first bottle helped me so much that I continued its use. I am now well and weigh more than I ever did in my life."—MRS. WINIFRED ALLENDER, Farmington, Ill.

—"The Story of a life" at the Cit Hall, Saturday evening, Nov. 24.

—Epworth League Sociable to night at A. L. Jones' residence, on Second Street.

—Rev. O. R. Jenks. of Chicago, preached at Swedeback's Hall Monday evening.

—A. L. Mealey and Oscar look considerably citified in their new quarters in Mowatt's building.

—Fred C. Kespohl will move his insurance office into the rooms latley vacated by the jewelery store.

—Weldt has opened up a new store in the Mulford building, Cor. R. R. Ave. and 2nd Street.

—Next Thursday, November 29. has been designated by President McKinley and by Governor John Lind as Thanksgiving Day. Everybody is expected to have turkey for dinner.

—The funeral of John Mayer was conducted by Rev. M. Says at the Catholic Church on Sunday afternoon. Many relatives and friends from abroad were in attendence. The St. Anthony Benovoleut Society and the St Michals Society, to both of which he belonged were present and took part in the funeral. A large number of railroad officials were present a car coming from Willmar. The remains was buried in the Catholic cemetary.

—The Y. M. C. A. is making arrangments to send out several student bands during the Holiday week. They were so well pleased with their reception here last year that they have put Delano on their list for this year. Let our young people take hold and do what they can to make theis as pleasent and profitable as on their former visit. Further announcements will be made as arrangments are made and programme perfected.

—The M. E. S. S. entertainment at the church on Sunday evening was a success. Those taking part did well, and the audience was pleased. Among those deserving mention are Alfred Farnham, Ernest Dennison, Marion Williams, and Ella Sturman who recited; and Beth Shrader and the Primary class who sang. Prof. Charles S. Hawker made the address. Mrs. Jesse Hawker kindly prepared the programe and well earned the thanks of all for her hard work in arranging so good an entertainment.

—Last Monday evening Mr. Mealey was tendered a genuine suprise, by his wife, in the honor of his recent birthday and wedding anniversary. The following friends responded to Mrs. M's invitation: Mesdames Knoll, Conzet, Platner, Schaffer, Buckley, Eppel, Wittman, Wolfenden, Lindsley, O'Connor, Roosen, Rader, Lanway, Bolton, Shrader and Green. Messrs Shrader, T. Rader, W. Rader, Wolfendon, Wittman, F. Lindsley, Roosen, Bolton, Lanway, Buckley, Eppel, Schaffer, Plattner and Green.

The company assembled at 8 o'clock Mr. M. arriving a few minutes afterward. So un unconscious had he been to passing events that on entering, his wife was compelled to say: "Why Link you are at home. Let me take your cap." By request no presents were brought. The evenings entertainment was progressive croconole. The game was a departure from the usual cinch and was thoroughly enjoyed by all. Mr. and Mrs. Wolfenden offered a few preparatory suggestions and the science of the game was readily grasped. At 11 o'clock bounteous and delicious refreshments were served which were also thoroughly enjoyed. Mrs. M. spared no pains in making the occasion enjoyable for all. She was assisted by Miss Mable Young who occupies no second place in the art of entertaining. Social intercorse occupied the rest of the time till nearly twelve o'clock and only business interests on the morrow warned the company that it was time to extend thanks and congratulations to Mr. and Mrs. Mealey and depart.

Protests Against Hyphenating

(Washington Post.)

Will the good time ever come when the hyphenated American will drop out of our politics? Will it be possible in some happy coming year for the voting citizens of the United States to go into, pass through and come out of a presidential campaign without any attempt being made to separate them into classes designated by the names of the countries out of which they or their progenitors migrated to become soverigns of this republic? The American people. including those of foreignbirth or decent, are weary of the presistency with which certain interests, political and financial, contiuue to appeal to voters on the assumption that their political action is controlled by the accident of birth. If it were that millions of our citizens did their political thinking and their voting, not as Americans, but as foreigners, the fact would be deplorable. It would present a far more serious question than any issue of the late campaign, But it is absolutely false.

WANTS LAW CHANGED

Corbin Claims Unjust Discrimination Against West Pointers.

Enlisted Men Eligible to Promotion to Commissions After Two Years —West Pointers Are Obliged to Serve Four Years.

Adjt. Gen. Corbin, according to a New York Tribune special from Washington, has started a movement to induce congress to remove from the statute books a law that makes an unjust discrimination against West Pointers in the army. It is almost inexplicable, the adjutant says, that such legislation should ever have been enacted or have remained in force for 12 years as that which favors the promotion of enlisted men to commissions above the young men specially educated at government expense to fill commands.

In his current annual report Gen. Corbin devotes considerable space to the act of June 18 1878, which provided for the promotion to the grade of commissioned officer of meritorious non-commissioned officers who shall be found morally, intellectually and physically qualified for promotion, and the act of July 30, 1892, which extends to all unmarried soldiers under 30 years and possessing the requisite qualifications the privilege of competing at prescribed examinations for commissions.

That the law operated well in attracting to the ranks a superior class of intelligent young men was demonstrated by the yearly increasing number who obtained admission into the commissioned branch of the army. There were six in 1893, and 68 in 1900. These men were compelled to serve in the ranks only two years under the law, and, calling attention to this fact, Gen. Corbin says: "Experience has shown that two years is too brief a period in which enlisted men can fit themselves for the important duties of commissioned officers. It is only little less than travesty to say that a man can qualify as an officer by serving as an enlisted man in one-half the time required for a cadet to complete his course at West Point. It is recommended that the law be amended to read four years instead of two. This will put appointments from the ranks and the military academy on the same footing."

KAISER HAS A NEW BARBER.

Dismisses His Former Attendant Because of Undue Familiarity.

Emperor William's barber, Francois Haby, the inventor of his majesty's style of mustache, recently ventured to remark:

"What does your majesty think of China?"

This so ruffled the emperor's temper that, taking Haby by the ear, he escorted the barber from his chamber. The incident has been laughed at throughout Berlin.

Apparently Francois Haby has returned to grace only to be again cast down, for it was announced May 10 last that it was frequently remarked during the then recent festivities that his majesty's mustache was no longer "turned upward so fiercely as formerly, but worn at an angle of 45 degrees only, with the ends no longer spreading out proudly."

It was added that it was a fact that the emperor had abandoned his former fashion of wearing his mustache, although all male Germany adhered to it, one reason being the dismissal of Haby, who had "become impudent and had presumed to trade upon his alleged friendly relations with the emperor."

Appeal to Reason: If you are ignorant of a man's action and he takes $1. from your purse, you call that theft; if you are ignorant of his action, and he sells $4 worth of food and charges you $5—you call that business. But in each case you get nothing for your dollar. The methods are different, but the effect on you is just the same. You may be too ignorant or thoughtless to see the cheat in one of the instances, but you are out a dollar.

Litchfield Independent:— The Republican "statesmen" and newspapers are very busy just now reorganizing the Democratic party. They had better attend to their own business. The Democrats will take care of their organization, and in spite of the recent defeat in the nation will be on hand for the next campaign. They will not do any truckling to the Lawlers and Clevelands of the party either. Those old line Democrats who have seem fit to differ with and desert the party in the last four years will be welcome back if they wish to come, but the party organizations will not be turned over to them —not by several rows of apple trees.

PIONEER PRESS: It is on rising, not on falling prices, that business thrives and men grow rich. The upward trend of prices in all lines of production, whether of raw materials or manufactured goods, is not therefore a thing to be complained of, even by those who do not yet individually appear to see the benefit of the advance Wages must advance to match prices; though they are apt to advance more slowly. Fat markets for products stimulate the demand for money to be used in production, and so tend to improve interest rates, thus bettering the condition of many living on the returns of interest bearing investments. So long as just reasons just exist for higher prices there will, then, be no general kick. It is only when. as in the case of the salt trusts, the advance is without reason that the kicking becomes violent, and very excusably so.

Fictitious Prosperity.

Last week's record of the stock market was phenomnal alike in the number of transactions and in the advances in quotations. The reported transactions in the four days, including the half day of Saturday, on the Stock Exhange alone aggregated 50,000,000 shares of a par value of $500,000,000, and the actual transactions exceeded the capacity of the ticker to report them.

The increase in the value of the stocks dealt in exceeded $500,000,000. Monday continued the excitement, with sales of over 1,600,000 shares reported and the ticker working overtime in the vain effort to keep pace with the activity of the market.

This would be a welcome evidence of "prosperity" if it represented any real addition to the wealth and resources of the country, but the slightest reflection suffices to show that it represents nothing of the kind. A railrord share or an "industrial" has no value except that which is derived from its capacity to earn money by carrying on its business of transportation or manufacture. The transfer of a share or of a million shares from one speculator to another adds nothing whatever to its value or to the value of the property it represents. In the whole volume of transactions under notice it is probable that less than 5 per cent, represents investments; the other 95 per cent, represents pure gambling, and it is not worth while arguing the proposition that no country can possibly become rich from any amount of gambling among its citizens.—World.

WORLD: The best Christmas gift that could be sent to our gallant soldier boys in the Philipines would be a proclamation by Mr. McKinley offering peace to islands on the same basis as Cuba which would soon give the boys a chance to come home.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Regular Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, D. C. Nov., 16. 1900

If radical republicans can have their way the coming session of Congress will see a political fight not equaled in intensity and bitterness since the republicans tried to pass the notorious Force bill. The object now is the same it was then — to curtail the political power of the South. The present sheme of the radicals is to have the reapportionment bill under the new census provide for a reduction of the representation in Congress and of the electoral votes of a reduction of nearly every one of the southern states. Needless to say that the democrats in the House and Senate will to a man fight such a bill to the ditch with every legislature weapon at their comand, and those weapons can be made effective enough in the Senate, if not in the House. to block all business if it becomes necessary to prevent action on the bill. Mr. McKinley does not at present favor this scheme, but that gives no assurance that he will not favor it later. He is a follower, not a leader, of his party, and he is likely to repeat his Porto Rican somersault, if the radicals can control the republican caucuses of the House and Senate. Senator Thurston, of Nebr., seems to be hankering after the leadership of the radicals in the Senate.

The Carnegie armor trust gets a contract aggregating $17,000,000 and the Midvale Steel Co., which under bid the trust, in the first place, got left. That is the sum and substance of Secretary Long's dickering with the steel trust for a price on armor for our new warships.

A statement was officially given out denying that this government was in any way hampering the negotations with China, as charged by American correspondents of London papers, and asserting that Minister Conger and Mr. Kockhill have authority to act in their discretion upon all matters of detail connected with the negotations.

Senator Vest, of Mo., returned to Washington this week in better physical condition than he has been for five or six years, and his talk indicates his intention to take his oldtime active part in the business of the Senate at coming session of Congress. Senator Vest has opinions on all things political and does not hesitate to express them. He said of the proposition to reorganize the democratic party: "It is nonsense to talk reorganization of the party at this time. All that the democrats can do is to await developments in the future and renew our allegiance to the principles of the party as announced by Jefferson." Speaking of Mr. McKinley's re-election, Senator Vest said: "There is no cause for discouragement to democrats in the result of the election History has simply repealed itself. No political party in this country has ever been able to defeat an administration which was carrving on a foreign war. The Federal party was destroyed because of its opposition to the war of 1812. Thousands of patriotic citizens, who were really opposed to the foreign policy of Mr. McKinley, voted for him because they thought that we should first end the war in the Philippines and then settle other questions connected with the archipelago. And nothing was more freely heard in the compaign from conservative men than the argument that it would not do to discredit our government by withdrawing the troops from the Philippines while armed opposition to the government existed there. I believe this feeling did more for President McKinley than any other one factor in the election."

It is said that the order for Russell B. Harrison's honorable discharge from the volunteer service—he has been a Lieut. Col. of volunteers—which was this week issued by the War Department, was instigated by feeling against his father, ex'President Harrison for not having been more active in his support of Mr. McKinley in the campaign. The reason given was that his services were no longer required, but the fact that other volunteer officers are being sent to the Philippines on every transport prevents its acceptance by those who think his discharge a whack at his father.

Political parties are like individuals, the more they get the more they want. Boss Hanna has ordered that Senator Blackburn's right to his seat shall be contested. This may or may not follow, as Boss Hanna has found out long ago that there are a number of republican Senators who will not be bossed by him. Senator Blackburn's term will not begin until March 4, next. It is quite safe to say that he will get the seat he was elected to fill, notwithstanding the big republican majority in the Senate.

Mr. McKinley's request made to the Cabinet this week, that each of them retain their portfolios under the new administration, which has been widely exploited as something extraordinary was in reality but a bit of buncome, a sort of official certificate of character for each of the gentlemen who are members of the Cabinet It is not probable that any President who was ever reelected failed to ask the members of his Cabinet to remain with him, although there is no record of any of them having chosen Mr. McKinley's way of doing it—a speech at a cabinet meeting. Nothing is more certain than that there will be changes in the Cabinet when the next administration begins.

AMERICA'S THANKSGIVING—1900

Father all bountiful, in mercy hear
With this our universal voice of prayer—
The voice that needs must be
Upraised in thanks to Thee,
O Father, from Thy children everywhere.

A multitudinous voice, wherein we fain
Wouldst have Thee hear no lightest sob of pain—
No murmur of distress,
Nor moan of loneliness.
Nor drip of tears, though soft as summer rain.

And, Father, give us first to comprehend,
No ill can come from Thee; lean Thou and lend
Us clearer sight to see
Our boundless debt to Thee,
Since all Thy deeds are blessings in the end.

And let us feel and know that, being Thine
We are inheritors of heart divine,
And hands endowed with skill,
And strength to work Thy will
And fashion to fulfillment Thy design.

So, let us thank Thee, with all self aside,
Nor any lingering taint of mortal pride;
As here to Thee we dare
Uplift our faltering prayer,
Lend it some fervor of the glorified

We thank Thee that our land is loved of Thee,
The blessed home of thrift and industry,
With ever-open door
Of welcome to the poor—
Thy shielding hand o'er all abidingly.

Even thus We thank Thee for the wrong that grew
Into a right that heroes battled to
With brothers long estranged.
Once more as brothers ranged,
Beneath the red and white and starry blue.

Aye, thanks—though tremulous the thanks expressed—
Thanks for the battle at its worst, and best—
For all the clanging fray
Whose discord dies away
Into a pastoral song of peace and rest.

—James Whitcomb Riley in New York World.

Thanksgiving Day.

Thanksgiving days were suggested to the early settlers of the United States by the Hebrew feast of the tabernacles. They were early appointed in the New England colonies. There is a record of official appointment of Thanksgiving Days in Massachusetts Bay as early as 1633: Plymouth in 1651: New Netherlands in 1644: in New York in 1755 and 1760. During the revolution Thanksgiving Day was a national institution; being annually recommended by congress. In 1784 there was a general thanksgiving day appointed for peace. Another thanksgiving day was appointed in 1789. During the Civil War President Lincoln issued a proclamation for a thanksgiven day in 1863 and 1864. Since that time a proclamation has been issued annually by the president for such a day. Custom has established the time for the last Thursday in November of each year as the national thanksgiven day. This year Thursday, November 29, was named by the President as the day.

Usually religious services are held, a thanksgiving sermon preached, and thanks rendered to Almighty God for his kindness to us as a nation. After services the family reunions are held; often several families surrounding one large table on which a beautiful dinner is spread, the chief part of which is roast turkey. This is a day upon which many old friends and neighbors renew acquaintance, and have an enjoyable time. Thanksgiving day in the United States has come to be one of the most observed of the many holidays set apart for the injoyment of the people, and old and young look forward to the coming with fond hopes and for weeks after it has passed, talk of the good time had. Long may our nation continue to give thanks to the Great Giver of every good and perfect gift for the rich and bounteous blessings bestowed upon us.

POLITICIANS have lately been busy announcing that Bryanism is dead! They said so four years ago but they put up one of the terriblest fights in their history this fall against it.

GEN. JOSEPH WHEELER in a recent speech in New York gave out the suggestion that people advocating the abolition of the army canteen offered nothing in its place. But that the Y. M. C. A. would be the proper substitute.

THE young man Frank Hamilton, who was engaged in the row at the West Hotel where young Day met his death, has been charged with murder in the first degree and lodged in the Hennepin county jail to await the action of the Grand Jury which meets Dec. 4.

CONGRESS will soon convene and then the people will have a chance to see what ideas for saving the country will be advanced. Every true citizen of the United States wants our free institutions and our constitution preserved. Success to every effort in that direction.

A DIME musuem is said to have as an attraction, the Wise girls who have become famous for their connection with the trial of Miller and Hardy for killing Mrs. Wise. People must want to part with their dimes awfully bad, or have a distorted curiosity, to pay out money to get sight of them.

THE world is making history at a rapid rate now-a-days. Many men of prominence are growing old; or are sick, or from other causes are likely to die, or be set aside from their present places. Among them Queen Victoria, King Oscar, of Sweden, the Czar of Russia, the Pope of Rome and others. With so many new hands at the helms what changes may be looked for, no man can tell.

TELEGRAMS from Washington, of Nov. 19, tell of a crash that awakened the sleeping occupents of the White House and greatly disturbed the President and Mrs. McKinley, caused by the falling of the magnificient oil painting of Abraham Lincoln that has been gracing the walls of the east room for many years. It is said that the frame was completely ruined but that the splended painting was uninjured.

A TERRIBLE tragedy occurred in the West Hotel, Minneapolis, billard hall, at about 2 a. m. Sunday morning. Leonard Day, only son of a widowed mother, with a number of other young men as playing pool, and got into a general fight. When all had quieted down young Day was found to have been stabbed and died in a few minutes. Another of the party Frank Hamilton by name, a reporter on the Times, was arrested for murder. This is a terrible story to relate as having occurred in the biggest hotel, of Minneapolis, on a Sunday morning; or at so early an hour on any morning. Such law breaking preaches some awful lessons to the rising generation.

SOME of the republican papers are trying to make out that Gov. Lind will appoint W. D. Washburn United States Senator, instead of C. K. Davis, deceased. They argue that in case Gov. Lind appoints a republican he will most likely be elected by the incoming Legislature to fill out the balance of the term. Of course Governor Lind will not do anything of the kind. He is not expected to help republicans settle their quarrels in such a way. His plain duty is to appoint Hon Chas A. Towne U. S. senator. If he is only to hold the office one month that is not the Governor's look-out. Possibly Providence may provide that he keep it longer; especially if the Republicans can't agree on a successor.

Senator Davis Dead.

At 8:48 P. M. on Tuesday, Nov. 27, Cushman Kellogg Davis, United States Senator from Minnesota, died at St. Paul, surrounded by relatives and friends. His wife, his father, mother and his two sisters being in constant attendance. Dr. Alex J. Stone his physician, from the first offered little hope for the recovery of his patient. Mr. Davis has always been a leader among Republicans, having been Governor and Senator, and held other positions of honor. He was at the time of his death chairman of the Senate Committee on foreign relation. He was a member of the Paris Peace Commission. He opposed the Porto Rico Tariff; favored giving Cubans their independence. His orations and speeches read as well as the best in the land. He was an authority on international law; an able lawyer and an eminent citizen of Minnesota. He will be missed in the councils of our country.

DEMOCRATIC ATTITUDE.

On Pending Legislation anounced by Chaieman Jones.

Washington, Nov. 26, —Senator James K. Jones, chairman of the Democratic national committee, has arrived in Washington and gives out the following plan of procedure determined upon:

Determined opposition to a large standing army; troops sufficent to restore order in the Philippines, but no regular army for the suppression of strikes and labor troubles. Opposition to Hanna ship subsidy bill and other schemes by which corporations seek to get their hands into the treasury. Solid support for the construction of a Nicaragua canal to be built, owned, controlled and protected by the government, for the use of the world in time of peace and for the protection of the United States in time of war. The rejection of the Hay Paunce fote treaty, which seeks to make Great Britain a partner in the Isthmain canal as a condition precedent authority for its construction. Watchfulness in the matter of appropritions and the prevention of excesses by a party run mad with the stream of empire. Reduction of the taxes imposed as a result of the war with Spain, so as to remove the burdens that were imposed upon the masses of people. A demand that a solemn pledge made to the world on behalf of Cuba prior to the Spanish war shall be redeemed, and that the island be permitted to establish its own government without interferance by the United States The enactment of a reapportionment bill as provided by the Constitution that shall deal justly with all the states—no reduction of the representation of the Southern States.

It is believed the Democratic steering committee will approve the program.

WILLIAM J. BRYAN AND CHAS A. TOWNE.

Have Met in Chicago to Settle the Future of Democratic Party—Bryan Will Remain in Politics as Long as He Lives.

CHICAGO, Nov. 24.—William Jennings Bryan arrived in Chicago this morning from Lincoln and drove to the Auditorium Annex. He did not register but was at once shown to the room occupied by Charles A. Towne, of Minnesota. There he remained in consulation with Mr. Towne and Former Senator Fred D. T. Dubois, of Idaho, until tonight when he returned to Lincoln.

Mr. Bryan refused to say what was discussed during the meeting, but said that the future policy of the Democratic party was one of the topics.

"I expect to remain in politics as long as I live," said Mr. Bryan. "I shall continue to advocate and work with both tongue and pen for the principles for which I have fought so long. I shall continue to reside in Lincoln, Nebraska."

Concerning the proposed reorganization of Democrats he said: "I have nothing to say on that subject at this time When the opportune time comes for me to express myself I shall be heard. I shall write my views out carefully that my position many not be misunderstood. I have neither inclination nor time to do so now.

"I have received almost innumerable offers for my services, comprising opportunities in nearly all vocations of life, but I am not looking for a position—not now," and he joined in with Mr. Towne in a hearty laugh.

"I am in the best of health and expect to be exceedingly busy for some time to come. I have not seen any of the local politicians. I came here to consult with Mr. Towne and one or two other men in regard to matters which I do not care to talk about for publication." News Tribune.

British Reverse.

Pioneer Press Cable Services

LONDON, Nov. 29.—The most startling proof that the war in South Africa is still full of vigor is contained in Gen. Roberts' dispatch announcing that 400 British troops, with two guns, have surrendered to the Boers at Dewstrop, southwest of Bloemfountain. It is poor consolation that the British have since reoccupied the town after the Boers had withdrawn.

The Cape Colony revolt will surely be much encouraged by this success of the Boers.

Secretary Root insists that all volunteer soldiers now in the Philippines must be discharged by July 1, in compliance with law leaving an army of only about 25,000 men.

Minnesota beats Nebraska at football on Thanksgiving day, at Lincoln, Neb., by a score of 20 to 12.

Thirteen killed and many injured, mostly boys, looking at a game of football in San Francisco is reported this morning. The boys had climed onto a glass factory roof which gave way precipitating some of them into melted glass, and killing and wounding many.

Third Regiment Ambushed.

Manila, Nov. 28 —A detachment of the Third United States infantry was ambushed Sunday near Malolos. The ladrones fired a volley at the Americans, killing two privates of Company F. and wounding three. The insurgents escaped into a swamp.

Numerous insurgent bands have been dispersed and considerable quantities of stores destroyed in the province of Bulacan by General Grant's mounted scouts.

General Bates reports the capture of thirty three insurgents, six of whom murdered seven persons last spring.

While returning by steamer a detachment of soldiers landed at San Vincents and attacked a body of rebels killing seven. A branch party attacked a party beyond Pahstina, killing five and capturing nineteen.

The Americans had no casualties. There had been considerable wire cutting in that district.

PLAN TO REMOVE THE MAINE.

Objections Made to the Use of Dynamite—Coffer Dam to Be Built.

Captain of the Port Young has asked the government to refuse any and all proposals looking to the removal of the wreck of the United States battleship Maine by explosives. Last year three firms offered to remove the hull of the battleship in return for the material, but there has always been a strong objection to the use of dynamite, because of the probability that there are portions of bodies still in the wreck, and the authorities shrink from the idea of desecration.

A scheme has been submitted involving the construction of a coffer dam, the pumping out of the water and taking of the wreck apart in pieces; and work on this line will probably begin next month.

An Alpine Garden.

At Schachensee, in the Bavarian Alps, at an elevation of 1,500 meters, an Alpine garden has been laid out and planted by a foreman of the Munich Botanical garden. The plan and outline of the work were furnished by Prof. Gobel. The land is the property of the crown. It is intended next year to build a blockhouse and furnish it with the necessary comforts for the use of scientific visitors. Alpine gardens already exist near Innsbrueck, in the Dauphiny, in Italy, and on the Maritime Alps. This Bavarian garden will be the means of rescuing the finest Alpine plants from destruction.

Canning Meat in China.

Just before the outbreak of the present troubles a canning factory was established at Chin-Kiang, the intention being to supply European markets with tinned meats, more especially game and wild fowl. The supply of wild fowl, at a ridiculously small price, is practically unlimited in that part of the celestial empire.

The Patriot Powder

By T. C. Harbaugh.

EVERY reader of the stirring history of the American revolution knows what a fierce battle ground was the Mohawk valley. Lying open, as it did, to Indian and tory incursions, its patriot inhabitants were constantly in a state of fear, and many who were true to the colonies were compelled to smother their feelings in order to save both life and property.

Among the American families who during the struggle occupied an humble house in the heart of the valley was one named Whitton.

Some time before the opening of hostilities the childless couple had adopted an orphan boy, who, although American by birth, bore the name of Gottlieb for a German grandfather.

Gottlieb Whitton, as he was known, was a smart boy of 15, short and stout, and the possessor of a nature which was hard to ruffle. Up with the lark and to bed with the sun, the boy was known everywhere in the neighborhood for his industry, and parents were wont to hold him up as an example to their less thrifty children.

The Whittons were favorably disposed to the American cause, though they had succeeded in making no enemies of their tory neighbors.

The house in the valley stood on the trail to Fort Stanwix, an American outpost, and the spies of both parties were almost constantly crossing the neutral ground.

One night Gottlieb Whitton looked from the small window of his attic and witnessed a very unusual proceeding. The moon was a pale crescent in the sky, and the drifting clouds still further dimmed the little light it afforded.

He saw a man carrying something into the house from the garden that came almost up to the back door. It was not Mr. Whitton, and the proceeding was enough to arouse the boy's suspicion.

Again and again the strange man made little trips between house and garden, each time bringing from the latter something bulky, which he carried in his arms.

At last the man disappeared in the garden and did not return.

The boy waited and watched a long time for him, and at last crept back to his hard bed in the corner and fell asleep.

The next day the farmer told Gottlieb that he and his wife intended to visit some relatives at one end of the valley, and concluded by saying that he would have to remain at home and keep house two or three days.

Once it was on the boy's tongue to mention the strange movements he had witnessed the previous night, but fearing to let Mr. Whitton know that he had played the spy he let the opportunity pass.

When noon came the boy found himself alone with a dinner of his own getting, and at sundown he had fed the cattle and shut up the house.

His adopted parents at parting had cautioned him to admit nobody, and Mrs. Whitton had taken care to say that she had placed all the food he needed in the pantry, and that she had locked the cellar till their return.

The boy went up to his bed in the attic as the birds retired to their nests in the trees.

Falling asleep almost directly, he passed through the first sound slumber, and then lay wide awake on the cot.

Suddenly there came up from below, and into the loft through the open window, the hum of voices.

Gottlieb crept to the window and looked out. A large tree grew in front of the house, shading the long porch during the day, and throwing its branches over the sloping roof.

There was a figure under the tree which was not there when Gottlieb crept up to bed. While he watched it was joined by another which came from the porch, and then the low voices were resumed.

The next minute Gottlieb went downstairs in his bare feet. The boy knew that the men outside contemplated mischief of some kind, and all at once he thought of the mysterious proceedings of the night before, and coupled with them Mrs. Whitton's remark about the cellar.

Stealthy footsteps came across the porch, and found the patriot boy listening at the door.

"Are you sure the boy sleeps in the garret?" asked a voice.

"That's his nest, as everybody knows," was the answer. "I know where the bolt is, and here I have the gimlet ready. It will not take us ten minutes to saw out a hand-hole, and then we're inside."

"Do you think we'll find the Yankee powder in the cellar?"

"It is nowhere else. We've tracked it to Jonas Whitton's house, and it hasn't gone onto Fort Stanwix yet. A sly fox is Jonas, but hereafter he can't blow hot and cold with the same breath, for everybody will know how he hid Yankee powder in his cellar."

Like a flash the whole truth dawned on the boy in the dark. The numerous trips between garden and house were now explained.

There was powder in the cellar, and it was patriot powder at that, intended to be smuggled into Fort Stanwix at the first favorable opportunity.

Gottlieb felt his heart leap with a desire to save the powder. He knew how sorely the little garrison of patriots needed the hidden article, and he resolved that if he could prevent it, it should not fall into the hands of the tories, to which party the men on the outside evidently belonged.

He did not have much time for reflection when the gimlet began its work on the door. He must act quickly.

Stepping to one corner of the room, he found a rifle which always stood there, and in a moment he had carried it to the door.

"What do you want?" suddenly asked the boy, in a voice sufficiently loud to be heard by the men outside.

In an instant the boring stopped.

"If you want to come in, why don't you knock?" continued Gottlieb.

The men consulted in whispers, the purport of which Gottlieb could not catch; but a moment later a fist struck the door, rapping three times.

"Hello, there, boy!" cried a rough voice. "You know now that we want to come in. Why don't you open the door?"

"I don't open at night to strangers," replied Gottlieb, undaunted.

The men laughed together.

"You'll save the door if you draw the bolt," said one. "We want to look into Jonas Whitton's cellar."

"It is locked, and Martha Whitton carries the key," answered Gottlieb.

"She is a careful dame, Martha is!" was the derisive retort. "She does well to go away from home with a lot of Yankee powder in the cellar. The trail leads to this very house, and there can be no mistake. Don't you intend to let us in, boy?"

"No."

A moment's silence followed Gottlieb's firm reply; then a heavy hand struck the door a powerful blow.

The boy knew the strength of the heavy hinges and thick planks; yet the men could in a little while batter down the door and overpower him.

"I know you are tories, who don't like Jonas Whitton," said Gottlieb. "I have been told not to let any strange people into the house till my folks come back."

"But you will let us in, Gottlieb," laughed the tory who did the talking for the big, brawny fellow in rough homespun. "If you won't open the door and don't want it to fall on you, stand aside. We are going to have the rebel powder."

"You charge the door at your peril," answered the boy, raising the rifle to his shoulder.

"Ha! What have you got in your hands, boy?"

"Attack the door and see!"

Retreating footsteps took the tories to the edge of the porch, and Gottlieb heard one say

"He's but a boy. The capture of the powder will make heroes of us and hasten the fall of the fort. I am not afraid, Reuben; the door can't withstand me. So here goes!"

These words were followed by a spring across the porch, and the powerful tory fell against the door, shaking every board in it.

"ATTACK THE DOOR AND SEE."

At the same time Gottlieb pressed the trigger, and the bullet which tore through the planks at short range drew a loud cry of pain from the man, who fell from the porch.

Accustomed to the use of the rifle, the boy patriot began to reload in the dark. Coolly, but rapidly, he rammed the bullet home, and once more stood ready to resume his defense of the powder.

"We'll come to-morrow and take every ounce of Yankee powder in the house, and you besides," roared a voice at the door. "We won't leave one log on another of this rebel domicile. You're not one whit too young to hang, boy. This is not the end of the battle. We only say good-night."

Then it was that one man led away another, who tottered as he walked, and who groaned at every step.

Gottlieb's bullet had inflicted a wound in the tory's shoulder, and blood had been shed in defense of the Yankee powder.

Long before daylight half a dozen neighbors whom the boy could trust were concealed in the house; but the enemy did not come back.

When morning came more patriots gathered to the rescue, and before long Jonas Whitton's house had the appearance of a little fort.

Later in the day a party of tories made their appearance, but the fearless men who met and defied them caused them to beat a hasty and inglorious retreat.

Gottlieb saved the patriot powder by his heroism, and when it entered Fort Stanwix under guard the brave little garrison threw their hats in the air and gave three hearty cheers for the boy hero of the Mohawk valley.

It was by acts like these, many of which have never been recorded, that the colonies achieved their merited independence.

Gottlieb Whitton is one of the forgotten boy-heroes of the revolution.—Golden Days.

Henry Villard and Marcus Daly, the two multi-millionaires who died in New York recently, were remarkable men. Villard began life as a newspaper reporter, became a railroad president and Napoleon of finance, lost two enormous fortunes and then died a millionaire. Daly began life digging potatoes, became a miner and made $50,000,000 out of copper.

It comes as a sort of shock that the authorities in Australia are discussing the proposition to attach smoking-rooms to the schools of the new commonwealth. In this part of the world the general idea is that spanking-rooms for pupils who persist in the tobacco habit is of greater importance, but the Australians evidently look at the matter in a different light.

The English law of libel makes profanity a money-saving vice. If you call a man a thief, and cannot prove your assertion, you commit libel. If, however, you garnish your description by any of the adjectives usually deemed unfit for publication, any libel action brought against you will fall through, for the law says your profanity proves that you have lost your temper, and therefore you are not actionable for your words.

She is one of the nine children of the late Duke Charles of Tuscany and if her brothers and sisters are as rich in nomenclature as she is her parents must have exhausted the list. The lady's full title is as follows: Archduchess Maria Immaculata Rainera Josephine Ferdinanda Theresa Leopoldina Antoinetta Henrietta Frances Caroline Aloise Januaria Christina Philomena Rosalie.

The census bureau has announced that the center of population of the United States is Columbus, Ind. Ten years ago it was located at Westport, 18 miles east of there. Columbus, the county seat of Bartholomew county, is located on Driftwood river, 40 miles below Indianapolis and 70 miles from Louisville, on the lines of the Pennsylvania and Big Four roads. The county was organized January 9, 1821. Columbus was then Tiptonia, a prosperous hamlet. In 1890 the population was 6,751; now it is 8,130. The present county population is 24,594.

It is significant, also, that this flourishing firm is engaged rather in supplying the implements of war than those of peace. Wars have always been more or less popular, and, notwithstanding our progress in civilization, there is no indication of any waning of this popularity.

Our soldier boys in the Philippines are not going to be neglected at holiday time. Laden with more than 3,000 Christmas boxes and carrying 900 recruits, the United States transport Kilpatrick, which was formerly the steamer Michigan, began a two months' trip to Manila from New York the other day. As the Kilpatrick was the last ship of the fleet likely to get to Manila anywhere around Christmas, the rush to send presents was enormous. WELCOMED TO PARIS.

Paul Kruger the Object of Many Attentions.

Great Demonstration on His Arrival in the French Capital—He Exchanges Calls with President Loubet.

Paris, Nov. 26.—Mr. Kruger arrived in Paris at 10:40 Saturday morning and was given a magnificent reception. The boulevards were crammed with vast crowds.

Mr. Kruger and party entered the train at Dijon at 6:50 a. m. His saloon cars were attached to the train de Luxe from the Riviera to Paris.

Cheered Along the Route.

In spite of the early hour a fair number of inhabitants assembled on the platform to cheer the departing statesman. Mr. Kruger uttered a few words of thanks to the city for its splendid welcome.

Elsewhere along the route there were the same scenes as Friday. People were waiting on the sides of the track and on bridges and other points of vantage. They waved their hats and cheered as the train rushed past at the highest speed.

Welcomed by the Mayor.

Mr. Kruger was to have passed through the station-hall, which had been specially arranged as a salon of honor, being profusely decorated with flowers, and where he was to be formally received by the mayor and municipal councillors, but, for some reason, the mayor welcomed him on the platform instead, and Mr. Kruger, to the great disappointment of those waiting in the salon of honor, passed out through another door to the front of the station, where a pair-horse landau was drawn up.

A large escort of mounted municipal guards rode around Mr. Kruger's carriage. Over the entire route from the station to the hotel enthusiastic cries greeted Mr. Kruger.

Flowers Thrown at Kruger.

Along the route flowers were thrown into Mr. Kruger's landau and women tossed their handkerchiefs in his direction. Mr. Kruger smiled and regarded with curiosity the balconies and roofs, which were alive with people.

On his arrival at the Hotel Scribe Mr. Kruger was greeted on the threshold with the Boer hymn, sung by the children of the Transvaal consul, to which Mr. Kruger listened with tears in his eyes.

Reception at the Elysee.

Just before four o'clock a gala landau from the Elysee palace was driven to the Hotel Scribe, and Mr. Kruger, his interpreter and M. Crozier proceeded to the Elysee, escorted by a strong detachment of cuirassiers. The scenes of enthusiasm of the morning were repeated. Mr. Kruger was received at the Elysee with semi-official ceremonies, such as were accorded to the sovereigns who visited the exposition. A detachment of infantry, with its standard and band, drawn up in the courtyard, rendered the honors. Both Mr. Kruger and President Loubet took a somewhat roundabout route from the hotel to the Elysee in order to avoid passing the British embassy, which is situated upon the direct road. Special precautions had been taken to protect the building, the gates of which were closed, and police and mounted guards formed a cordon extending some distance on either side of the embassy to provide against any hostile demonstration being made. President Loubet received Mr. Kruger in the hall of the ambassadors, where M. Delcasse, the minister of foreign affairs, was also awaiting him. The interview lasted five minutes, and had no political tinge. Mr. Kruger then returned to his hotel, with the same ceremonial.

Loubet at the Hotel.

M. Loubet returned Mr. Kruger's visit at 4:30 p. m. The French president was warmly acclaimed during his drive to the Hotel Scribe, and during his stay at the hotel the crowds raised alternate shouts of "Vive Kruger!" and "Vive Loubet!" After President Loubet's departure Mr. Kruger withdrew to his own room and declined to see further visitors, even the officials of the municipal council, who were desirous of ascertaining the day on which he would accept a reception at the Hotel de Ville. Mr. Kruger dined with the members of his family at 6:30. He was very much fatigued and retired early.

Spends a Quiet Sunday.

Paris, Nov. 26.—Mr. Kruger passed Sunday with his family at the Hotel Scribe, observing the Sabbath in accordance with the customs of his fatherland. His apartments were closed to visitors, and he remained with them, indulging in perfect rest. Although the boulevards were alive to a late hour Saturday night with merrymakers and singing songs, the Hotel Scribe was cordoned, and the revellers did not disturb his rest. The morning found him quite recovered from the fatigue. After an early breakfast he conferred with Dr. Leyds. There being no church of his own denomination in Paris, he held a private service in his apartments, surrounded by his entourage.

Census Returns.

Washington, Nov. 26.—The population of the state of Kansas, as officially announced Saturday, is 1,470,495, as against 1,427,096 in 1890; an increase of 43,399, or 3 per cent. Nevada, 42,335, against 45,761 in 1890; a decrease of 3,426, or 7.4 per cent.

Beloit Store Robbed.

Beloit, Wis., Nov. 26.—Bort, Bailey & Co.'s dry goods store was robbed Saturday night of silks and gloves to the value of $1,500. This is the second robbery of the same kind and same manner the firm has suffered in the last six months.

A Negress Killed.

Baldwin, L. I., Nov. 26.—Augusta Boyd, a colored woman, was hurled as if from a canon by the Patchogue express and struck the depot, over 50 feet east of the Grand avenue crossing, so hard that the building will have to be fixed. She was instantly killed. The train was traveling nearly 60 miles an hour.

German Budget Shows Big Increase.

Berlin, Nov. 22.—A bill submitted to the reichstag shows that the imperial budget for 1901 belances at 2,240,947,301 marks, an increase of 174,303,289 marks over 1900.

TALKS AT A BANQUET.

President McKinley Declares in Philadelphia That There Is No Danger of Empire.

Philadelphia, Nov. 26. — President McKinley, in a speech before the Union League club of this city Saturday evening, paid a glowing tribute to the silent forces that brought about a republican victory in the recent election. During his speech, which was brief, he also announced the principles for which a great majority of the voters had declared themselves, and expressed the hope that the administration might meet the expectations of the people, who had honored it with a return to power.

The occasion was "founders' day" at the Union League club, and the gathering included many notable men from New York, Washington and leading cities in Pennsylvania. Numerous speeches were made during the evening, and those second in importance to that of the president were by Gov. Roosevelt and Senators Lodge and Wolcott.

When the president arose to speak he was greeted with long-continued applause. When quiet had been restored he spoke in part as follows:

"We are always in danger of exaggeration on an occasion of exultation over a political victory, and while the result is mainly due to the efforts of our splendid party, there is sometimes a tendency to give too little credit to other forces, which, silent though they may have been, were none the less potential.

"We must not withhold generous acknowledgment from that great body of our citizens, who, belonging to another party, powerfully assisted in the achievement of the result which you celebrate to-night; nor from that other large body, former members of our own party, who, with honesty of purpose, separated from us a few years ago on financial issues, have now returned and are home again to stay.

"Nor is any accounting for the victory either just or accurate which leaves out of the calculation the almost unbroken column of labor engaged in mechanics and agriculture, which rejected the false doctrine of class distinction as having no place in this republic, and which rebuked those teachings which would destroy the faith of American manhood in American character and American institutions. The business men in every part of the country, typified by this great organization, were a mighty factor in the recent contest. And may we not also ascribe much to the influence of the home, with its affiliations? In any previous election, was it greater, or in any did the counsels of the fireside determine more largely the vote of the electors?

"Nothing in government can be more impressive than a national election, where the people delegate their power and invest their constitutional agents with authority to execute their behests. The very character of the transaction clothes it with solemnity.

"We cannot overestimate the great importance and the far-reaching consequences of the electoral contest which ended on the 6th of November. It has to me no personal phase. It is not the triumph of an individual, nor altogether of a party, but an emphatic declaration by the people of what they believe and would have maintained in government. A great variety of subjects was presented and discussed in the progress of the campaign. We may differ as to the extent of the influence of the several issues involved, but we are all agreed as to certain things which it settled.

"It records the unquestioned indorsement of the gold standard, industrial independence, broader markets, commercial expansion, reciprocal trade, the open door in China, the inviolability of public faith, the independence and authority of the judiciary, and peace and beneficent government under American sovereignty in the Philippines. American credit remains unimpaired, the American name unimpeached, the honor of American arms unsullied and the obligations of a righteous war and treaty of peace unrepudiated.

"The republican party has placed upon it tremendous responsibilities. No party could ask for a higher expression of confidence. It is a great thing to have this confidence; it will be a greater thing to deserve and hold it. To this party are committed new and grave problems. They are too exalted for partisanship. The task of settlement is for the whole American people. Who will say they are unequal to it?

"Liberty has not lost, but gained in strength. The structure of the fathers stands secure upon the foundations on which they raised it, and is to-day, as it has been in the years past, and as it will be in the years to come, the 'government of the people, by the people and for the people.'

"Be not disturbed; there is no danger from empire; there is no fear for the republic."

MURDER IS CHARGED.

Minneapolis Newspaper Man Arrested for Stabbing to Death a Young Millionaire.

Minneapolis, Minn., Nov. 26.—Frank H. Hamilton, a Minneapolis newspaper man, is a prisoner at the Central police station with the charge of murder against him as the result of the stabbing to death of Leonard Day, a young millionaire society man of the city, at the West hotel, early Sunday morning. Hamilton, who has been in the custody of the detectives since the tragedy, was not formally placed under arrest until late Sunday afternoon, when the coroner's jury returned a verdict holding him responsible for the death of young Day. The tragedy took place in the billiard room of the West hotel at two o'clock in the morning, after a quarrel over a woman, participated in by Hamilton, Day and a number of other prominent men. All had been drinking to a considerable extent.

More Troops Refused.

London, Nov. 26.—"We understand," says the Daily Express, "that Lord Roberts recently requested the government to send 20,000 regulars to South Africa to relieve the same number still in the field, but that his request was declined on the score of expense."

Passed Away.

Milwaukee, Nov. 26.—Dr. W. H. C Abell, who was assistant engineer in constructing the Erie canal in New York state, died Sunday at Portage, Wis. He was 73 years of age, and one of the most prominent masons in Wisconsin.

Attacked by Germans.

Berlin, Nov. 26.—The Lokal Anzeiger publishes a dispatch from Peking saying that a force of German cavalry attacked a detachment of the Chinese imperial troops under Gen. Ma and Admiral Ho between Sun Hu and Huni Nan, killing 30 Chinese and capturing six ammunition wagons.

Rehearing Refused.

Indianapolis, Ind., Nov. 26.—The supreme court has refused to grant a rehearing in the case in which it was held that the owner of a natural gas well can enjoin the owner of another from pumping gas out of the well.

DRESSED BIRDS ARE DEAD.

The Needed Lesson That Was Given a Fault Finding Poultry Dealer.

During last Thanksgiving week a poultryman of the northwest sent several barrelfuls of fat, dressed turkeys to a certain commission merchant, who is an extremely "close buyer" and never fails when he receives a consignment to claim an allowance for something alleged to have spoiled on the way. Heretofore, says the San Francisco Argonaut, he had dealt exclusively in live fowls, and probably the correspondence clerk got things mixed. At any rate the shipper was astonished to receive a letter by return mail about as follows:

"Dear Sir: We regret to advise you that four of the turkeys in your consignment of November reached here dead. Please make deduction for same and return correct amount. Yours truly."

The poultryman communed with himself and replied thus:

"Dear Sir: I am sorry to say I find it impossible to make the concession requested. I have established a rule requiring all customers who desire live dressed turkeys to notify us in advance, so we can send them in heated cars. Turkeys without feathers and insides are liable to catch cold if shipped in the ordinary manner. The mortality among dressed turkeys was very large this year. Yours mournfully."

EARNED HIS SALARY.

With a Few Notes from His Chest He Illustrated the Value of His Singing.

A favorite story of the late Sims Reeves tells how, once upon a time, the famous tenor was stranded at a country junction, waiting for a train. It was cold and miserable and the singer was naturally not in the best of temper. While chewing the cud of disappointment an old railway porter, who recognized him from the published portraits, entered the waiting-room.

"Good evening, Mr. Reeves," he said.

"Good evening, my man," replied the vocalist, getting ready the necessary tip. But the man sought for information rather than tips.

"They tell me you earn a heap of money," he remarked.

"Oh!" murmured Mr. Reeves.

"And yet," pursued the porter, "you don't work hard. Not so hard as I do, for instance. But I dessay you earn—p'raps ten times what I do—eh?"

"What do you earn?" asked the singer.

"Eighteen shillings a week all the year round," said the porter.

Sims Reeves opened his chest: "Do re, mi do!" he sang, the last note being a ringing top one. "There, my man; there's your year's salary gone!"

HELPED THE CHIEF.

How a Loyal Engineer Did His Brother Great Service.

Meadville, Pa., Nov. 26, 1900.—(Special)—The Loyalty of the Members of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers is proverbial. A circumstance occurred in this city some days ago, which emphasizes this feeling.

Frank J. Zeller is Chief of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers No 143. He is extremely popular among his fellow railway men, and one of the best known Engineers running out of Meadville. When the announcement was made a short time ago that Frank was pretty sick, it caused a great deal of regret among the boys. Soon he was missed from his engine, having had to "lay off" on account of his back. A brother of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, who had been ill with similar symptoms, some time before, and who had been pulled through, called to see Mr. Zeller, and in a brotherly way, took with him a box of Dodd's Kidney Pills, the Remedy which had cured him. He advised Mr. Zeller to try them, with the result that after seven boxes had been used, he was entirely well, and able to work.

In an interview Mr. Zeller states:

"I had suffered for four years with this affliction, being often kept awake at night with pains, and at times unable to work. I tried several of the advertised remedies, and found that they did me no earthly good. Finally, a member of our Order, who had been cured of Kidney Disease by Dodd's Kidney Pills brought me a box, and asked me to try them. I had little faith in them, but as a drowning man grasps at a straw to help him, so I took the Pills. I used seven boxes, and am to-day as well and strong a man as there is in Pennsylvania."

Naturally, Mr. Zeller feels very grateful, and his complete recovery has delighted his many friends, and none more than the good Brother, who feels that he was instrumental in saving the life of the Chief.

Dodd's Kidney Pills never fail to cure Kidney Trouble.

DO YOU FEEL LIKE THIS?

Pen Picture for Women.

"I am so nervous, there is not a well inch in my whole body. I am so weak at my stomach and have indigestion horribly, and palpitation of the heart, and I am losing flesh. This headache and backache nearly kills me, and yesterday I nearly had hysterics; there is a weight in the lower part of my bowels bearing down all the time, and pains in my groins and thighs; I cannot sleep, walk, or sit, and I believe I am diseased all over; no one ever suffered as I do."

This is a description of thousands of cases which come to Mrs. Pinkham's attention daily. An inflamed and ulcerated condition of the neck of the womb can produce all of these symptoms, and no woman should allow herself to reach such a perfection of misery when there is absolutely no need of it. The subject of our portrait in this sketch, Mrs. Williams of Englishtown, N.J., has been entirely cured of such illness and misery by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and the guiding advice of Mrs. Pinkham of Lynn, Mass.

The Garment of Iron

By Gwendolen Overton.

THERE was no skeleton in the armor when Hartpole found it; only some sand and a bunch of tumble weed, a rattlesnake and a tarantula. The tarantula scuttled off, he killed the rattlesnake, and the tumble weed and sand he emptied out. Then he had the armor done up in a shelter tent and put upon a pack mule. After which, the column moved on. It should not have halted at all, for it was in pursuit of a band of Indians. But there were bands of Indians every day, and the finding of a full suit of armor lying under a mesquite bush beside their trail was rare.

Certainly Hartpole had never heard of such a thing. And, so far as he knew, it was the only suit of armor ever discovered on the New Mexico plains, but his lore on the subject was not profound.

When he got back to his two-company post on the banks of the Gila, he found the interest in life, which had been lacking for him up to then, in enlarging that knowledge. He sent east for books and histories and treatises concerning coats of mail and the men who have worn them, and he even went so far as to write to the Smithsonian institution, at the risk of having a government commission sent out at once to seize his treasure. And in the interval of two months which elapsed before he received a reply—for the railroad was only to Kansas in those days—he set about cleaning the armor himself, and with his own hands joining it together.

He was so occupied, what with that and the histories and the other books, that he forgot to have Gila bottom malaria and had no time to worry about the flies. Then, when the steel was once more bright as the azure shield of Achilles, and he had proved to his own and to everyone's satisfaction that it must have once protected the body of one of Coronado's men, and must date from the middle of the sixteenth century, or thereabout, he hung it up in his one-room adobe quarters, along with the Indian trophies that were as nothing now and the bottled reptiles of many sorts; and the fame of it spread through the land. An English lord, in a pith helmet and gray linen, who was going about the country, traveled miles out of his way to look upon it; and a scientific party from Boston did the same. Hartpole was beginning to be very proud, when, one day, he had a visitor of another kind.

It was a man he had seen sometimes hanging around the agency and the post—a small, lithe fellow, part Coyotero Apache, part Mexican, possibly a very small part white, who had some reputation as a medicine man with the tribes, but not much as anything else.

Hartpole was sitting under his ramada on a late summer afternoon, reading a book whose covers curled up with the heat, when something came between him and his light, and, looking up, he saw the medicine man peering in the opening. He said: "Hullo, Ciego," and added: "What do you want, eh?"

Ciego was so called because he was blind in one eye. He came in under the ramada and stood so close to him that Hartpole moved a little. The Coyotero's cast-off uniform and red head band were not clean.

Ciego spoke excellent Spanish, and, as Hartpole did, too, he had no trouble about making himself understood. He explained that he would like to see the suit of iron clothes which he had been told that the lieutenant possessed. The lieutenant was so pleased to think that it had been spoken of even in the fastnesses of the Sierra Blanca and of the Tonto Basin that he forgot how dirty Ciego was, and straightway rose and invited him into the one room.

The medicine-man stood looking at the armor with an interest and evident appreciation that touched Hartpole very much. After the manner of his kind, he said no word, but presently he went nearer and felt of the plates and chains with his finger-tips, and put his good eye close and looked inside. Then he turned to Hartpole. "Where did you find it?" he asked.

The lieutenant explained at some length.

"Is it very old?"

Hartpole said it was at least three hundred and thirty odd years old, and went into a little history.

Ciego nodded his head. "I know," he said. But that was so manifestly absurd that Hartpole did not pay any attention to it. "It is very fine," said Ciego. "For how much will you sell it to me?" Naturally, Hartpole only laughed, but the Apache was in earnest, nevertheless. "No," he insisted, looking him sharply in the face. "No, de veras, I wish to buy it from you."

"Well, I don't wish to sell," answered the lieutenant, rather vexed at the mere idea.

"I have $500," said the Indian.

"If you had a thousand you could not have it."

"I have a thousand."

Hartpole laughed again, a little impatiently.

"You do not believe me—look here." Ciego drew a buckskin bag from the folds of his sash. "There are $500 here. In three days I can bring you $500 more."

Hartpole guessed how he come by it, and his temper rose. "That is stolen money," he said, angrily; "put it up. You can't have the armor. Ukashee."

"You let me have it," begged Ciego; "I wish it very much. I will do many things for you."

Hartpole swore this time—mean, Spanish oaths. "No," he said, "you can't have it. Go to the devil—get out."

Even though Ciego was only a dirty Indian, the White-Eye should have remembered that he probably had feelings which could be hurt. It is well, however, for those who have the direction of children and savages in their hands to remember that those simple folk have sometimes reasons for the things they do and say, good and sufficient unto themselves. But it never occurred to Hartpole what this half-blind Indian's reasons might be. They did not transpire until some weeks later.

Yet in Ciego's tribe there was a legend of a great white chief who had once married one of their women, and had ruled over them, and who had worn a suit of shining iron. And their tradition ran that whosoever should find and wear that garment again would be impervious to the bullets of the White-Eye, would become the greatest of medicine-men, and rule not only over his own people but over all the Apache tribes and those of the plains of the north. And the very founder of that family to which Ciego belonged was reputed to have been the white chief in the coat of iron.

The Coyoteros believed these things and so did the medicine-man. So when the news of the armor suit had reached him he had levied heavy fees for his incantations for some months, and, adding these to the gold he had exchanged for Mexican dollars, collected from many raids, he took himself down to the camp of the soldiers to obtain fairly and by purchase that which was his very own. But fairness and the offers of purchase had failed.

Ciego looked the White-Eye officer over from his scalp to his toes, and up again, and then with no sound, save just one grunt, went out from the quarters and from the post.

Hartpole told of it at the mess that night, and forgot all about it after that. But Ciego did not—as Hartpole ought to have foreseen.

One night an Indian, his body naked as it was born, a poisoned knife in his hand, stole across the sandy parade ground when the moon was under the clouds of a coming storm, and slipped, as silently as none but a savage can, under the ramada of Hartpole's quarters, and thence through the open door. The Indian had missed nothing when he had been in that one small room a month before. He knew where everything in it was, from the chromo in a blue frame on the wall to the cot in the corner, across from the fireplace. He hid himself behind the piece of calico that curtained off the nook where Hartpole's clothing hung, and waited until the moon showed for a moment through a break in the clouds and he could see the figure on the cot beneath the mosquito net. When the room was dark again he slid out; and the blade of the knife in his hand went straight through the heart of the man asleep. Then he took the rattling armor from its nails and wrapped it in the calico curtain and fled through the night, as silently and swiftly as only an Apache can.

Now it happened that Hartpole had gone to another post a good many miles to the east that very day, and he had left his striker to sleep in his quarters and keep guard over his things. So it was into the luckless soldier's heart that the knife was driven, and the next day a telegram apprised Hartpole that his striker was murdered and his suit of mail was gone.

The day after that all the department knew that the Coyoteros were on the warpath, and, having cut the reservation, were killing right and left. They were led by a medicine man called Ciego, and the scouts reported that he was dressed in a garment of white iron which no White-Eye's bullet could pierce. They also reported that the Chiricahuas and the Pah-Utes and the Sierra Blancas were joining him. It promised to be an interesting time for the territories.

Hartpole began to have a dim idea of why the medicine man had wanted his Spanish mail, now. He was ordered out, of course. Most of the department was. Trouble of the sort that this promised to be had to be checked at once, if at all. It was serious already; but there was one thing in favor of the troops, which was that the hostiles showed no desire to get away. Their fanatical faith in their medicine man led them to seek battle rather than to shun it. And twice, having done so, they beat off the troops, because there were, as usual, too few. But the third time they were caught in a pocket of the Mogallons, and there were no less than six troops against them. Hartpole's was of the number.

The Indians fought from dawn of the first day until twilight of the second, in the open at first, then from behind shelter, then at last they retreated to a shallow cave high up on a hillside, and there was no getting them out. A mountain howitzer might have done it, but there was none with the command. All day the troops fired volleys into so much of the mouth of the cave as showed between the pine trunks and the walls of rock. They knew that the slaughter within must have been pretty severe, but there were no signs of surrender, nevertheless. The hostiles might hold out until the last one was dead; they certainly would until their medicine man should fall. The medicine man could be seen from time to time, a gleaming figure, moving clumsily among the trees and underbrush. And for all that it went so slowly and was so bright, no bullet seemed ever to hit it. Even the white men began to consider it with awe.

At sunset of the second day, when the sounds from the cave had all but ceased and the Indians within it were without ammunition and at bay, the glistening form came clambering deliberately to the top of a high rock whooping and yelling, calling the remnant of its followers on. It stood so for a moment, the red sun rays striking through the pine branches on the dented steel, a weird sight in the depths of the mountain fastnesses of the New World; so odd and strange that the soldiers hesitated with their fingers on the triggers of their carbines.

But Hartpole, kneeling alone behind a bowlder, remembered only that that glowing armor was his, and that he wanted it. The visor was up and he could see the glitter of the one good eye. He had won a sharpshooter's medal in his time, and he put his skill to use now. There was a puff of smoke from above his bowlder, and the shining figure threw up its arms and staggered. Then it fell forward, down from the pinnacle of rock, clattering and crashing among the logs and stones.

They found, when they dragged him out, that Hartpole's bullet had gone straight through the good eye, and that Ciego was ciego in very truth now—and quite dead.—San Francisco Argonaut.

Still a Secret.

"Yes," announced the wild-eyed man. "I have invented a perpetual-motion machine, which is running constantly."

"What makes it run?" inquired the capitalist.

"There's the trouble. I can't stop the fool thing so as to find out."—Baltimore American.

MINNESOTA NEWS.

State Census.

The population of Minnesota is 1,751,394, an increase since 1890 of 449,568, or 35.5 per cent. The population in 1880 was 780,973, an increase of 521,053, or 66.7 per cent, from 1880 to 1890. The population by counties is as follows:

Sold Much Land.

Over $400,000 was realized by State Auditor R. C. Dunn from his auction sale of timber lands. As the law provides that 25 per cent of the purchase price must be paid in cash, the treasury was enriched by $100,000. The bidding was very lively and the prices realized made the old timers open their eyes in astonishment. The average paid for stumpage was $5.25, or over twice the average secured at the last sale and choice sections went as high as $9 per thousand. C. A. Smith of Minneapolis paid this for section 16, township 145, range 33, containing 5,500,000 feet. The mills at Akely, Minn., bought several tracts aggregating over $80,000.

Sunday Workers.

According to the report of the state labor commissioner, out of a total of 37,711 working men in Minnesota, at least 12,000 are obliged to work on Sunday. Contrary to the general theory these are not confined to employment on railroads and other industries of a semi-public character, but are found in eleven of the thirty industries investigated by the commissioner. This investigation was ordered by the last legislature, for the purpose of getting statistics on which to base legislation regulating Sunday work.

News in Brief.

Chas. Parker killed a monster moose near Blackduck. The animal was ugly, and charged on Mr. Parker, who had to put thirteen bullets into him before he fell. The head weighed 6 pounds. One of the horns contained eleven, and the other ten prongs.

An explosion of gas in the basement of the millinery establishment of E. L. Schultz, in St. Paul, caused a loss of about $20,000 to the building and its contents.

Moorhead is preparing for its annual city election.

Over near Langor, Elijah Goff killed a buck weighing 220 pounds.

Bennie Amundson, the 16-year-old son of Mrs. George Amundson, who while hunting near Mora, accidently discharged his rifle through the palm of his hand. The hand may have to be amputated.

The Central Minnesota Land company, with F. M. Cuiner, president, George M. Palmer, treasurer, and S. D. Works, secretary and manager, has been organized in Mankato. The company has secured control of 36,000 acres in Cass county, 10,000 of which have been paid for, and the balance is held on an option.

Burglars broke into the California Wine house in Faribault and supplied themselves with a quantity of liquor and cigars, rifled the till of its contents and made good their escape.

After brooding over family troubles and financial difficulties for a long time, Mrs. Lizzie Sommers, wife of Perry Sommers, an actor, tried to commit suicide at Duluth.

A practical joke was played at the Winona high school by the removal of the banner won for punctuality and attendance. The banner was inscribed, "Excelsior." In its place was substituted a bunch of excelsior.

The tragedy at Reno, a station about 60 miles from Duluth on the Iron Range railroad, where J. W. Quigley, a telegraph operator, was burned to death in the station house, was not a murder as first reported, but an accident.

The first fire in Blackduck was in a saloon.

Christian F. Warne, indicted on a charge of practicing medicine without a license, was found not guilty before a jury before Judge Simpson in Minneapolis. Warne is a massage artist, who has been giving medicines to some of his customers.

COMPTROLLER REPORTS.

Laws Regulating Loaning of Funds by Banks to Officers and Directors Should Be More Stringent.

Washington, Nov. 26.—The annual report of Charles G. Dawes, comptroller of the currency, for the year ended October 31, 1900, has been prepared for transmission to congress. The report starts with a summary of the reports made during the year by the national banks in response to the call of the comptroller, which shows the aggregate resources of the 3,871 national banks reporting on September 5, 1900, to be $5,048,138,499.29. Between the September call of 1899 and 1900 loans and discounts increased $170,008,391.46. The loans and discounts on September 5, 1900, were $2,686,759,642.57, and individual deposits were $2,508,248,557.53. The capital stock of national banks reporting on September 5 was $630,299,030. Between March 14 and October 31, 1900, 348 banks were organized, 249 being of less than $50,000 capital. The report says:

"The total increase in the circulation secured by government bonds of all national banks in the system since March 14, 1900, has been $32,454,270. The total outstanding circulation on October 31, 1900, was $331,613,268, of which $32,784,204 is secured by lawful money and is in process of retirement. The total bond-secured circulation on October 31, 1900, was $298,829,064. On October 31, 1900, there were 3,935 national banks in operation, with a combined capital of $632,502,395. The combined resources of the national banks, being over $5,000,000,000, is greater than at any time heretofore."

The most important recommendation made by the comptroller, and that which is the chief feature of the report, is one for additional restrictions upon loans to directors and executive officers of banks. The comptroller states that the large percentage of bank failures attributable to excessive loans to directors and officers, which amounted to 62 failures, or 17 per cent. of the total failures of national banks, led him to a careful investigation as to all directors' loans now outstanding in the national banks of the country.

This investigation showed that on June 29, 1900, the date of the comptroller's call for a statement of condition from the national banks, that of 28,709 directors of national banks in the country 18,534 were directly or indirectly indebted to national banks under their management, the aggregate of these sums being $202,287,441.

The comptroller urges the passage of the Brosius law to regulate these conditions. This bill provides that no national bank shall loan to its officers or employes until the proposition shall have been submitted in writing to the directors or executive committee and approved by a majority of the members.

In dealing with the subject of loans the comptroller says the present need is a provision which will enable large banks to loan more nearly the same per cent. of their total assets which the present provision allows to smaller banks.

AN AMERICAN VICTORY.

Fortress of Geronimo, the Strongest Position in Island of Luzon, Captured.

Manila, Nov. 26.—The fortress of the insurgent chief Geronimo, at Pinauran, which the insurgents boasted was impregnable, was taken and destroyed Thursday afternoon by a picked force of the Forty-second and Twenty-seventh infantry and troop G of the Fourth cavalry, under Col. Thompson. Geronimo and most of the rebels escaped. The leader has long harassed the Twenty-seventn infantry, operating in the vicinity of San Mateo, Montalban and Novaliches. He was finally located at Pinauran, 35 miles north of Manila. His position was considered the strongest in Luzon. It was a stone fortress surmounting a steep hill surrounded by canyons. The Spanish forces lost heavily in attempting to take it.

Col. Thompson mobilized 1,000 men at Montalban. The attack was made upon four sides, the main body under Maj. Carey, of the Forty-second, advancing from the south; Capt. Atkinson, of the Twenty-seventh, from the east; Capt. Casteel, of the Twenty-seventh, from the west, and Capt. Sloan, of the Twenty-seventh, from the north. The ascents were steep and the men climbed them by grasping the shrubbery. It was impossible for the eastern column to reach the summit, but the others arrived after three or four hours' climbing, under fire from the fortress and the hillside intrenchments. The enemy's force, numbering several hundred, fled before the attackers reached the top. The Americans destroyed 1,000 insurgent uniforms, scores of buildings and large quantities of supplies, and seized a barrel full of documents.

CAUGHT IN A GALE.

Coasting Steamer Founders Off Labrador—All on Board, Twenty-Five in Number, Perish.

Quebec, Can., Nov. 26.—Seven passengers and the crew of 19 on the iron coasting steamer St. Olef were drowned Wednesday night in a wreck off the coast of Labrador in Seven Islands bay. Not a soul aboard was saved. The St. Olef traded between here and Eskimo points on the Labrador coast, and carried government mails to the various points of that inhospitable territory. She was on her return from Eskimo points when wrecked. She passed Sheldrake Wednesday afternoon. That afternoon there was a gale of east wind, with snow, in the gulf, and evidently it was in attempting to make the harbor of Seven Islands that she struck Boule island at the entrance of the bay. Saturday a number of bodies as well as a mail bag washed ashore there, and further investigation revealed on the rocks the boiler and part of the bow of the wrecked vessel. One of the bodies recovered is that of Miss Marie Page.

A Cement Combine.

Louisville, Ky., Nov. 26.—The Courier-Journal says that the 14 cement mills located in the vicinity of this city and Jeffersonville, Ind., which supply the greater part of the United States, have in contemplation the formation of a combine.

Fatal Explosion.

Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., Nov. 26.—While lightering ore from steamer Ellwood, in Mud lake early Sunday morning, the forward boiler on the lighter Stewart exploded, killing three men and severely injuring seven others.

Woolen Mills Burned.

Tiffin, O., Nov. 26.—During a heavy gale of wind Sunday night fire destroyed the Tiffin woolen mills. For a time the entire central portion of the city was threatened. The loss will exceed $100,000, partially insured. One hundred and twenty-five hands are thrown out of employment. The plant was three months behind in orders.

Found in a Well.

Pana, Ill., Nov. 26.—A skeleton has been found in a well on the Drunot farm. The well is the same one in which Jane Drunot's body was found last April.

Siberian Prisons Abolished.

Siberia is no longer to be a penal colony. The imperial decree abolishing the former status is the result of the building of the Trans-Siberian railroad. Nothing can compare to the rapid settlement of the vast Siberian plains by the inrushing farmers, unless it be the rapid growth achieved by that famous dyspepsia cure, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. Try it for constipation, indigestion, dyspepsia, biliousness or flatulency, if you would be well.

Sandy as an Art Critic.

One day, while Millais was painting his famous picture, "Chill October," among the reeds and rushes on the banks of the Tay, a man came up behind him and stood looking at the picture, then at the surrounding landscape. Finally he asked in a broad Scotch dialect: "Man, did ye never try photography?" "No, never," replied Millais, painting slowly. A pause. "It's a hantle (great deal) quicker," said the man. "Yes, I suppose so." Another pause; then the Scotchman added, thoughtfully: "An' it's mair like the place!"—San Francisco Argonaut.

A NARROW ESCAPE.
A GRATEFUL WOMAN.

MRS. F. J. LYNCH, GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.

Mrs. F. J. Lynch, 324 South Division street, Grand Rapids, Mich., writes: The Peruna Medicine Company, Columbus, Ohio:

Gentlemen- -"I earnestly recommend Peruna to any suffering women as it cures quickly. I had a most persistent cough which nothing seemed to cure. Two bottles of Peruna did more for me than all the doctors seemed to do. In a couple of weeks I found myself in excellent health, and have been enjoying it ever since. Hence I look on Peruna as a true friend to women."

MRS. F. J. LYNCH.

Chronic Coughs and Colds Are Catarrhal Diseases.

Catarrh is the Continual Scourge of Christendom.

Catarrh hovers ominously over every city, and nestles treacherously in every hamlet. It flies with vampire wings from country to country, and casts a black shadow of despair over all lands. Its stealthy approach and its lingering stay makes it a dread to the physician and a pest to the patient.

It changes the merry laugh of childhood to the wheezy breathing of croup, and the song of the blushing maiden to the hollow cough of consumption. In its withering grasp the rounded form of the fond wife and mother becomes gaunt and spectral, and the healthy flush of manhood turns to the sallow, haggard visage of the invalid.

Cough takes the place of conversation, speech gives way to spitting, the repulsive odors of chronic catarrh poison the kiss of the fondest lovers, and thickened membranes bedim sight, impair hearing and destroy taste.

Like the plague-stricken Egyptians a cry of distress has gone out from every household, and the mildew of woe clings to every hearthstone.

Catarrh in some form, catarrh in some stage lurks as an enemy in the slightest cough or cold and finishes its fiendish work in heart disease and consumption.

No tissue, function, or organ of the body escapes its ravages; muscles wither, nerves shatter, and secretions dry up under its blighting presence. So stubborn and difficult is this disease that to invent a remedy to cure chronic catarrh has been the ambition of the greatest minds in all ages.

Is it therefore any wonder that the vast multitude of people who have been cured of chronic catarrh by Peruna are so lavish in their praise of this remedy? That the discovery of Peruna has made the cure of catarrh a practical certainty is not only the testimony of the people, but many medical men declare it to be true.

As a drug store in this age of the world is incomplete without Peruna, it can be obtained anywhere with directions for use. A complete guide for the prevention and cure of catarrh and all diseases of winter, sent free by The Peruna Medicine Co., Columbus, Ohio.

PAIN OPENED HER SKULL

Mrs. Lasher's Remarkable Story—Dr. Greene's Nervura Cured Her.

MRS. FRED. C. LASHER, JR.

The case of Mrs. Fred. C. Lasher, Jr., a well-known woman of Westport, N. Y., is one of the most interesting on record. It is an actual fact that headaches caused her head to split.

"For thirteen years," she says, "I suffered from terrible headaches night and day, until the bones of my skull opened so that the doctor could lay his thumb right into the opening on to my brain. Two doctors attended me and claimed that I was on the verge of insanity. I was under their care for nine years, but got no relief. Then I tried Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy, and inside of a year the bones of my head had taken their natural shape again."

That Mrs. Lasher's statements are true is vouched for by reliable men of Westport, and by a Justice of the Peace there. Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy cured Mrs. Lasher when all other remedies failed, and it cures thousands of suffering women every year. If your head aches, if you cannot sleep and are weak and nervous, remember that this great curative agent, Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy, will make you well and strong.

Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy is a physician's prescription, formulated from a discovery after years of investigation and experiment. Dr. Greene, 35 West 14th St., New York City, is the discoverer. He can be consulted free personally or by letter.

BUFFALO GAZETTE

DELANO, FRIDAY, Nov. 30, 1900.

OFFICIAL PAPER OF THE VILLAGE OF DELANO.

DELANO DIARY

—Dr. Niven is coming again.

—Watch for Dr. Niven's dates in next issue.

—The Grand Steam Laundry is running every day.

—Call on the Grand Steam Laundry for first class work.

—With the excellent bottom a very few inches of snow would make first class sleighing.

—Thanksgiving day passed off pleasantly. The weather was fine and everybody enjoyed it.

—Some fine poultry found its way to market during the week. This has been a good year for fowls.

—The Delano Flouring Mills were shut down for about a week, repairing the power part of the plant.

—The entertainment at the City Hall on Saturday evening was given, and enjoyed by the audience.

—A young man had his collar wilted the other day, but took it to the Grand Steam Laundry Delano Minn. and had it starched and now is in first class shape.

—For the census of Wright county see the state census report by counties on the inside of this paper. Such tables are well worth preserving for future reference.

—According to newspaper reports, Dan Late, a member of class 1900, of Marshall High School died Nov. 18, of small-pox, the only death in that town from the late epidemic.

—Quite a lot of old settlers on farms in this vicinity are now making Delano their homes. Among those latley moving to town are John Sherry, Charles Knoll and Earl Hoisington.

—George P. Schaffer, A. W. Wittman and W. D. Albeitz are among our merchants who are displaying Christmas goods and wares in their windows. Santa Clause is coming.

—We understand that our fellow townsman Peter Klich has been appointed roadmaster of the Willmar division G. N. in place of John Mayer whose death was reported last week.

—A few of our citizens are taking the recautions to have their childern vaccinated, because of the prevalence of smallpox in many localities in the state, and the danger of their getting the desease.

—Hay don't seem to be quite so valuable as it was a few days ago, when the weather was colder. As soon as sleighing is good if the weather don't get any colder than we have had, hay and wood will be more plenty and at less prices than for a long time.

—Everybody likes to make Christmas presents, and everybody likes to have their friends hear from them occassionally: but many hate awfully to write. A good way to meet these requirement is to make your friends at a distance a Christmas present of a GAZETTE subscribtion for one year for one $1 00, and have them think of you 52 times a year when they receive the paper, and occasionally see your name in the paper.

—Many of the Delano childern are having chicken-pox. Several families were, in compliance with instructions from the State Board of Health, quarantined over Sunday, until an expert came from St. Paul to be sure of the diagnoses; as many cases have been called chickenpox and afterword proved to be smallpox. Dr. Frederick Leavitt examined them Monday morning and said their was no doubt of the cases in Delano being chickenpox. He is the same physician that was sent by the State Board to Winsted, in June, last, and pronounced the cases there, true smallpox. The State Board is using every possible means to stamp out the epidemic of smallpox from our state and deserves the hearty support of all intelligent people.

—There will be a reading in the City Hall, Dec. 10, 1900 for the benefit of the M. E. Church by Miss Elanor Miller Proffessor of Elocution in Hamline University. Miss Miller is a graduate of the Columbia School of Oratory. She is a woman of ability and of excellent Christain Character. A. E. Turner of Lincoln University says: "Miss Elenor Miller is one of the most talented readers I have ever heard."

Strength, Humor and Pathos mark her statements. She has a remarkable ability. Admission 10 and 25

As a public reader Miss Elenor Miller is a success. I have heard her many times, and always with great pleasure. Her readings are always given with characteristic charm and never fail to entertain and interest hearers.—G. A. Merill, Supt. Minn State Public School.

She is at home alike in sacred readings, pathetic numbers and in the lighter vein. Her readings are an education in themselves.—Hon. J Adam Bede, Pine City, Minn.

Miss Miller was very happy in her selections. Her ability to pass from boyish fun to tender pathos was shown in a remarkable maner in her rendition of "Patsy." The audience was large and greatly delighted.—The Minneapolis Times.

—Farmers and gardeners are each year learning more and more of the value of fertilizing their grounds; consequently the manuer piles are down to respectable proportions in onr village; this fall the alleys are cleaned out quite well.

—The Delano fire company broke their record this a. m. They made a run of a block and a half and had water ready drawn inside of two minutes, also had two ladders up, when it was discovered that there was no fire but a chimney too smutty at Stein's butcher shop.

—The entertainment by the St. Peter school childern and others last evening was a success, financially, and socially. The numbers were well rendered. Recitations by the little folks were enjoyed by all, as were the singing numbers. Rev. Says closed the exercises by "short and sweet" remarks. The Thanksgiving supper was very fine, and ample justice was done it by a very large number of awfully hungry people.

St. Peter School Notes.

Many of the scholars, who were absent last week, are at school again.

Francis Wandok, Joseph Kittok and Agnes Huncia are new scholars this week.

Yesterday, the Catholic School had an entertainment and supper.

George Ash, who had the mumps for the past week, is now well, and is coming to school again.

Thursday was a holiday, because it was Thanksgiving Day.

The school is filling with scholars every day.

County Cullings

The Waverly Tribune gives an interesting account of a terrible assault made by the Modern Woodmen camp upon the woodpile of Mrs. Charles O'Hara, last Monday. It is said the woodpile was almost reduced to kindling wood. There must be a few old timers in the Waverly camp. Anyway such meetings are good for the health of the camps; as well as pleasing to those who have the wood prepared for the stove.

Speaker Dare has appointed two members of the Legislature from each Congressional district to represent the lower house at Senator Davis' funeral George Malory. Duluth, and Frank Swanson, Cokato, represent this district. All the Senators are expected to be present.

Arsenic in Beer.

Special to the Dispatch

LONDON, Nov. 29.—The Daily Mail claims to hade cleared up the beer-poisoning mystery, which has caused wide destruction in England. It declares positively that the sickness among beer-drinkers in Manchester, Liverpool and elsewhere is due to arsenic, and traces the source of the poison to an unnamed Yorkshire firm of mannfacturing chemists. This firm it says, imported a quantity of pyrites obtained from a Spanish copper mine, and converted them into sulphuric acid, such as is employed in dyeing. This was bought by a firm of glucose manufacturers, who used it instead of pure sulphuric acid, with the result that there was a considerable residuum of arsenic in all the products made therefrom. The question of culpability, according to the Mail, lies between the chemists and the glucose manufacturers. It is not known whether the former sold ordinary sulphuric acid as pure, or the glucose manufactures used the ordinary acid, knowing that the pure was only suitable. The Mail predicts that there will be sensational developments at the impending inquest.

The Irl R. Hicks 1901 Almanac

Whatever may be said of the scientific causes upon which the Rev. Irl R. Hicks bases his yearly forecasts of strom and weather, it is a remarkable fact that specific warnings of every great storm, flood, cold wave and drouth, have been plainly printed in his famous Almanac for many years The latest startling proof of this fact was the destruction of Galveston, Texas, on the very day named by Prof. Hicks in his 1900 Almanac, as one of disaster by storm along the gulf coasts. The 1901 Almanac, by far the finest, most complete and beautiful yet published, is now ready. This remarkable book of near two hundred pages, splendidly illustrated with charts and half-tone engravings, goes as a premium to every subscriber who pays one dollar a year for Hicks' journal, WORD AND WORKS. The Almanac alone is sent prepaid for only 25c.

Literary Note.

The world has never known a more dramatic situation than presented by the foreign comunity within the walls of Peking while cut off from communication with their countrymen. During these long doubtful weeks, the most interesting figure in this international tragedy was Sir Robert Hart, who for more than 25 years has been as far, as European might, the statesman guiding the affairs of the Chinese Empire. Those familiar in any degree with Eastern conditions hoped, after the relief of Peking, that Sir Robert would break his long rule of silence and give to the world his story of the events which led to the closing of the gates of the British Legation, and his views as to the policies which should prevail in the settlement of the difficult questions which had arisen. On the 17th of October, the following cable-message from Sir Robert's London representative to the Editor of the Cosmopolitan was received: "Sir Robert Hart has sent for November number Fortnightly, London, and Cosmopolitan, New York, an important article on siege of Peking, about fifteen thousand words, which I will post you tomorrow."

The MS. arrived in time to be concluded in the December issue. It will be read with the deepest interest, both by the statesman and the general public. The Cosmopolitan has been highly honored by Sir Robert Hart in his selection of the American magazine through which this valuable contribution to the history of the world is given publicity.

A number of farmers near here report the loss of a large amount of stock during the past two weeks, apparently as a result of animals eating corn stalks. The cattle seemed to be first blinded by the attack, and die an hour or two afterwards. Messrs. Tibbetts and Bakke seem to be the heaviest losers up to this time.—Redwood Gazette.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Regular Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, D. C. Nov., 25. 1900

The project for giving the republican party a mortgage on the government by reducing the representation of the South in Congress and the electoral college is dead. It was killed by its cool reception by the public and by the knowledge that if it had been attempted the democratic Senators would have blocked all legislation at this session of Congress, Instead of angering the democrats, the republican leaders have adopted a jollying policy toward them, and indulge in lots of talk about making this a business session of Congress, free from partisan bickerings. If they really wish to do that, it can easily be done, as the democrats are disposed to meet them half-way in helping along legislation that is not tainted with partisanship. but they need not expect to pull the wool over democratic eyes by labeling notorous jobs, such as the ship subsidy bill, "commerical legislation." Democrats will see that no legislation will go through at this session under false pretenses. They will not attempt to prevent the majority carrying out its will in general legislation, but they will see that the nature of every bill proposed is fully explained to the country before it is allowed to get through. Under the House rules this cannot be done in the Senate.

Mr. McKinley's administration does not lack shrewdness in keeping up its prestige. The drift of affairs in China indicates the probability of the U. S being out of the concert of powers

Seeing this the administration proceeded to discount its possible effect by annoucing through semi-official channels that in certain contingencies this government might find it necessary to withdraw from the concert of powers in China and protect American commercial interests by dealing with China independently, although it would prefer to do so in concert with the other powers.

Even the department of Agriculture shares in the general tendency to increase the ordinary expenditures of the government — a tendency which is bound to make much trouble if not checked. The estimates for appropriations for the Department of Agriculture for the next fiscal year, now ready for submission to Congress, aggregate $5 659,050, which is an increase of 10 per cent over the appropriations for the current fiscal year.

Holders of government places who have no strong pull to fall back on, or who spoke, worked, or voted for Bryan during the campaign are being made to feel somewhat shaky by the knowledge that there is greater pressure for small appointments under the government than there was ever known before. Some time ago there was a report in Washington that republican workers in some of the doubtful states had been told to pitch in and work with all their might, and that they would be taken care of if McKinley was re-elected, regardless of the civil service law. Not much attention was paid at the time to the report, but the present activity of republican office-seekers indicates that such promises were made. Time will show whether they are to be kept.

Senator Wolcott, of Colorado, will be succeded by a democrrt when he retires next March, but from the talk in administration circles it is considered almost certain that he will be rewarded for his support of McKinleyism by a big position in the diplomatic service, probably an ambassadorship.

The democratic members of the House Ways and Means Committee, weich met this week to consider a bill for the reduction of war taxes, will not be allowed to have any say in the matter until the republican members have completed a bill, or the committee have conferred with Mr. McKinley, Secretary Gage and Commissioner Wilson of the Internal Revenue Bureau, since they came together. McKinley told them that some reduction must be made in order to make good his anti election promises to the country, and Secretary Gage told them that the reduction must not under any circumstances exceed $30,000,000. The wholesale druggists and owners of the proprietary articles have a delegation in Washington, anxious to see that they get a share of any reductions that may be made, and other intereste are represented by lobbyists. The brewers are credited with leaving their interests in the hands of the big republicans who exchanged promises for their campaign contributions It will not be surprising if a big scandal comes to the surface before this bill gets on the statute books. Democrats are not inclined to spare the republicans if evidence of crooked bargains can be secured, and there are good reasons for the belief that it exists in quantities.

If things do not change, there may be a regular cat and dog fight among the republicans in Congress over the bill for the increase of the regular army. Prominent members of the party are every day declaring opposition to as large an army as Mr. McKinley seeks to have provided by Congress, and the situation in the Philippines makes early action on some sort of an army bill a necessity.

KNOCKS A HORSE DOWN.

W. K. Vanderbilt's Auto in Collision with Fish Wagon—Promises Driver New Horse.

William K. Vanderbilt, Jr., had a narrow escape from serious injury the other afternoon in a collision with a fish wagon. He was making his way west through Fifty-first stret, bound for a spin up the road. He had just reached Fifth avenue when a strong gust of wind swept up the street, and, catching the light locomobile, almost lifted it off its wheels.

At this moment John Lullman, of 102 East Eighty-second street, drove down the avenue in a fish wagon.

Mr. Vanderbilt struggled to get his locomobile clear of the wagon, but he could not manage it, and he ran into the horse, sending the animal to the pavement.

The locomobile was instantly stopped and Mr. Vanderbilt quickly jumped out.

"I am sorry," he said, apologetically to the driver. "It was my fault. Here is my card. If you want another horse call at my house and I'll get one for you."

Lullman at first was inclined to say unpleasant things, but when he read the name on the card a look of blank astonishment spread over his countenance.

"That's all right, Mr. Vanderbilt," he stammered. "I don't think the nag's much hurt. Just a little bit scraped on the legs. But I'll tell the boss. He knows you're good for a horse, I guess."

M'KINLEY TO GET BIG TURKEY

Rhode Island Man Scouring State for Bird for President's Thanksgiving Day Dinner.

For a number of years the table of the president of the United States has been annually graced Thanksgiving day by a big Rhode Island turkey. Somewhere in the southern part of the commonwealth there is to-day a handsome specimen of this famous breed of bird strutting about the farmyard in the pride of its 35 pounds which a few days before the national holiday will be decapitated, carefully dressed, and dispatched to the white house for President McKinley's dinner.

The late Senator Anthony, of Rhode Island, sent the first Rhode Island turkey to a president, and after his death the late Senator Nathan F. Nixon continued the custom. Since Senator Dixon's death Horace Vose has annually sent to the white house at Thanksgiving the handsomest bird of the species he could find within the borders of the state. The biggest one ever presented to a president was given to President Grant. It tipped the scales at 38 pounds.

PLANS "IDEAL" NEWSPAPER.

Parkhurst Behind Movement to Establish a Paper That Can Afford to Tell the Truth.

Dr. Parkhurst declares that men of riches have under consideration the establishment in New York city of "an ideal" newspaper. He declares that an endowed theater is also a possibility for New York. "At the present time," he is quoted as saying, "there are those who are anxiously considering the matter of establishing a journal for the purpose of telling the truth and sufficiently capitalizing it so that it will have no trouble in telling the truth. In a certain respect the newspapers are like our theaters. It has come to be a fact in the city of New York—I have it from those who are constant attendants at the theaters—that a theater, as a rule, cannot be made to pay unless there is more or less of that in it which is objectionable. The only way in which a first-class theater can be maintained is by its being endowed. Now the same words apply to the average newspaper. The papers now are run on a business plan. They are not leading the public. Some papers are run for political ends, because with them politics is going to put money into the till."

WILL REVOLUTIONIZE LONDON.

Plans Network of Suburban Electric Lines with Groups of Low-Rent Houses.

Charles Yerkes' plan of a comprehensive system of underground railways in London is the first deliberate effort to grapple with the housing programme of the English metropolis, and if he can succeed in his dream he will revolutionize the life of London and earn the undying gratitude of British workmen.

His idea is to have a complete network of lines radiating north, south, east and west to considerable distances from the heart of the metropolis, and then to have workmen's cottages built in healthy districts served by railways. This is a tremendous scheme, but Mr. Yerkes is also said to be interested in a scheme for cutting a ship canal from Southampton to London, a distance of just 80 miles.

German Owners of Forest.

The royal Prussian family is the largest owner of forest tracts in Germany. Its property consists of not less than 186,200 acres. The southern branch of the Hohenzollerns owns a tract of 136,000 acres. The prince of Stolberg-Wernigerode owns forest covering 119,000 acres. The timber lands of the prince of Pless comprise 104,000 acres.

$250 for a Dog Bite.

Sioux City, Iowa, Nov. 25.—(Times Special)—The famous Orange City dog bite case has been settled, Nellie Van Bergen, the plaintiff, being awarded $250 damage against John Eulberg, whose dog bit her. The case had become famous through a ruling by Judge Wakefield, who held that a dog "has no right to brood over wrongs or to remember in malice. The defense claimed that the girl had thrown a stick and that the dog's action was in the nature of retaliation for this act on the part of the girl.

THAT EDITOR MAN.

That editor man behind the desk,
His few remaining hairs
Tell of his tribulations,
His crushing load of cares.
That editor man behind the desk,
No peace or rest hath he.
From ceaseless, racking, daily grind
And mental drudgery.

That editor man behind the desk,
No bard his praise ere sings.
But what man more deserves the harp
And sprouting angel wings?
For life to him is soaked with grief,
His days devoid of mirth,
Why send him to that warm place when
He's had so much on earth.

SONG OF MARION'S MEN.

Our band is few, but true and tried,
Our leader frank and bold;
The British soldier trembles
When Marion's name is told
Our fortress is the good green wood,
Our tent the cypress-tree;
We know the forest round us,
As seamen know the sea.
We know its walls of thorny vines,
Its glades of reedy grass,
Its safe and silent islands
Within the dark morass.

Woe to the English soldiery
That little dred us near!
On them shall light at midnight
A strange and sudden fear:
When waking to their tents on fire
They grasp their arms in vain,
And they who stand to face us
Are beat to earth again;
And they who fly in terror deem
A mighty host behind,
And hear the tramp of thousands
Upon the hollow wind.

Then sweet the hour that brings release
From danger and from toil:
We talk the battle over,
And share the battle's spoil.
The woodland rings with laugh and shout,
As if a hunt were up,
And woodland flowers are gathered
To crown the soldier's cup.
With merry songs we mock the wind
That in the pine-top grieves,
And slumber long and sweetly,
On beds of oaken leaves.

Well knows the fair and friendly moon
The band that Marion leads—
The glitter of their rifles,
The scampering of their steeds.
'Tis life our fiery barbs to guide
Across the moonlight plains;
'Tis life to feel the night-wind
That lifts their tossing manes.
A moment in the British camp—
A moment—and away
Back to the pathless forest,
Before the peep of day.

Grave men there are by broad Santee,
Grave men with hoary hairs,
Their hearts are all with Marion,
For Marion are their prayers.
And lovely ladies greet our band,
With kindliest welcoming,
With smiles like those of summer,
And tears like those of spring.
For them we wear these trusty arms,
And lay them down no more
Till we have driven the Briton,
Forever, from our shore.

It looks like a tough proposition for the Chinese to be asked to submit the difficulties caused by their desire to be let alone, to The Hague, composed of seventeen nations many of the most powerful of which are trying to establish claims to parts of China.

WHILE Uncle Sam is so busy instructing the nations of the world in civility, why is it he pays so little attention to the fact that England seized ship loads of goods belonging to American citizens because they suspected they were on the way to the Transvaal? Had Oom Paul instead of John Bull, been the aggressor would he have been let off so easy? Haven't Americans as good right to sell goods to Boers as Johnny Bulls if they see fit to do so? And isn't the government as much bound to see that its citizens are protected in their rights in one instance as in the other? Read the President's message on that subject.

PRESIDENT MCKINLEY'S message to Congress is so very long that but few people will be expected to read it through. The best way to do, is to preserve it carefully, read as much as you can without getting too tired at once; then take a rest, and try it again. Perhaps in the course of a few weeks, or months it will all be gone over. Every voter should try to understand it as far as possible. The President of the United States is supposed to administer the laws of the land. He is supposed to uphold the Constitution of the country, and defend it against all dangers. The people by their votes elect him for this purpose. In his message he is supposed to ask Congress to pass laws in accord with that document. Read it.

BY the reapportionment proposed Minnesota would gain two Congressmen, giving us nine instead of, as at present seven.

OF course Hon. Knute Nelson must feel a little shaky in his boots about his chances for re-election. He voted against stretching the constitution beyond the tearing point to levy import and export duties on Porto Rican trade, and Hon. Page Morris voted for it; and the Sixth District returned Page Morris with a bigger majority than ever.

HON. CHARLES A. TOWNE, of Duluth, has been appointed by Gov. Lind to serve as U. S. Senator, instead of the late Hon. C. K. Davis. The appointment is a good one. Mr Towne, is known to be able, fearless and honest; qualifications to be commended even in a United States Senator. He will enter at once and serve until the legislature has selected his successor.

THE famous Anderson law taxing railroad lands has been declared unconstitutional by the Supreme Court of the U. S. This will make considerable difference with the taxes in Minesota. It seems so long as the gross earnings tax stands it has to stand alone. It would then seem to be the proper thing to raise the gross earning tax; or abolish it altogether, leaving railroads to take take their own chances in taxation with other people.

GOLD BUGS and trust lovers are busy at work trying to make people believe that Bryan is politically dead; that Bryanism is covered up beyond redemption. They talked the same stuff four years ago. They have found that Bryan and Bryanism do not down so easily. The most absurd people engaged in burying the so called "corpses" are the individuals connected with trusts and other "commercial affairs" calling themselves "democrats," and who have been aiding and abetting in every possible way to defeat the democratic party for four years past, and who now are calling for a "reorganization" of the Democratic party

A few men of influence in each county in the different states are kept at work constantly laboring, not for the success of the democratic party; but for its downfall. They manipulate caucuses, and conventions. They many of them, succeed partially, enough to make the work of regular democrats ineffectual. The only way to obviate this evil is to eradicate the individuals wherever they are known. If men are not with the party on principle, find those that are. When delegates to a convention are to be chosen see to it that only such as are known to be in harmony with party principles are sent to make the platform and nominate the candidates to be voted for. So long as gold bug "democrats" are allowed to dictate men and measures the party is doomed to defeat, in county, state and nation.

BACK BONE: The whole strength of a loaf of bread is concentrated in a bottle of beer, brewed of pure barley malt and hops by the —— Brewing Company. — Advertisement.

It is a pity that this was not known to the scientist Liebig, who said: "If a man drinks daily eight of ten quarts of the best Bavarian beer, in the course of twelve months he will have taken into his system the nutritive constituents contained in a fivepound loaf."

Questions for Republicans.

If a protective tariff in the country keeps foreign goods out, and enables our home products to supply the home market, what do we wont with a dollar good in the markets of the world? Why isnt a dollar good in the home market all that is to be desired? If we must have a gold standard to conform to the standard of other countries, that our dollar may be good any where, it will buy goods or do business in any country, why should we have a protective tariff that people can't bring the goods bought, home, without costing them about 50 per cent more.

Present Prosperity.

Prosperity seems to have so forcibly struck me that I am tempted to mention it to the readers of the BUFFALO GAZETTE although some cannot fully grasp the meaning of all the following at the first reading. After advising them in advance to read the portion they are unable to understand several times, and then, if not fully understanding lay it aside for a couple of days and gently nourish their gray substance with experience, history and a copy of Webster's Unabridged Dictionary, or be on the alert for my visit, I will commence to show up the wonderful and delightful prosperity and good times that are making so many people desperate in their pursuit of wealth at the head of a syndicate, by grinding the last cent out of the tax-payer.

Unless the farmer is prosperous, the country is not prosperous. Some people insist that the farmer is prosperous, and argue, "Why not? hay sells for more than it ever did. Corn and oats are up and wood was never so high". It is a fact, farm products are higher now than for some time, and the conditions of the farmer should be prosperous, but are they? There were not enough men in the country to put up the hay; or scarcely enough to gather the crops, which accounts for the high prices to a certain extent, and the condition of the weather accounts for the rest. Where are these men who were so numerous a few years ago? Have they been induced to go to the Klondike to seek fortunes, or have they joined the army, and help swell the prosperous condition of the country's tax-payer, who in reality receive nothing for their services; as their services are abroad from our land, and then, trying to subdue a people, who have so far as applicable to their land and condition, the identical constitution, which was written by Jefferson and others of the Colonial times and has been for over a century the foundation of our glorious Republic. One is sometimes forced to believe it must be a part of both; as there is a vast number of men in both places.

If the farmers are prosperous they must also be greedy because I have been for sometime collector for a well known physician in this community and very seldom see anybody but who says "there is not going to be enough feed for my stock" or "I havn't enough to clothe my family and feed them during the winter, things are so high," or some other excuse equally pressing. Among a prosperous class of farmers this condition should not exist. It is the high protective tariff which makes everything manufactured to be used so high.

In arguing with some believer of a large standing army we run across the argument that "The army is paid by the government and the government collects the money on imports and revenues. How does that tax the people?"

The fact is that there is very little coming in on imports on account of the high tariff, but the money is raised by the sale of Bonds to national bankers. And the trusts are able to exist under the high protective tariff, sock up the prices so the farmers will not have anything left to pay debts after buying the necessities of life and paying their taxes.

Green-backs were misused in the time of the Civil War. They were made to represent money and the government would not take them for duties on imports. Consequently Green-backs were not in as great a demand as Gold, therefor Gold went to a premium.

If Green-backs were below par 50 per cent they would be better than our present system of national bank notes. The national banks buy $100,000 worth of bonds on which to found the bank. The government gives 2 per cent interest on the gold and then give thems back $100,000 in currency, which the banks trade for gold, and enables them to buy more bonds, this transaction can now be done more profitably than it could under the 90 per cent law. Under the 90 per cent law a bank with $100,000 to start on could not exchange the 90 per cent of deposited bonds value, for full face value of bonds started with. But under the new law our national banks can start with $100,000 buy bonds deposit them and draw 2 per cent interest, besides getting their money back. In doing an extensive business such as national banks are able to do they can exchange the currency for gold and then buy more bonds and continue the process as long as the government has any bonds to sell. In other words our government has to have some body issue currency for them and pay 2 per cent commission for placing it in circulation at 6 per cent interest on mortages and approved notes. Taking Green backs on an equal footing with Gold, it is much better because then the government places in circulation the money—without hiring a man on a commission of 2 per cent to let it out to the people on security at 6 per cent—itself and direct to the peopel without interest, and besides these national banks can accumulate stacks upon stacks of wealth and do not have to pay one cent tax on it. because it is in U. S. bonds which are exempt from taxation.

If any of the farmers or business men in this or any other locality who do not believe that this condition of affairs exist, and owe any one will kindly pay their bills possibly the rest of the community can be convinced of the prosperous times that they now enjoy. A. G. CATLIN.

Boers Make England Look Silly.

A map showing the present area of disturbance in the Transvaal and the Orange Free State, published in the Westminister Gazette, is causing a painful disillusionment respecting the effectiveness of the conquest claimed for Lord Roberts with his 200,000 men.

The map shows that since October 1 the British forces have been attacked, with more or less serious loss, in every district throughout both the states, in addition to several places in the old British colonies.

As illustrating the extent of the Boers resources, as well as the universality of the determination to fight to the last, the map occasioned profound amazement and alarm here. It accounts for Lord Roberts' orders that no further troops leave South Africa, and places in a very dubious light his assurance that the war is over.

BOERS WILL NEVER YIELD.

The burden of all letters now coming from the scene of operations is that the only way to terminate the war is by giving a free hand to Lord Kitchener to exterminate the Boers. The notion of a Boer acceptance of subjection has been abandoned by everyone on the spot.

It is understood that the statement of the Natal Mercury means that Lord Kitchener will depopulate the small towns and concentrate their populations in the large towns, otherwise following out a reconcentrado policy.

An additional official list of wounded South African soldiers just issued includes the names of the Canadian lieutenants, J. H. Elmsley L. E. W. Turner and H. G. C. Cockburn.—National Watchman.

Getting Away from the Constitution.

The proposition to fix our standing army at 50,000 men to be increased to 100,000 at any time in the discretion of the President seems likely to be submitted to Congress with the approval of the Administration and the Republican leaders. Congress cannot assent to it without abdicating its own constutional "power to raise and support armies." The power to double the standing army at his own pleasure is one that no American President has ever had. Queen Victoria has no such power nor would any British Prime Minister dare to propos that it given to her. No monarch in Europe has such power except the Czar of Russia. The Philadelphia Ledger rightly characterizes "proposition as" positively unrepublican". World.

A Chestnutting Ghost

By Margaret Barringer.

"I CALL it downright mean, boys."

"So do I, so do I, but what's that to him. He don't care a snap what we think of him. Well, we can show him there are more ways than one to make him care."

Tom Winslow was the leader among his friends, and what he said usually carried weight. The three boys were walking arm in arm from school, kicking the rustling leaves before them. They were greatly interested in the subject under discussion, and the lovely blue sky and twitter of birds on the mild October afternoon were lost to them.

"I'll tell you, boys. Let's go over to the house, out by the grape arbor, and talk this thing over. No one will catch a word, and I have a plan," suggested Tom.

The conference was held that afternoon and a plan laid which the boys were to carry out the next night. Tom was spokesman, and he talked earnestly between grapes.

"Now, this is my plan: We all have air guns, and there's plenty of good shot, and if we can't climb over his fence because of that great bulldog we can spoil his apples for him. We'll get Jim, Harry and Lou, and with ours there will be six guns. We can take some short ladders and climb up far enough to shoot, and we'll just pepper those apples so full of shot he won't have a tooth left if he tries to eat one. It's good moonlight, and we can see to aim pretty straight, and old bully can have a dose, too."

Mr. Brown, against whom this plot was laid, was a bachelor and a man of means, but was very close-fisted, and he showed his penurious spirit by never offering an apple to anyone, although the trees were loaded. The boys had even asked for a little fruit, but were refused, and soon after a high board fence with a barbed wire along the top was built around the orchard; and, what was worse, a surly bulldog took up his abode at Mr. Brown's.

The trio seemed to think the plan a fine one, and all ate another bunch of grapes to seal the compact. Mrs. Winslow called supper, and Bert and Ernest were invited to stay. This was an unexpected pleasure and always a treat, as the Winslow home was full of good cheer and welcome, especially to the boys of Medeville.

After tea Grandpa Winslow said:

"About nutting time, isn't it, boys? This warm weather won't last long. We'll have a frost one of these nights, and then hurrah for the hickories! That reminds me;" the boys nudged one another and winked sly winks, and grandpa had a merry twinkle in his blue eyes.

"Next to my father's farm," resumed the old man, "when I was about your age, there lived a man by the name of Silas Holmes, and he was as 'mean as dirt,' we used to say. He was honest enough and a good worker, but as stingy as people were ever made. We boys grew to hate Silas, and not without reason, for he watched us day and night, for fear we might somehow coax a melon or an apple over the fence.

"He seemed to gloat over the idea that he alone raised and ate chestnuts. We boys got more angry each year, and finally things came to a crisis. One evening just at dusk I was going from the barn to the cornerib and I saw a figure in the melon patch; supposing it was father or Brother Jim, I went on, but on second thought turned back just in time to see Silas climbing the fence with a big watermelon under his arm. I called out: 'Good evening, Mr. Holmes,' and he called back: 'G'd evenin', Tommy.'

"I was dumfounded, but concluded to keep my counsel until Bill, my younger brother, and I got to bed. Then we talked the matter over and decided to wait until chestnuts were ripe and have our revenge in some way. October days soon came, with the dropping leaves and the yellow corn, and we were busy making jack o' lanterns to light the barn, for we were to have the annual corn-husking bee at our place. All hands were set to work that day; the old barn was swept and great boughs hung about the sides and from the rafters, and the pumpkin men never shone so brightly.

"We had laid our plans, Bill, Jack Hardy, who lived the other side of Silas, and myself. Of course Silas would be at the husking, and as the women were all busy getting the supper his daughter, Sally, would be over early to help. We all liked Sally; she kept house for her father. Yes, she was a good girl, but she had to toe the mark. About eight o'clock the folks began to come, and by nine o'clock the barn was full. Supper was announced about 11 o'clock, and then came our chance.

"We stole away to the cornerib, where we had hidden our bags, and then crept back of the barn, through the melon patch, across Silas' garden to the other side of the house, over the fence and away across a field to where six big chestnuts stood, with the moonlight streaming over their heads. We decided that Jack should climb the tree and shake, while we filled our bags, and then one of us would take his place and the other help him fill his. We were getting on finely, when we were startled by a noise, not an unusual one, but a sound resembling a moan, then all was quiet.

"'Give us another shake, Jack,' I called; 'then I'll come up.' I had no sooner said it than a louder moan came from near by. We were frightened by this time, and Billy whispered: 'A ghost!'

"'Pshaw!' I said, 'ghosts don't make a noise, and there is no such thing, anyway,' and I bravely turned my head and looked about us. There it was, coming slowly towards us—white and specter-like—moving steadily from tree to tree, and you can imagine our hearts were thumping lively. 'Billy,' I said, getting close to him, 'hang on to your bag and we'll run.' I called to Jack, softly: 'Come on, Jack; drop quick, and you can have half my nuts.'

"Before he could answer we heard some one sobbing, and soon a voice called out: 'Oh, boys, come quick! I'm so sorry, so sorry!'

"This was no ghost, but Sally, holding Jack's head in her lap and trying to revive him. He had fallen from the tree and broken his arm in his hurry to follow us, and, frightened nearly to death at being left alone with the ghost, had fainted. Sally then told her story. She had overheard us boys talking one day and knew of our plan to 'coon' the nuts, and thought she would have some fun out of it.

"We all went home feeling glad Jack's accident was no worse. Sally told a straight story to her people, saying we all went over to her house and Jack fell from a tree. The doctor was there and set his arm, and he was our hero, but no one knew of our ghost and the stolen nuts."

"Is that all?" asked Tom.

"No," Grandpa Winslow said, "there's a sequel. At Christmas time we were all invited to Silas Holmes' to dinner, an unheard of thing, and we went with wonder and curiosity sticking out all over us. There was a big turkey and all sorts of good things, and in the center of the table a great dish of chestnuts, but they were not disturbed until evening, when we were all invited into the great kitchen, and Silas said while we roasted chestnuts he would tell us a tale. Then he told of how when he was a boy he fell in the creek and our father jumped in and helped him out, and another time when he grew up his house burned, and father and mother took him with his wife and Sally into their own home, and kept them until his house was rebuilt. Then when Mrs. Holmes died, leaving Sally a little girl, mother used to care for her and helped him get along until she was old enough to do the work herself, and so he rambled on.

"Father spoke up and said: 'There, there, Silas, that will do.' We wondered what was coming. Silas took the big dish of nuts and asked father to empty them on the hearth and as the nuts rolled out a big, yellow envelope fell on top of the pile. Father picked it up and on it was written: 'A Merry Christmas, from Sally and Silas.'

"Some years before this father had met with misfortune and was obliged to put a mortgage on our home. We boys knew the struggle he was having, and how mother was growing sad.

"I'M SO SORRY, SO SORRY."

There seemed only trouble ahead of us all. Silas said as father held the envelope: 'You boys, I know, have thought I was mean about the nuts, but I decided long ago to devote the proceeds of the sale of the chestnuts to my one desire—to in some way show my appreciation of your father's kindness to me. This money was all extra to me and I would not miss it, so Sally and I have carefully hoarded the nuts, not eating them ourselves. They are scarce about here and bring a good price, and I am the happiest man in the county this Christmas morning to be able to say to you, Joseph, that your home is clear.'

"Father had sunk into a chair and mother had drawn her chair close to Sally and they both cried, of course, but we boys gave one big cheer for Uncle Si, and I know he was as glad as we, and more so.

"But what about that melon he stole?" asked Tom.

"Oh, yes, the melon. "Why, I found out soon after that Sally had asked father for it, as she had company come unexpectedly, and Silas went to get it, and never dreamed I thought anything wrong of it. Then, too, about the ghost. Sally told Silas our plan and they needed the nuts to finish the payment and took that way to keep them, you see. We always liked Uncle Si after that, and we always had all the nuts we could eat and, what was better, we learned that we should not judge people by their seemingly unpleasant or rough exterior, for often underneath the surface there is a warm and tender heart."

There was silence for a time, and grandpa wondered if the boys guessed why he told the story or that he had been behind the grape arbor.

"I don't believe we had better buy any more shot, do you, Tom?" asked Ernest.

"No. Say, weren't Silas and Sally bricks?"—Detroit Free Press.

The American Indian, who has been "dying out" for the last ten years, turns up in the late census to the number of nearly 300,000.

The first mail carried in the United States was from New York to Boston, on a once-a-month schedule. Now everybody is clamoring for a daily free delivery at every household.

It is one of the curiosities of the presidential election that the banner republican township should be located in North Carolina. In the Shelton Laurel township in that state McKinley got 210 votes and Bryan none.

The use of Niagara falls as a generator of electrical power on a large scale, followed by successful experiments all over the United States, as well as in Europe, has led to the investment of enormous sums of money elsewhere for water power schemes.

The Kentucky girls certainly know how to bet. One of them won a man on the election, and she naturally expresses herself as particularly well pleased with her winnings. Being single and of marriageable age she is not at a loss to know what to do with him.

The Victoria Cross, the medal awarded by Queen Victoria for extraordinary bravery and courage, is an honor that is an honor, and but 180 men alive to-day are entitled to wear it. The act that entitles a soldier to the Victoria Cross usually takes him into another world.

Georgia has within its borders four known real daughters of the American revolution, they being Mrs. Olina T. Way, Mrs. Martha Penn Rodgers, Mrs. Oliver P. Berry and Mrs. Mary Bibb Hall, each the daughter of a soldier who fought in the continental army during the revolutionary war.

The ornithologists of Great Britain and America have just finished a spirited discussion which has lasted for more than a year as to which is the largest bird that flies. The prize has been awarded to an American bird, the great condor of the Andes. The second prize has been given to the fierce harpy eagle of the Philippines.

It is important to address mail matter plainly and carefully. A government report recently issued shows that during the past year 50,553 of the letters sent to the dead letter office contained money orders, drafts, checks and money to the aggregate value of $1,136,645. More than one person is waiting for "the letter that never came."

Fairly reliable statistics show that 13,000,000,000 of hens' eggs will have to be laid in the United States during the year 1900—a startling estimate truly, inasmuch as these eggs, stood one on top of another, point to butt, would make a column 461,648 miles in altitude—nearly twice the height of the moon from the earth when that orb is seen overhead. The annual value of this product exceeds that of any mineral except coal, and is greater even than that of our pig iron.

It has been decided by the United States court of appeals that the ordinary predictions of the weather bureau are not trustworthy and that men are not bound to consider them. The master of a ship unloaded his cargo of rice at Charleston, putting it on an uncovered wharf, where it was spoiled by rain, which had been predicted by the weather bureau. Litigation followed as to payment and a lower court found against the sea captain. He appealed, with the result noted above.

The report of the treasurer of the United States shows that the coin of the realm that is most extensively counterfeited nowadays is the copper one-cent piece. During the year there were detected and destroyed at the offices of the treasury $11,146 in counterfeit silver coins, notes and certificates, 3,277 five-cent pieces and 121,652 one-cent pieces, and the number of spurious minor coins in circulation is rapidly on the increase. Counterfeit gold coins are rare, only 13 having been presented at the treasury during the past fiscal year.

Plans are being drawn for a trans-Atlantic liner that will make the journey in four days, and compared with this speed the Deutschland will be a slow boat. The Deutschland is 638 feet long, displaces 23,000 tons, has a horse-power of 37,000, and attains a speed of 23.36 knots. The four-day boat will be 930 feet long, 87 feet of beam, with a displacement of 40,000 tons, a horse-power of 110,000, and a speed of 30 knots. We believe that the four-day boat is visionary, but in their race for records there is no telling where the rival companies will stop unless they are restrained.

Ali Ferrouh Bey, the Turkish minister at Washington, made the announcement the other day that the sultan has decided to build a new railroad from Damascus to Mecca to accommodate the travel of the pilgrims to the sacred places of the Moslem faith, and that Americans have been asked to submit bids for the locomotives and rolling stock. A few years ago no thought would have been given America when it came to asking for bids, but now all nations have come to recognize this country as the leading factor in the world of trade.

LATER NEWS.

The opening of congress the 3d drew great crowds to her capitol. Both houses were called to order at noon. The senate reassembled at 1:45 and a few minutes later Major Pruden, one of the president's secretaries, appeared with the president's message. Secretary Bennett of the senate at once began the reading of the document. The first bill of the session introduced in the house of representatives was by Representative Crumpacker (rep., Ind.) "making apportionment of representatives in congress under the eleventh census." It provides an increase of membership from 357 to 365.

YOSEMITE GOES DOWN

United States Cruiser Wrecked Near the Island of Guam.

Desperate Fight Made to Save Vessel, But Crew Forced to Finally Abandon It—Five Drowned.

Manila, Nov. 30.—The United States auxiliary cruiser Yosemite parted her cables off the harbor of San Luis d'Apra, Island of Guam, during a typhoon on November 13, drifted 60 miles, struck a reef and was wrecked. Five of the crew were drowned. A collier rescued the remainder.

According to advices received here from unofficial sources the wind was blowing from the southeast in the early morning of November 13 at the rate of a hundred miles an hour. The Yosemite had two anchors down, but both were dragged a mile across the harbor entrance. At 11 a. m. she struck the reef and stove in forward. She drifted for an hour and at the noon struck the rock near Somaye, carrying away her rudder and damaging her propeller.

Five Drowned.

A launch had been sent to find shelter, but it capsized and the occupants were drowned. They were Coxswain Swanson, Seaman George Aubel, Engineer J. L. Mabancfy and Firemen J. L. Davis and Joseph Anderson. The storm abated somewhat at one p. m., but was then renewed with violence from the southwest. A dozen of the crew attempted to carry a line ashore, but the boat capsized, although the occupants managed to reach the land.

Meanwhile the Yosemite was being blown seaward, her head down and the forward compartment filling. The boiler and engine-rooms, however, were free of water, and the pumps were kept going. The cruiser was kept afloat until the afternoon of November 15, when the United States collier Justin, which also had suffered damage to her anchors and had narrowly escaped the reef, was sighted. The Justin attempted to tow the Yosemite with two chains and two cables, but these parted.

Rest of the Crew Saved.

Finally 138 of the Yosemite's crew, 26 marines and nine officers, were transferred to the Justin, together with $68,000, Mexican. The Yosemite soon plunged headforemost and sank. The members of the crew were provided with temporary quarters at Agana, which suffered badly from the hurricane.

Many Persons Killed.

The typhoon was of unprecedented violence. Many are reported to have been killed or injured. At Agana three were killed and ten died of exposure. The town of Moranjan was destroyed, 30 of the townspeople being killed and many others injured. It is believed that there was considerable loss of life elsewhere in Guam and all the crops were destroyed. Many dwellings in Agana were demolished. Mrs. White, wife of Maj. White, of the marine corps, the only white woman in Agana, took refuge with her husband, and Commander Seaton Schroeder, naval governor of Guam, in the cellar of the governor's mansion, which was already partly filled with water.

The Last Vessel.

[The Yosemite was first commissioned April 13, 1898. She had been station ship at the island of Guam since the days of the Spanish war. She was a 16-knot converted cruiser of 6,179 tons displacement and was provided with a main battery of ten five-inch rapid-fire guns and a secondary battery of six six-pounders and two Colt rifles. She had a complement of 18 officers and 267 men. Her measurements were 391 feet in length by 48 feet extreme breadth. She had a mean draft of 20 feet 1 inch.

Just before the outbreak of the Spanish-American war the vessel was purchased by the navy department, fitted as an auxiliary cruiser and rendered effective service as one of the patrol fleet, being manned in part by the Michigan naval militia. It is said that her anchorage at Guam was off the harbor of San Luis d'Apra, and that owing to her draft she was obliged to lie six miles off shore. The harbor is a particularly dangerous one, owing to the existence of a rocky shoal in the middle and a particularly crooked channel.

According to the naval register, the Yosemite was manned by 18 officers and 267 men, but in her capacity as station ship not all of these were required, and undoubtedly a part of them were ashore engaged in duties at the naval station. This probably would be true of her commander, Seaton Schroeder, who also is governor of Guam, and who probably left the active command of the ship to the ranking lieutenant, Augustus N. Mayer.]

A BIG ADVANCE.

Standard Oil Shares Go to $10—Rockefeller's Holdings Are Worth $350,000,000.

New York, Dec. 4.—The Standard Oil certificates made a sensational advance Monday, passing the 800 mark and selling at 810, an advance of 30 points for one day. The Mail and Express says:

"The company's capital of $100,000,000 now has a market value of over $800,000,000. The stock is the second highest priced industrial in the country. The rise in the price of Standard Oil this year has been phenomenal. Last January it sold at 475. By the middle of October it had reached $600,000,000. A gain of over $200 a share has been made since then, with the last 100 points occupying less than a fortnight. When it is considered that John D. Rockefeller owns 42 per cent. of the total capital of the company, the amount of the increase of his fortune within a year is tremendous. In the company which he controls his investments are worth at least $350,000,000. The company has paid about $45,000,000 in dividends the past year."

President Diaz Sworn In.

City of Mexico, Dec. 3.—President Diaz Saturday morning took the oath as president of the republic for the next four years. When he entered the chamber of deputies all rose and he took his stand in front of the speaker of the house, who asked him if he promised to observe and comply with the precepts of the constitution. The president answered in the affirmative and the speaker said: "If you shall do so may the nation reward you, and if you do not may it call you to account."

Colored Man Loses.

Spokane, Wash., Dec. 3.—The jury in the suit of Emmett L. Holmes versus the Washington Water Power company, returned a verdict in favor of the defendant. Holmes was refused food at a restaurant owned by the company because he was a colored man. He demanded $5,000 damages. It is claimed that by this decision colored men can be excluded from any restaurant or saloon.

LAWMAKERS MEET.

Short Session of the Fifty-Sixth Congress Begins—President's Message Read.

Washington, Dec. 4.—The opening of the session in the house was brilliant but not exciting. There were the usual throngs in the galleries and the usual display of floral pieces on the floor, but the proceedings were purely formal, consisting of the rapping to order by the speaker, prayer by the chaplain, the roll-call of members, the appointment of the formal committees to wait on the president and the reception and reading of the president's message. Despite the fact that a great presidential campaign had concluded within a month, the best of feeling seemed to prevail between victors and vanquished. The reading of the message, which naturally was the feature of the day, occupied over two hours. It was listened to with respectful interest by both sides. The deaths of the late Representatives Daly (N. J.) and Hoffecker (Del.), and Senators Davis (Minn.) and Gear (Ia.) were announced, and, as a further mark of respect to their memories, the house adjourned until to-day

Washington, Dec. 4.—When the senate convened it was within the shadow of the death of two of its most distinguished members. Since the senate last convened a great national campaign had been inaugurated and conducted to a conclusion, and as senators assembled they exchanged political greetings as well as the warm handclasps of personal friendship. A notable meeting on the floor just before the session opened was that between Senators Hanna (O.) and Jones (Ark.), the chairmen, respectively, of the republican and democratic national campaign committees. Surrounded by many of their colleagues, they exchanged cordial greetings and laughed and chatted for several minutes.

The president's message was read and the death of Senators Gear and Davis was announced. Appropriate resolutions were adopted and as an additional mark of respect for the memories of Senator Gear and Senator Davis, the senate at 3:45 p. m. adjourned.

MISSIONARIES MASSACRED.

Governor of Province of Shan-Si Invites Them to His Home and Then Murders Them.

Berlin, Dec. 4.—Aspecial dispatch from China to the Volks Zeitung reports a fearful mission slaughter in the province of Shan-Si. The first victims, the dispatch says, were a Catholic bishop and his coadjutors and four European priests, Franciscans, Italian and French.

The governor invited them to his house, pretending to give them better protection; but when they arrived their hands were tied. Then the governor himself poniarded them all. Next the governor went to the bishop's residence with a number of soldiers and seized six Marseilles sisters. He promised them money and distinguished husbands if they would renounce Christianity, which offer they unanimously rejected. Thereupon the governor poniarded them and also a number of Chinese priests, 30 Chinese sisters and 200 orphans from three to sixteen years of age.

Fifteen seminarists, who had hidden themselves in a cistern, were, the dispatch says, tied to stakes and forced to drink the blood of the first victim. They were then killed.

A Chinese priest and two Christians, who attempted to escape, were caught and put in a small hut, where they were burned.

DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE.

Some Extracts from the Annual Report Made by Attorney-General Griggs.

Washington, Dec. 4.—Attorney General Griggs Monday afternoon sent his annual report to congress. It opens with a statement of the condition of the work of the United States supreme court, which shows that 370 appellate cases were docketed and 371 were disposed of, leaving 33 cases still pending. On July 1, 1899, there were 3,137 United States convicts in the various prisons and reformatories of the country, against 2,932 at the close of the last fiscal year. In 907 of the 1,602 civil suits terminated during the last fiscal year judgments were for the United States, in 206 against the United States, 489 were either dismissed or discontinued and 28 were appealed.

The aggregate amount of the judgments rendered in favor of the United States in civil suits during the last year was $863,229, and the amount actually collected on these judgments was $52,795, while $52,748 was obtained during the year on judgments rendered in former years for the United States, and $27,130 was otherwise realized in civil suits.

The aggregate amount of fines, forfeitures and penalties imposed during the year in criminal prosecutions was $705,157, and the amount of these fines, forfeitures and penalties collected during the year was $104,020, while $8,203 was realized on fines, forfeitures and penalties imposed in former years.

Over 300 Killed.

Tacoma, Wash., Dec. 3.—The steamer Energia brings details of the terrible powder explosion at Nanking, China, which killed over 300 people last month. During a violent thunder storm lightning struck a gunpowder magazine, which exploded. The result was to utterly obliterate the small valley where the magazine was located. Throughout the district were formed heaps of mangled and twisted bodies. The rescuing of the bodies was carried on for a week by Chinese soldiers, 100 being recovered the first day.

A Horrible Death.

Cartwright, Wis., Dec. 4.—An eight-year-old daughter of C. F. Riley, a farmer living about 16 miles from here in the Mad Brook settlement, was carried away by a huge panther and devoured. Only a few fragments of the remains could be found. The girl was walking in the road near the farm when the beast sprang from the woods and, taking the girl in his huge jaws, carried her into a swamp, where she met a most horrible death, being torn limb from limb.

Will Not Accept.

Minneapolis, Minn., Dec. 3.—Loren W. Collins, associate justice of the state supreme court, has declined the appointment as United States senator to succeed the late Cushman K. Davis, which was offered him by Gov. Lind Saturday. It is further stated on good authority that Judge Collins will not be a candidate for the place when the legislature meets.

WOES OF WORKERS.

The American man or woman is industrious. Our leisure class is small, our working world very large. Many of our leading citizens of great wealth are hard workers. Our laboring classes are found in herds and hordes in the "hives of industry." What is all this work for? In most cases it is for daily bread, in many for maintenance of others. Great numbers also work to acquire wealth. Some for great commercial prominence. Some to preserve intact a splendid inheritance. Necessity, generosity and ambition are the inspiration of all classes of industry, and the object of every one falls to the ground when ill-health attacks him.

Maintaining health is the most vital thing in the world for workers of every class, and the usefulness of Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy, as a strengthener of the constitutional and vital powers, is beyond all question. This great remedy enters into partnership with Nature and helps human beings do their work without giving up to premature decay. The strain of work is on the minds of some, on the bodies of others, but the nourishing of either, or both, is in the nerves and blood. Nervura acts directly on the fountains of health and its strengthening power is wonderful.

Dr. Greene's NERVURA

for the Blood and Nerves.

What does the worker do when some chronic trouble manifests itself? He takes some stimulant or something which is designed for temporary effect, and simply weakens his already overworked system. How different from this is the work of Nervura! How beautiful its support to the natural powers! Without shock of any kind its purely vegetable elements seek out the weak spots and build them up. Immediately the circulation of the blood improves and the sluggish elements are expelled. The nerves are quieted, the quality of the blood is enriched and the new and strengthening tide communicates itself to every muscle of the body.

Mr. JOHN D. SMITH, Electrician for the Thomson-Houston Electric Co., of Lynn, Mass., says:

"When a man has been sick and is cured, it is his duty to tell others about it, that they, too, may get well. Three years ago I had been working almost night and day, could not eat regularly, and got only a few hours' sleep at night. No man can stand that long, and I soon began to be prostrated. I could not sleep when I tried, and my food would not stay on my stomach. I was in a terrible condition, and was much alarmed.

"I went to doctors, but they did me no good. Learning of the wonderful good done by Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy, I determined to try it. It cured me completely of all my complaints. I eat heartily and sleep well, thanks to this splendid medicine. I believe it to be the best remedy in existence."

Dr. Greene, Nervura's discoverer, will give all health seekers his counsel free of charge. His office is at 35 West 14th Street, New York City, and his advice may be secured by personal call or by letter through the mail; no charge is made in either case. The worn-out in body, mind, or sexual powers will get prompt help from Dr. Greene. His advice is absolutely confidential and is free to all.

SOMETHING OF A TRAVELER.

A Busy City Man Who Still Finds a Little Time to Cover a Few Thousand Miles.

"I traveled 5,000 miles last year," said the mild clerk of the ribbon counter, "and had no idea we had so extensive a country."

He looked around with conscious pride and a swelling bosom. A veteran in the shoe department took him up, says the New York Sun.

"Five thousand miles!" said he, with scorn. "Only 5,000 miles? Why, bless your innocent, young heart, I traveled 18,720 miles last year, and will do it again this year, and all I know about the extent of our great and glorious country is gleaned from the map. How did I do it? Easy enough. Twenty-five years ago I married, and for the benefit of future generations I bought a little place 30 miles in the country. Twice a day for six days in a week I have been going up and down to that little place for 25 years, not counting side trips. That is to say I have traveled 300 miles a week, which, multiplied by 52, makes 468,000 miles. Nearly 20 times around the world, that is, and almost from here to the moon and back. Oh, my boy, you don't know what traveling is until you live in the suburbs and become a commuter. Five thousand miles? My soul and body, that's hardly a constitutional."

And the ribbon clerk shrunk into himself and wished he hadn't mentioned his journey.

HORSES NEED HAIR RENEWER

Uncle Reuben Thought There Wasn't Much to Brag About in the Show.

"City folks is easily pleased," remarked Uncle Reuben, who has a farm down in Egypt, relates the Chicago Chronicle. "I went in to see that there horse show, and there wasn't a single critter there that had more than a stump of a tail. What they need is a hair renewer for those prize animals. A stiff young man that kept looking at nothing and holding his arms out as if he das'n't let his coat sleeves touch his coat says to me when I asked him about those poor tailless, stuck-up looking animals that they were that way on purpose because it's the fashion. Queer what will come in for style. I looked round and most of the big men they said was millionaires didn't have any hair on their heads. The bald spots was about as numerous as the bob-tailed hosses. The young dudes that I see promenading about with big flowers in their buttonholes didn't one of them have a sign of mustache or even a prospect of any whiskers. It was queer—horses without hardly any tails, men without any hair on their heads, and boys without any mustaches. It do beat all."

NEARLY A BREAK DOWN.

Mrs. Olberg, a Prominent Minnesota Lady, Tells a Remarkable Story.

Albert Lea, Minn., Dec. 3, 1900 (Special).—There are few men and women in this state or indeed in the whole northwest, who have not heard, or do not know personally Mrs. Henriette C. Olberg of this city.

Mrs. Olberg was Judge of Linen and Linen Fabrics at the World's Fair, at Chicago, and Superintendent of Flax Exhibit at the International Exposition at Omaha, Nebraska, in 1898. Mrs. Olberg is Secretary of the National Flax, Hemp and Ramie Association, and Assistant Editor of the "Distaff."

Her official duties are naturally very onerous, and involve a great deal of traveling and living away from home. She says:

"During the World's Fair in Chicago, my official duties so taxed my strength, that I thought I would have to give them up. Through the continual change of food and irregular meal hours, and a poor quality of water, I lost my appetite, and became wakeful and nervous in the extreme. My Kidneys refused to perform their usual duties. One of my assistants advised me to try Dodd's Kidney Pills, and sent for a box. I am pleased to say that I derived immediate and permanent benefit. I used three boxes, and feel ten years younger.

HIS ANNUAL MESSAGE

President Sends to Congress Views on National Questions.

Brief But Comprehensive Summary of the Document—Our Foreign Relations and Matters of Domestic Policy Dealt With.

Washington, Dec. 3.—The following is given as a brief review of President McKinley's annual message to the two houses of congress:

The Chinese Crisis.

The president gives first place in his message to the troubles in China, and our connection with the allied forces operating there. He reviews the causes leading up to the Boxer outbreak, and the first murders of foreigners in Chinese territories. In this connection he says:

The increasing gravity of the conditions in China and the imminence of peril to our own diversified interests in the empire, as well as to those of all the other treaty governments, were soon appreciated by this government, causing it profound solicitude. The United States from the earliest days of foreign intercourse with China had followed a policy of peace, omitting no occasions to testify good will, to further the extension of lawful trade, to respect the sovereignty of its government, and to insure by all legitimate and kindly but earnest means the fullest measure of protection for the lives and property of our law-abiding citizens and for the exercise of their beneficent callings among the Chinese people.

Mindful of this, it was felt to be appropriate that our purposes should be pronounced in favor of such course as would hasten united action of the powers at Peking to promote the administrative reforms so greatly needed for strengthening the imperial government and maintaining the integrity of China, in which we believed the whole western world to be alike concerned. To these ends I caused to be addressed to the several powers occupying territory and maintaining spheres of influence in China the circular proposals of 1899, inviting from them declarations of their intentions and views as to the desirability of the adoption of measures insuring the benefits of equality of treatment of all foreign trade throughout China.

The history of the efforts made at relieving the beleaguered legationers in Peking is thoroughly covered.

During the siege, says the president, the defenders lost 65 killed, 135 wounded and seven by disease—the last all children.

Continuing he says: Not only are the protestations of the Chinese government that it protected and succored the legations positively contradicted, but irresistible proof accumulates that the attacks upon them were made by imperial troops, regularly uniformed, armed and officered, belonging to the command of Jung Lu, the imperial commander in chief. Decrees encouraging the Boxers, organizing them under prominent imperial officers, provisioning them, and even granting them large sums in the name of the empress dowager, are known to exist. Members of the tsung-li-yamen who counseled protection of the foreigners were beheaded. Even in the distant provinces men suspected of foreign sympathy were put to death, prominent among these being Chang Yen-Hoon, formerly Chinese minister in Washington.

Our Chinese Policy.

He recalls the circular note to the powers issued by this government on July 3, outlining our policy as one of peace, guaranteeing the integrity of China, and says:

As was then said, "the policy of the government of the United States is to seek a solution which may bring about permanent safety and peace to China, preserve Chinese territorial and administrative entity, protect all rights guaranteed to friendly powers by treaty and international law, and safeguard for the world the principle of equal and impartial trade with all parts of the Chinese empire."

Conditions of Peace.

A little further on the president says: I regard as one of the essential factors of a durable adjustment the securement of adequate guarantees for liberty of faith, since insecurity of those natives who may embrace alien creeds is a scarcely less effectual assault upon the rights of foreign worship and teaching than would be the direct invasion thereof.

The matter of indemnity for our wronged citizens is a question of grave concern. Measured in money alone, a sufficient reparation may prove to be beyond the ability of China to meet. All the powers concur in emphatic disclaimers of any purpose of aggrandizement through the dismemberment of the empire. I am disposed to think that due compensation may be made in part by increased guarantees of security for foreign rights and immunities, and, most important of all, by the opening of China to the equal commerce of all the world. These views have been and will be earnestly advocated by our representatives.

First Place at Paris.

Our relations with other countries are gone into in detail. The Paris exposition is referred to as offering an opportunity for a display of the good will existing between this country and France.

A criterion of the extent and success of our participation in this exposition and of the thoroughness with which our exhibits were organized is seen in the awards granted to American exhibitors by the international jury, namely, grand prizes, 240; gold medals, 567; silver medals, 726; bronze medals, 541, and honorable mentions, 222—2,476 in all, being the greatest total number given to the exhibition of any one exhibiting nation, as well as the largest number in each grade.

This the president notes as especially valuable, since it sets us to the front in international questions of supply and demand.

Relations with Germany.

Of our relations with Germany the president says good will prevails. Of the meat inspection law of Germany he says:

An imperial meat inspection law has been enacted for Germany. While it may simplify the inspection, it prohibits certain products heretofore admitted. There is still great uncertainty as to whether our well-nigh extinguished German trade in meat products can revive under its new burdens. Much will depend upon regulations not yet promulgated, which we confidently hope will be free from the discriminations which attended the enforcement of the old statutes.

The Alaskan Boundary.

In connection with our relations with England he refers to the partial settlement of the Alaskan boundary dispute, and urges such action as shall definitely settle this vexing question. He says that a convention has been before the senate for some two years, but as no action has been taken I contemplate negotiating a new convention for a joint determination of the meridian by telegraphic observations. These, it is believed, will give more accurate and unquestionable results than the sidereal methods heretofore independently followed, which, as is known, proved discrepant at several points on the line, although not varying at any place more than 700 feet.

The War in South Africa.

A review of the incidents connected with our shipping to South African points is given, and he says that in this connection vexatious questions arose through Great Britain's action in respect to neutral cargoes, not contraband in their own nature, shipped to Portuguese South Africa, on the score of probable or suspected ultimate destination to the Boer states. Appropriate representations on our part resulted in the British government agreeing to purchase outright all such goods shown to be actual property of American citizens, thus closing the incident to the satisfaction of the immediately interested parties, although, unfortunately, without a broad settlement of the question of a neutral's right to send goods not contraband per se to a neutral port adjacent to a belligerent area.

Relations with Italy.

The lynching of the Italians in Louisiana is the one question standing between this government and Italy. That country is still waiting for the punishment of the parties guilty of that crime. Successive grand juries have failed to find indictments. The president recommends that congress appropriately confer upon the federal courts jurisdiction in this class of international cases where the ultimate responsibility of the federal government may be involved.

Lynching.

In my inaugural address I referred to the general subject of lynching in these words:

"Lynching must not be tolerated in a great and civilized country like the United States; courts, not mobs, must execute the penalties of the law. The preservation of public order, the right of discussion, the integrity of courts, and the orderly administration of justice must continue forever the rock of safety upon which our government securely rests."

This I most urgently reiterate, and again invite the attention of my countrymen to this reproach upon our civilization.

The Nicaraguan Canal.

He advocates the speedy building of the Nicaraguan canal, and recommends the ratification of the Hay-Pauncefote treaty.

New Treaty with Spain.

Of our relations with Spain he says a new convention of extradition is approaching completion and trusts that a commercial convention may follow. Of Spain's claim to a number of the islands in the Philippine group not covered by the Paris treaty he says:

By the terms of the treaty of peace the line bounding the ceded Philippine group in the southwest failed to include several small islands lying west of the Sulus, which have always been recognized as under Spanish control. The occupation of Sibutu and Cagayan Sulu by our naval forces elicited a claim on the part of Spain, the essential equity of which could not be gainsaid. In order to cure the defect of the treaty by removing all possible ground of future misunderstanding respecting the interpretation of its third article, I directed the negotiation of a supplementary treaty, which will be forthwith laid before the senate, whereby Spain quits all title and claim to the islands named, as well as to any and all islands belonging to the Philippine archipelago lying outside the lines ascribed in said third article, and agrees that all such islands shall be comprehended in the cession of the archipelago as fully as if they had been expressly included within those lines. In consideration of this cession the United States is to pay to Spain the sum of $100,000.

Our Claims Against Turkey.

Our claims upon the government of the sultan for reparation for injuries suffered by American citizens in Armenia and elsewhere give promise of early and satisfactory settlement. His majesty's good disposition in this regard has been evidenced by the issuance of an irade for rebuilding the American college at Harpoot.

Would Extend Reciprocity.

He urges the approval of the commercial conventions entered into between this government and other powers as soon as possible that the agricultural and other industries of the country may profit thereby. Continuing on this subject he says:

The policy of reciprocity so manifestly rests upon the principles of international equity and has been so repeatedly approved by the people of the United States, that there ought to be no hesitation in either branch of the congress in giving to it full effect.

Exposition at Buffalo.

The exposition of the resources and products of the western hemisphere to be held at Buffalo next year promises important results not only for the United States but for the other participating countries. It is gratifying that the Latin-American states have evinced the liveliest interest, and the fact that an international American congress will be held in the City of Mexico while the exposition is in progress encourages the hope of a larger display at Buffalo than might otherwise be practicable. The work of preparing an exhibit of our national resources is making satisfactory progress under the direction of different officials of the federal government, and the various states of the union have shown a disposition toward the most liberal participation in the enterprise.

Our Financial Showing.

The president points with much pride to the showing made by the treasury department and quotes exhaustively from the report of Secretary Gage. He shows the surplus for the year to be $79,627,060.18, and estimates the surplus of the coming year at $80,000,000. He says the present condition of the treasury is one of undoubted strength. The available cash balance November 30 was $139,303,794.50. Under the form of statement prior to the financial law of March 14 last this would have been included in the statement of available cash gold coin and bullion held for the redemption of United States notes.

Further Financial Legislation.

He recommends further financial legislation in the following words:

It will be the duty as I am sure it will be the disposition of the congress to provide whatever further legislation is needed to insure the continued parity under all conditions between our two forms of metallic money, silver and gold.

Our surplus revenues have permitted the secretary of the treasury since the close of the fiscal year to call in the funded loan of 1891 continued at two per cent, in the sum of $25,364,500. To and including November 30, $23,458,100 of these bonds have been paid. This sum, together with the amount which may accrue from further redemptions under the call, will be applied to the sinking fund.

The law of March 14, 1900, provided for refunding into two per cent. 30-year bonds, payable, principal and interest, in gold coin of the present standard value, that portion of the public debt represented by the three-per-cent. bonds of 1908, the four-per-cents of 1907 and the five-per-cents of 1900, of which there was outstanding at the date of said law $839,149,920. The holders of the old bonds presented them for exchange March 14 and November 30 to the amount of $364,943,750. The net saving to the government on these transactions aggregates $9,106,166.

Banking Facilities Extended.

The beneficial effect of the financial act of 1900, so far as it relates to the modification of the national banking act, is already apparent. The provision for the incorporation of national banks with a capital of not less than $25,000 in places not exceeding 3,000 inhabitants has resulted in the extension of banking facilities to many small communities hitherto unable to provide themselves with banking institutions under the national system. There were organized from the enactment of the law up to and including November 30, 369 national banks, of which 266 were with capital less than $50,000 and 103 with capital of $50,000 or more.

It is worthy of mention that the greater number of banks being organized under the new law are in sections where the need of banking facilities has been most pronounced. Iowa stands first, with 30 banks of the smaller class, while Texas, Oklahoma, Indian territory and the middle and western sections of the country have also availed themselves largely of the privileges under the new law.

Our Foreign Trade.

Our foreign trade shows a remarkable record of commercial and industrial progress. The total of imports and exports for the first time in the history of the country exceeds $2,000,000,000. The exports are greater than they have ever been before, the total for the fiscal year 1900 being $1,394,483,682, an increase over 1899 of $167,459,780, an increase over 1898 of $163,000,752, over 1897 of $243,489,526, and greater than 1896 by $511,876,144.

The growth of manufactures in the United States is evidenced by the fact that exports of manufactured products largely exceed those of any previous year, their value for 1900 being $423,851,756, against $339,592,146 in 1899, an increase of 25 per cent.

Agricultural products were also exported during 1900 in greater volume than in 1899, the total for the year being $835,858,123, against $784,776,142 in 1899.

The imports for the year amounted to $849,941,184, an increase over 1899 of $152,792,695. This increase is largely in materials for manufacture, and is in response to the rapid development of manufacturing in the United States.

The Internal Revenue Tax.

I recommend that the congress at its present session reduce the internal revenue taxes imposed to meet the expenses of the war with Spain in the sum of $30,000,000. This reduction should be secured by the remission of those taxes which experience has shown to be the most burdensome to the industries of the people.

I specially urge that there be included in whatever reduction is made the legacy tax, bequests for public uses of a literary, educational or charitable character.

Recommends Ship Subsidy.

American vessels during the past three years have carried about nine per cent. of our exports and imports. Foreign ships should carry the least, not the greatest, part of American trade. The remarkable growth of our steel industries, the progress of shipbuilding for the domestic trade, and our steadily maintained expenditures for the navy have created an opportunity to place the United States in the first rank of commercial maritime powers.

The Trust Question.

The trust question receives the attention of the president, and he says:

"It is apparent that uniformity of legislation upon this subject in the several states is much to be desired. It is to be hoped that such uniformity, founded in a wise and just discrimination between what is injurious and what is useful and necessary in business operations, may be obtained, and that means may be found for the congress, within the limitations of its constitutional power, so to supplement an effective code of state legislation as to make a complete system of laws throughout the United States adequate to compel a general observance of the salutary rules to which I have referred."

The Philippines.

Considerable attention is given the subject of the Philippines, and in this connection the scope and work of the Philippine commission as outlined to the commissioners is fully outlined for the benefit of congress. Of the present conditions in the islands the president says:

In my last annual message I dwelt at some length upon the condition of affairs in the Philippines. While seeking to impress upon you that the grave responsibility of the future government of those islands rests with the congress of the United States, I abstained from recommending at that time a specific and final form of government for the territory actually held by the United States forces and in which, as long as insurrection continues, the military arm must necessarily be supreme. I stated my purpose, until the congress shall have made known the formal expression of its will, to use the authority vested in me by the constitution and the statutes to uphold the sovereignty of the United States in those distant islands as in all other places where our flag rightfully floats, placing, to that end, at the disposal of the army and navy all the means which the liberality of the congress and the people have provided. No contrary expression of the will of the congress having been made, I have steadfastly pursued the purpose so declared, employing the civil arm as well toward the accomplishment of pacification and the institution of local governments within the lines of authority and law.

We Are Making Progress.

Progress in the hoped-for direction has been favorable. Our forces have successfully controlled the greater part of the islands, overcoming the organized forces of the insurgents and carrying order and administrative regularity to all quarters. What opposition remains is for the most part scattered, obeying no concerted plan of strategic action, operating only by the methods common to the traditions of guerrilla warfare, which, while ineffective to alter the general control now established, are still sufficient to beget insecurity among the populations that have felt the good results of our control, and thus delay the conferment upon them of the fullest measures of local self-government, of education, and of industrial and agricultural development which we stand ready to give to them.

By the spring of this year the effective opposition of the dissatisfied Tagals to the authority of the United States was virtually ended, thus opening the door for the extension of a stable administration over much of the territory of the archipelago. Desiring to bring this about, I appointed in March last a civil commission composed of Hon. William H. Taft, of Ohio; Prof. Dean C. Worcester, of Michigan; Hon. Luke E. Wright, of Tennessee; Hon. Henry C. Ide, of Vermont, and Prof. Bernard Moses, of California. The aims of their mission and the scope of their authority are clearly set forth in my instructions of April 7, 1900, addressed to the secretary of war to be transmitted to them.

Principles Are Appreciated.

Referring to the manner in which the work of the commission upon the lines laid down in his instructions to them has been received by the people of the Philippines, the president says:

It is evident that the most enlightened thought of the Philippine islands fully appreciates the importance of these principles and rules, and they will inevitably within a short time command universal assent. Upon every division and branch of the government of the Philippines, therefore, must be imposed three inviolable rules:

That no person shall be deprived of life, liberty, or property without due process of law; that private property shall not be taken for public use without just compensation; that in all criminal prosecutions the accused shall enjoy the right to a speedy and public trial, to be informed of the nature and cause of the accusation, to be confronted with the witnesses against him, to have compulsory process for obtaining witnesses in his favor, and to have the assistance of counsel for his defense; that excessive bail shall not be required, nor excessive fines imposed, nor cruel and unusual punishment inflicted; that no person shall be put twice in jeopardy for the same offense, or be compelled in any criminal case to be a witness against himself; that the right to be secure against unreasonable searches and seizures shall not be violated; that neither slavery nor involuntary servitude shall exist except as a punishment for crime; that no bill of attainder or ex post facto law shall be passed; that no law shall be passed abridging the freedom of speech or of the press, or the rights of the people to peaceably assemble and petition the government for a redress of grievances; that no law shall be made respecting an establishment of religion or prohibiting the free exercise thereof, and that the free exercise and enjoyment of religious profession and worship without discrimination or preference shall forever be allowed.

Porto Rico.

The civil government of Porto Rico provided for by the act of the congress, approved April 12, 1900, is in successful operation. The courts have been established. The governor and his associates, working intelligently and harmoniously, are meeting with commendable success.

Dealings with Cuba.

The present conditions in Cuba are referred to, citing the call for the election of delegates to a constitutional convention and the meeting of the convention which is now in session, and closes this part of his message with the following:

When the convention concludes its labor I will transmit to the congress the constitution as framed by the convention for its consideration and for such action as it may deem advisable.

The Army.

An increase in the regular army is recommended, and the need of soldiers shown. After saying that we need at least 26,000 troops at home to care for our extensive fortifications and ordnance, he continues:

We have in Cuba between 5,000 and 6,000 troops. For the present our troops in that island cannot be withdrawn or materially diminished, and certainly not until the conclusion of the labors of the constitutional convention now in session and a government provided by the new constitution shall have been established and its stability assured.

In Porto Rico we have reduced the garrisons to 1,636, which include 896 native troops. There is no room for further reduction here. We will be required to keep a considerable force in the Philippine islands for some time to come. From the best information obtainable we shall need there for the immediate future from 50,000 to 60,000 men. I am sure the number may be reduced as the insurgents shall come to acknowledge the authority of the United States, of which there are assuring indications.

It may be apparent that we will require an army of about 60,000, and that during present conditions in Cuba and the Philippines the president should have authority to increase the force to the present number of 100,000. Included in this number authority should be given to raise native troops in the Philippines up to 15,000, which the Taft commission believe will be more effective in detecting and suppressing guerrillas, assassins and Ladrones than our own soldiers.

The Postal Service.

Under a discussion of the postal service he urges an extension of the rural free delivery system and says:

This service ameliorates the isolation of farm life, conduces to good roads, and quickens and extends the dissemination of general information. Experience thus far has tended to allay the apprehension that it would be so expensive as to forbid its general adoption or make it a serious burden. Its actual application has shown that it increases postal receipts, and can be accompanied by reductions in other branches of the service, so that the augmented revenues and the accomplished savings together materially reduce the net cost. The evidences which point to these conclusions are presented in detail in the annual report of the postmaster general which with its recommendations is recommended to the consideration of the congress. The full development of this special service, however, requires such a large outlay of money that it should be undertaken only after a careful study and thorough understanding of all that it involves.

The Navy.

The recommendations of the secretary of the navy for more ships and an increase in the personnel of the navy are approved, as well as those of the establishment of a national naval reserve and suitable recognition for all officers who rendered distinguished service during the war with Spain.

Agriculture.

The department of agriculture has been extending its work during the past year, reaching farther for new varieties of seeds and plants; cooperating more fully with the states and territories in research along useful lines; making progress in meteorological work relating to lines of wireless telegraphy and forecasts for ocean-going vessels; continuing inquiry as to animal disease; looking into the extent and character of food adulteration; outlining plans for the care, preservation and intelligent harvesting of our woodlands; studying soils that producers may cultivate with better knowledge of conditions, and helping to clothe desert places with grasses suitable to our arid regions. Our island possessions are being considered that their peoples may be helped to produce the tropical products now so extensively brought into the United States. Inquiry into methods of improving our roads has been active during the year; help has been given to many localities, and scientific investigation of material in the states and territories has been inaugurated. Irrigation problems in our semi-arid regions are receiving careful and increased consideration.

Washington Celebration.

The transfer of the government to this city is a fact of great historical interest. Among the people there is a feeling of genuine pride in the capital of the republic.

The congress having provided for "an appropriate national celebration of the centennial anniversary of the establishment of the seat of government in the District of Columbia," the committees authorized by it have prepared a programme for the 12th of December, 1900, which date has been selected as the anniversary day.

Conclusion.

In our great prosperity we must guard against the danger it invites of an extravagance in government expenditures and appropriations; and the chosen representatives of the people will, I doubt not, furnish an example in their legislation of that wise economy which in a season of plenty husbands for the future.

Let us keep always in mind that the foundation of our government is liberty; its superstructure, peace.

The Chinese Almanac.

There is no work in the world of which so many copies are printed annually as of the Chinese almanac. It predicts the weather, and notes the days which are considered lucky or otherwise for commencing any undertaking, for marrying, burying, or for applying remedies to diseases. A lucky day is not necessary when Hostetter's Stomach Bitters is taken for constipation, indigestion, dyspepsia, biliousness, liver or kidney troubles. It will cure all these disorders.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases of of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

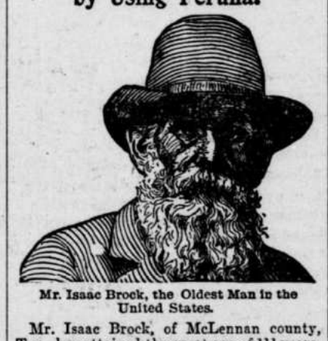
OLDEST MAN IN AMERICA

Tells How He Escaped the Terrors of Many Winters by Using Peruna.



Mr. Isaac Brock, the Oldest Man in the United States.

Mr. Isaac Brock, of McLennan county, Tex., has attained the great age of 111 years, having been born in 1788. He is an ardent friend to Peruna and speaks of it in the following terms:

"During my long life I have known a great many remedies for coughs, colds, catarrh and diarrhoea. I had always supposed these affections to be different diseases, but I have learned from Dr. Hartman's books that these affections are the same and are properly called catarrh.

"As for Dr. Hartman's remedy, Peruna, I have found it to be the best, if not the only reliable remedy for these affections.

"Peruna has been my stand-by for many years, and I attribute my good health and my extreme age to this remedy. It exactly meets all my requirements.

"I have come to rely upon it almost entirely for the many little things for which I need medicine. I believe it to be especially valuable to old people." Issac Brock.

Catarrh is the greatest enemy of old age. A person entirely free from catarrh is sure to live to a hale and hearty old age. A free book on catarrh sent by The Peruna Medicine Co., Columbus, O.

"Oh! Dear I'm so Tired."

The ordinary every-day life of most of our women is a ceaseless treadmill of work.

How much harder the daily tasks become when some derangement of the female organs makes every movement painful and keeps the nervous system all unstrung!

One day she is wretched and utterly miserable; in a day or two she is better and laughs at her fears, thinking there is nothing much the matter after all; but before night the deadly backache reappears, the limbs tremble, the lips twitch—it seems as though all the imps of Satan were clutching her vitals; she goes to pieces and is flat on her back.

No woman ought to arrive at this terrible state of misery, because these symptoms are a sure forerunner of womb troubles. She must remember that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is almost an infallible cure for all female ills, such as irregularity of periods, which cause weak stomach, sick headache, etc., displacements and inflammation of the womb, or any of the multitudes of illnesses which beset the female organism.

Mrs. Gooden wrote to Mrs. Pinkham when she was in great trouble. Her letter tells the result.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I am very grateful to you for your kindness and the interest you have taken in me, and truly believe that your medicines and advice are worth more to a woman than all the doctors in the world. My troubles began with inflammation and hemorrhages from the kidneys, then inflammation, congestion and falling of the womb, and inflammation of the ovaries. I underwent local treatment every day for some time; then, after nearly two months, the doctor gave me permission to go back to work. I went back, but in less than a week was compelled to give up and go to bed. On breaking down the second time, I decided to let doctors and medicines alone and try your remedies. Before the first bottle was gone I felt the effects of it. Three bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and a package of Sanative Wash did me more good than all the doctors' treatments and medicine. I have gained twelve pounds during the last two months and am better in every way. Thanking you for your kind advice and attention, I remain. Yours gratefully,

MRS. E. J. GOODEN.

DELANO DIARY

—Tree decoraitons at C. H. Green's.

—Dr. Niven in Delano, Dec. 17 & 18.

—Dr. Niven in Waverly Dec. 15. & 16.

—Look at Billing's new clerk in his window.

—Leave orders at C. H. Green's for Xmas trees.

—Examine Lilling's stationery before you buy elsewhere.

—Dentist Niven will be in Waverly Dec. 15 & 16 and Delano 17 & 18.

—C. H. Green's is Headquaters for Christmas trees, candies and presents.

—Messrs. Hanseman and Borrell have been at work this week on some fine shelving for the jewelry store.

—The M. E. Sunday School are arranging to have a Christmas tree as has been their custom for many years.

—Wanted customers to buy Christmas goods to make room for greater display. C. H. Green & Co.

—The cases under quarantine in the town of Franklin are said to be doing well, and no new cases seem to be developing.

—Some very large loads of hay were seen in town this week. The second corp is light, and the temptation great to put on a bulky load

—Prof. Emery Cunningham and a friend in Wis. are at work on something new in typewriters. They expect to get a patent soon.

—Drop in and see Billing's fine line of spices and extracts.

Last night at 7 o'clock a blaze was started in the Cooper residence on N. 3d St. caused by a lamp being upset. The flames were quickly extingished and no alarm was turned in.

—A party held at the I. O. O. F Hall in honor of Miss Murphy Monday evening was well enjoyed. Several pleasant parties have been held the past week and pleasant evenings spent.

—Frank Gunsoir, who was caught carrying George P. Schaffer's goods away in the night, plead guilty at Buffalo this week and was sentenced to five years in penetentiary. Mrs. G. was released.

—It is rumored that a raffle has been suggested as a means of raising money for a public school's use, in this vicinity. That may be an easy way of procuring money; but the moral effect would hardly be elevating to the riasing generation.

—Warren Merriman's dog followed him down town Tuesday morning and undertook to cross the track while the train was running. He had his leg so badly mangled that the Marshal soon after came along and shot him, to get him out of misery.

The Epworth League had a business meeting Monday evening after transacting very important business adjoined till Dec, 17 at Miss Cunningham's All Epworth Leaguers are requested to be present at this meeting as there is some more very important matters to look after.

—A good plan is to present your bills at the end of every month, and have a settlement. Then debts never get large nor so old that you forget what they were for. For newspapers the nicest way is to pay a year in advance. Then you feel that you are reading your own news.

—For the best candies and fruits go to Billing's.

-How nice it would be to begin the 20th century out of debt. If every one would do his best to pay up all the little, pesky debts that have been standing so long it would go far towards getting our community free from debt. Most people have more coming than they owe; so if they could but collect, they could pay, and have some thing over. Let every one go at it with a determination to get out of debt and have a years subscribtion to the GAZETTE paid in advance when January 1 comes.

Thanksgiving Wedding.

A very pretty wedding took place at 5 o'clock Thanksgiving afternoon, at the home of Mr. and Mrs John Rader in Lyndale, when their daughter Ada and Guy Halgren, of Watertown, were married. Rev. J. R. Davies was the officiating clergyman. Only near relatives participated.

The bride wore white mull over dilicate pink silk and carried bride roses. She was attended by Miss Murray of Minneapolis and Miss Kohler of Watertown. The groom was attended by his brother Dr. Halgren, and the bride's brother Marion. A wedding march from Mendelssohn was played while the party advanced and stood under a beautiful canopy of lace which was festooned with ivy and roses.

The impressive ring service of the Methodist Church was read. The attractiveness of the ceremoney was enhansed by an artistically decorated Acetylene jet in the rear. Profusions of flowers and evergreens through the rooms lent their charms. At 6 o'clock a bounteous wedding dinner was served. The table was decorated with evergreens and American beauty roses. The young couple were the recipients of many beautiful presents. Friday Mr. and Mrs. Halgren went to Minneapolis and will be at home in Watertown After December 10th. K. G.

To Build Paper Mills.

NEW YORK, Special, Dec. 3.—Officials of the International Paper company have no information in regard to the report from Milwaukee that local capitalists might build six paper mills at St. Paul and elsewhere to have a daily output of 210 tons. They are not worrying over the reputed reports of opposition in the trade, but are attending strictly to the legitimate business of the company. This business they say is quite satisfactory.—Pioneer Press.

YOUNG SOLDIERS.

Oh, were you ne'er a school boy,
And did you never train,
And feel that swelling of the heart
You ne'er can feel again?

Did you never meet, far down the street
With plumes and banners gay,
While the kettle, for the kettle drum,
Played your march, march away?

It seems to me but yesterday,
Nor scarce so long ago,
Since all the school their muskets took
To charge the fearful foe.

Our muskets were of cedar wood,
With ramrods bright and new,
With bayonets forever set,
And painted barrels too.

We charged upon a flock of geese,
And put them all to flight,
Except one sturdy gander
That thought to show us fight.

But ah! We knew a thing or two;
Our captain wheeled the van:
We routed him, we scouted him,
Nor lost a single man!

Our captain was as brave a lad
As e'er commission bore,
And brightly shone his new tin sword
A paper cap he wore.

He led us up the steep hillside.
Against the west'ring wind.
While the cockerel plume that decked his head
Streamed bravely out behind.

We shouldered arms, We carried arms,
We charged the bayonet;
And woe unto that mullen stalk
That in our course we met!

At two o'clock the roll we called,
And till the close of day,
With fearless hearts, though tired limbs
We fought the mimic fray
Till the supper bell, from out the dell,
Bade us "march, march away."

—H. F. Farney

St. Peter Free Press: If reports be true that our government has requested Great Britain either to expel the Filipino junta at Hong Kong or treat its members as conspirators against a friendly nation, it has certainly taken a step not exactly in conformity with that spirit of political freedom always conceded by England and also by the United States, It has been one of the fundamental principlas of both countries never to refuse a protecting asylum to political fugitives and it is to be hoped that this time honored custom will not be disturbed by this country in consequence of half a dozen annoying Filipinos in China Such a step would mean the surrender of a principle dear to every true American and should be carefully avoided.

The men who are now engaged in an agitation for a reorganization of the democratic party are not the men who will accomplish their designs in that direction The rank and file of the democratic party will not be content to follow men of the Cleveland Whitney Dickinson strine of exploiters of the people While Mr. Bryan has been defeated twice for president, he stands today the strongest character in American politics, and against all the evils which beset the nation. The people will not permit him to be removed from the active and prominent place he has occupied in the democratic party nor will they permit themselves to be led by men who have been instrumental in encompassing its defeat. Mr. Bryan has given it out that he will continue with mouth and pen to do in the future as he has in the past. He will carry on the warfare against the enemies of the common people.—Broad Axe.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Regular Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, D. C. Nov., 30. 1900

The brewers are after their pound of flesh and say they are going to have it or know the reason why. They made a personal appeal to Mr. McKinley for the reduction of the tax on beer, but that gentleman had no idea of handling anything carrying so much political dynamite, so he passed the question along to the republican members of the House Ways and Means committee, and they turned the brewers down. Then the brewers announced their intention to carry the fight on to the floor of Congress, and some of them hint at the exposure of some campaign secrets if pledges made to them that there should be a reduction in the beer tax are not redeemed. It is said that a sufficient number of republican Senators and Representatives gave their personal pledges to brewers for campaign assistance to force the insertion of a clause reducing the beer tax in the bill that will be reported from the Ways and Means Committee, if they an be made to stand up and demand it of their party associates, and this the brewers say they can and will do. There may be some lively times in Congress before this bill is disposed of.

Tom Reed made his debut a lobbyist this week, but he did it openly, not sneakingly as so many ex-members do. He said that he came to Washington in behalf of clients to find out what reductions the committee on Ways and Means intended making, and it is presumed he found out, although the public has not yet done so with any degree of accuracy.

As the number of Senators and Representatives in Washington increases it becomes more apparent that there is serious republican opposition to the Hanna-Payne ship subsidy bill. A few republicans oppose the bill on general principles, but the most of the opposition appears to be to the present shape of the bill—its marked favoritism toward a class of ship owners. Whether this opposition is strong enough to endanger the passage of the bill, is as yet doubtful. It may be, but it is more likely that some of the republicans who are talking doubtfully about the bill can be easily "placated" by the President, who wishes the bill passed, and that others can be whipped into line by the declaration of a party caucus in favor of the bill. Still, there is enough uncertainty about it to cause uneasiness among those who are personally interested in the measure. Representative Burton, of Ohio, chairman of the House committee on Rivers and Harbors, who has been threatened with political death by Boss Hanna because he announced his opposition to the ship subsidy bill, said on the subject: "I am dead against the principle involved in the bill. It has never been endorsed in party caucus, and the party is not committed to its passage for the reason that the national platform does not endorse the bill. I contend that the object of this measure is not to upbuild the merchant marine of the U. S, and I do not favor the bill. I have nothing to say as to Mr. Hanna's opposing the River and Harbor bill. I do not believe he will do anything of the kind." Ohio democrats are delighted with the prospect of a bitter fight between Hanna and Burton, and say that it will make the state democratic if fought to a finish, as now threatened.

Representative Cannon, of Ill., will become an active candidate against Senator Cullom if he can get the assurance of the administration that it will keep its hands off. Mr. Cullom's friends are claiming that Mr. McKinley is already committed to assist him in his fight for re-election.

Gen. Charles P. Eagan, of embalmed beef notoriety, is in Washington seeking a pardon and restoration to duty. He wants vindication, which is a little cheeky, in view of the general opinion of the public that his sentence to suspension for six years with full pay-$7,500 a year- and allowances, was more than lenient. Some time ago an offer was made to restore Eagan to duty if he would immediately apply for retirement, but he declined because his pay on the retired list would be only $5,625 a year. Under the law he will not reach the age of compulsory retirement until January 16, 1905, but there is talk of getting a bill through Congress authorizing the President to place upon the retired list any officer in the army, navy, or marine corps under suspension for a longer period than one year. It is said that Mr. McKinley has promised to restore Eagan to duty.

The death of Senator Davis, of Minnesota, is sincerely mourned by his colleagues regardless of party. As Senator Martin, of Va., truly said of him: "In the Senate his opinion was as highly regarded by the minority as by his own party." As chairman of the committee on Foreign Relations, Senators Davis personally drew up the declaration of war against Spain which Congress adopted and later as one of the Peace Commissioners he helped to negotiate the treaty of peace with Spain. The appointment of a successor to serve until the legislature of Minnesota fills the vacancy is in the hands of Gov. Lind, but is is not known in Washington whether he will appoint a democrat or a republican, although some think that the honor may go to ex-Representative Charles A. Town. The legislature will, of course, elect a republican in January. The same legislature will also elect a successor to Senator Nelson, who is willing to succeed himself. This will add another to the unusual number of legislatures that will elect two U. S Senators at the same session.

The Irl R. Hicks 1901 Almanac

Whatever may be said of the scientific causes upon which the Rev. Irl R. Hicks bases his yearly forecasts of strom and weather, it is a remarkable fact that specific warnings of every great storm, flood, cold wave and drouth, have been plainly printed in his famous Almanac for many years The latest startling proof of this fact was the destruction of Galveston, Texas, on the very day named by Prof Hicks in his 1900 Almanac, as one of disaster by storm along the gulf coasts. The 1901 Almanac, by far the finest, most complete and beautiful yet published, is now ready. This remarkable book of near two hundred pages, splendidly illustrated with charts and half-ton engravings, goes as a premium to every subscriber who pays one dollar a year for Hicks' journal, WORD AND WORKS. The Almanac alone is sent prepaid for only 25c.

THE COMING MAN.

Oh, not for the great departed
Who framed our country's laws,
And not for the bravest-hearted
Who died in freedom's cause,
And not for some living hero
To whom all bend the knee,
My muse would raise her song of praise—
But for the man to be.

For out of the strife which woman
Is passing through today
A man that is more than human
Shall yet be born, I say.
A man in whose pure spirit
No dross of self will lurk:
A man who is strong to cope with wrong,
A man who is proud to work.

A man with hope undaunted,
A man when God-like power,
Shall come with the most wanted,
Shall come at the needed hour,
He shall silence the din and clamor
Of clan disputing with clan,
And toil's long fight with purse-proud might
Shall triumph through the man.

I know he is coming, coming,
To help, to guide, to save.
Though I hear no martial drumming
And see no flags that wave.
But the great soul-travail of woman
And the bold free thought unfurled,
Are heralds that say he is on the way—
The coming man of the world.

Mourn not for vanished ages,
With their great heroic men,
Who dwell in history's pages,
And live in the poet's pen
For the grandest times are before us,
And the world is yet to see
The noblest worth of this old earth
In the men (and women) that are to be

ELLA WHEELER WILCOX.

CHARLES A. TOWNE, of Minnesota, is reported to have taken his seat in the United State Senate with as much dignity as any other man there. Why not?

BANKS are beginning to consolidate and lessen expenses. The Nicollet National Bank and the First National Bank, of Minneapolis are to be one hereafter. It is clamed that besides reducing expences the number of banks will be less, therefore there will not be so much competition in the business. Surely prosperity must be coming in the banking business.

ATTENTION is being called to the fact that the heroes of our late and present wars do not keep their place as first class heroes long. Most of them gain notoriety by one or two acts. They were proclaimed heroes and when they came home the one act was not suficient to keep up their reputation.

Dewey took Manila bay. He was proclamed a hero. He said the Filipinoes are better able to govern themselves than the Cubans are. He couldn't have his way. He came home as a hero, never-the-less. People paid their pennies to show the amount of their appreciation. But they wouldn't make him president. Now the money raised to build the permanent Dewey Arch, is being refunded. Sampson is said to be dying of a broken heart because of lack of appreciation of his efforts in the capture of Cevera's fleet. Hobson sunk the Merrimac and became a hero. He came home and kissed some girls and was set down as silly. General William Tecumseh Sherman marched to the sea; and came home and kissed the ladies and even little girls, and it didn't seem to detract from his honors. Shafter and Roosevelt and others have not hung their laurals very securely. Otis' expression "We have got them well in hand" has become a bye word the country over and nobody suggests making him president. It must be that the American people have tired of war and while recognizing heroic acts, no longer purpose everlasting bowing down at the shrine of every man who wears a sword.

SOME of our republican newspapers are quelt evidently much interested in having D. B. Hill's name come up as a candidate for president in 1904. In fact there are, some of them at work at it, so soon, after the late election. The democrats will probably pick out their own candidate for president, along about the time to nominate.

IF the reports of the Hazing of Oscar Booz, of Bristol Pa., by his fellow students at West Point, causing injuries resulting in his death, and the refusal of Colonel Mills to discipline the cadets for the reason that he "was only put to the customary test of manliness" are true, it shows a state of affairs not consistent with the ideas of a peacable and peace loving nation. This kind of reports goes a long ways towards justifying the powers that be, in giving the higher military positions to men not brought up to such severe tests of manliness. If our country is to maintain, at public expense, a school for training soldiers, such school should turn out men capable and deserving to be leaders of our armies in time of need, and should be given the places. The Booz affair needs investigation, and setting right before the people.

The Pekin Legation.

The article in the Cosmopolitan for December, by Sir Robert Hart who for twenty five years has been as far as European might, the guide in affairs of China, and who was with others lately relieved from the perilous situation in Pekin deserves to be read by all Americans.

He says as long ago as September, 1898, the coming Boxer movement began to develope. But it came so suddenly, when it was ready as to be a complete surprise.

"For years China has discountenanced the military spirit and was laughed at by us accordingly," we advised them to learn how to defend themselves against all comers. They took our advice. They have learned war to quite an extent and armed a portion of their people with modern weapons. Sir Robert says leading Boxers "eminent in their own country for their learning and services—were animated by patriotism, were enraged at foreign dictation, and had the courage of their convictions. We must do them the justice of allowing they were actuated by high motives and love of country; but that does not always or necessarily mean political ability or highest wisdom."

"That it was patriotic in its origin and justifiable in much that it aimed at, cannot be questioned, and cannot be too much insisted on, but like other popular organizations its formidable developement and widespread growth made it more likely to lead than to follow, while the claims of the initiated to something like supernatural powers in the matters of movement and invulnerability, exhibited first before Prince Tuan and then before Emperor and Empress Dowager, won for it a standing and respect which placed it on a plane of its own and went far towards giving it a free hand for its operations. Something akin to hypnotism or mesmerism seems connected with Boxer initiation and action."

A good accouut of the siege of the legations in Pekin is given. Sir Robert says: What has happened has been the logical effect of previous doings. Europe has not been ungenerous in her treatment of China, but even so, has wounded her;" He predicts: "but foreigners dictation must some day cease and foreigners some day go, and the episode now called attention to is today's hint to the future."

THE figures given of results of Arsenical poisoning fron cheap adulterated beer in England, to December 13 were. Number of cases of illness 3000. Deaths 60 to 100. Deaths last week 5. Beer dumped into the streets 25000 barrels. Affected samples of glucose found, 6. Affected samples of American glucose, 0. Millions of beer drinkers are said to have changed onto other drinks from the fright, reducing the sale of beer very materially.

ARCHBISHOP IRELAND is quoted as having predicted the restoration of temporal power to the Pope. He Says:

"Things change rapidly in the affairs of men. Things change rapidly in the policies of Europe. Things may change rapidly in the sentiment of the Italian people.

"We may not be accounted wrong if we wait and hope that a period not so remote the Italian people and Christendom at large will remember more vividly than they seem to do today, the rights of God's church and the rights of its papacy and will give back to the papacy its wanted dignity and liberty."

CONGRESS will be obliged to get right down to business during the present term in order to consider the many points of importance referred to by the President in his message. If our "commercial interests" continue to develope at the rate lately assumed by them it may be necessary to start a branch Congress, some where on the Pacific coast of which we now have so much, to deal with ship subsidies, import and export duties, trusts, and other home and foreign relations. This might kind of take the business out of politics in the eyes of the "conmercialists" of the country.

Humilating.

It is certainly humilating enough for the Government of Great Britain to have to listen to the charges of cruelty to the Boers; to have the Spanish General Weyler tell them that they are more cruel than he was with the Cubans. A great nation that boasts as England that her navy is the largest in the world; and that the sun never sets on her dominion; that poses as a civilizer of nations, must indeed feel, when taunted with injustice and unnecessary cruelty to the people of small republics like the Transvaal and Orange Free State terribly humilated. But then, how must the United States feel when it learns that as an excuse for the cruelty, the English Government leader, Arthur Balfour "read from a copy of the United States Official Regulations for the Guidance of Troops in Guerilla Warfare; two rules fully justifying the burning of farms and other severities practised by the British against the Boers."

Has it come to this that the United States, the land of the free, and the home of the brave, is to be held up as a shield to hide behind to commit cruelties severe enough to call down the condemnation of General Weyler? We have been taught all our lives that the United States was a peace loving country. A country where the oppressed of every nation could find an asylum, a refuge from persecution. But it looks now as if instead of opening our arms to the liberty loving we are engaged in seeking them in their own lands, and burning up their homes. Let us reform. Let us not be pointed at as the example of cruelty. Let Nero alone with his crown of infamy.

Senator Towne.

The appointment of Hon. C. A. Towne as Senator from Minnesota, seams to have met the approval of almost everybody, regardless of politics. Here is what some of the papers have to say:

As to the appointment of Mr. Towne it can be truthfully said that he is a man of ability and eminently qualified for the position.—St. Peter Free Press.

Mr. Towne is a brillant man and will honor the position.—Litchfield Independent.

The Leader was extremely glad to learn of Mr. Towne's appointment and the only mistake Gov. Lind made is that he did not name Towne in the first place, instead of offering it to Judge Collins, or any other Republican, as was done. Long Prairie Leader.

The appointment of Chas. A. Towne by Governor Lind to succeed the late Senator Cushman K. Davis will have the hearty approval of a large number of Mr. Towne's friends in Streans county.—Saint Cloud Times.

Yesterday Governor Lind rewarded his fellow renegade, Charles Towne with the office recently filled by Senator Davis.—Anoka Herald.

St. Clould Times: The senatorship for a few weeks may not be a pittance after all. The United States has a liberal way of dealing with such appointees, by giving a full year's salary, if they are only in the seat a few days. That amounts to $5000, and there are a number of perquisities which every senator gets, without regard to his length of service, such as stationary allowance, clerk hire and such incidentals. Any senator appointed by Lind could travel to Washington, draw his salary and perquisities appropriate mileage both ways, 2,400 miles at the rate of 15 cents a mile, and come very near to being even on the deal

Gov. Lind has appointed Hon. Chas A. Towne, to succeed Senator Davis in the United States senate. Good enough.—Waseca Herald.

The appointment gives general satisfaction in the state.—Wright County Times.

WASHINGTON, D. C. DEC 11.—Senator Towne has been appointed to several most important committees and to some where he will feel thoroughly at home, as on the mines and Indian committees.

Mr. Cockrell, of Missouri, presented an order today which was at once ratified appointing the new senator to the vacancies on the committees of the District of Columbia, geological survey, Indian affairs, mines and mining, and Pacific Islands, territories and railroads.

Senator Towne is well pleased with the appointments.

One of the senator's law partners, Judge S. H. Moer, was admitted to pratice before the supreme court today and another Duluth lawyer, H. H. Hoyt, was also admitted.

HUDDERSFIELD'S SURPRISING BARGAINS

THE love of picking up bargains is common to the human race. A bargain appeals to the instinct of economy, and that is also common to all men, although it may often be dominated by a love of profusion, an indolence of character or a desire to flaunt a superabundance of wealth in the eyes of a supposedly admiring world. It flatters a man's sense of superiority. He has not only got the better of the seller by reason of his knowledge, diplomatically concealed, of the value of the article sold, but he can also chuckle in his sleeve at the less acute public who pay three times the price for the same thing. Huddersfield has the bargain habit to an abnormal extent.

It extends to everything. It Huddersfield meets an old friend and wishes to entertain him en garcon he very seldom takes him to dine at the club. He says: "Say, old man, I'll tell you what I'm going to do with you. I'm going to take you to a little out-of-the-way joint where we can get some consomme souveraine and larded tenderloin au madere or something like that that you will remember as long as you live, with a bottle of wine that you can't get in the cellar of the Astorf-Waldoria." Then he rushes the friend to a street car and presently, after traversing two or three mean streets and one or two alleys that make the friend feel extremely nervous, they arrive at a dingy restaurant whose badly illuminated and dusty sign announces that it is the cafe something or other, but whose external appearance otherwise would lead one to suppose that it was a gospel mission poorly supported on an off night.

Inside there are half a dozen tables extending to a sort of box office through the window of which a view of the kitchen can be obtained. Three men with soiled shirts and a great deal of throat and anarchistic beards are smoking cigarettes at one of the tables and throwing out their fingers excitedly at one another as they gabble in a strange tongue. A gaunt and depressed-looking woman pensively stabbing a roll with a three-tined steel fork is the only other patron of the establishment present. Huddersfield and the friend take their places at the table which seems to have the cleanest cloth. There is verdigris on the top of the salt cruet and a dark brown crust of undoubted antiquity ornaments the mustard pot.

"A little bohemian," says Huddersfield, rubbing his hands briskly and looking around with a smile. "It is just what I like. A man who gets in the habit of judging by appearances misses lots of good things in this world of ours."

"Does it always smell so?" asks the friend.

"Smell how?"

"Well, I don't know whether I can analyze it exactly"—sniffing—"but I should say that the garlic is unmistakable. I think I can detect wet clothes and yeast, but it may be the cigarettes."

"You wait until you get your dinner," says Huddersfield, "and in the meantime watch those fellows over there. There's a sight you wouldn't see in Binsley's in 100 years. Life—that's what you see here; life and human nature. I like to observe it."

By this time a dark-eyed waiter who has neglected to shave for several days appears and takes Huddersfield's order and spreads a coarse napkin over the worst stain in the cloth. This done, he vanishes into the kitchen and is heard to shout fiercely at the cooks, who scream at him in return and seemingly begin to smash dishes.

"They've got a cook in here who could be earning his $250 a month downtown if he only knew it," says Huddersfield, removing a left-over crust that the waiter had not noticed. "If this place was known by people who could appreciate it half the block wouldn't be enough for the custom."

There is a rather long wait and in the interval a stout man afflicted with catarrh comes in and takes a seat at a table close by. Huddersfield notices a smoky picture in a much flyblown frame hanging in a dark corner of the room and, scenting a bargain, gets up to inspect it. But it turns out to be nothing but an oleograph. The dinner comes in and really is not so villainous a dinner as might be expected, although somewhat permeated with garlic and decidedly greasy. The wine is merely drinkable, and it is likely that Huddersfield was right in saying that it could not be obtained at the Astorf-Waldoria. Huddersfield expands over the wine, holds it up to the light and looks at it knowingly out of one eye, sips it slowly and pauses between sips with both eyes turned up ecstatically. The friend tries to be enthusiastic over it, too, but he has not yet recovered from the thumbmarks that the waiter left on the edges of the plates. They finish up with long stogie-looking cigars with straws run through them for the improvement of the draft. It really improves the flavor of the cigar as well. When the check comes Huddersfield exhibits it triumphantly.

"You couldn't get a dinner like that downtown for four times the money," he says.

"I don't believe you could get one like it at any price," says the friend, with evident sincerity, and Huddersfield makes up his mind that he is a man of fine discrimination. When the friend gets back to his hotel he sends out for some dyspepsia tablets, but he acquits Huddersfield of meanness, for he knows that he could have dined decently and in a decent place for two-thirds of the charge, not counting the street car fares.

Huddersfield's house is jammed full of bargains. He has a Chinese chest of camphor-wood in the hall that looks like an immigrant's trunk. His laundryman had not the faintest conception of the value of the thing from an artistic point of view, and allowed him to take it for $15, but a bargain hunter has absolutely no shame and would just as soon take advantage of a confiding and innocent Chinaman as not. Not very long after the sale of the camphor-wood chest, which the janitor contends is plain deal and wormy at that, Huddersfield discovered a lovely little cloisonne vase on a shelf just over Hop Sing's ironing table beneath the shrine of the God of Most Happy Destiny and he was conscienceless enough to buy that vase for five dollars.

Since that time several other little articles of bric-a-brac have been seen carelessly scattered around Hop Sing's laundry, but Huddersfield has bought none of them since Burkholder rubbed the bottom of the cloisonne and deciphered the stamped legend: "Made in Germany."

But, as Huddersfield says, anyone is likely to get fooled once in awhile and the fact that the fifteenth century Florentine intaglio that he stumbled on by accident in a pawnbroker's shop on the West side was duplicated in a shop in the Palais Royal by a friend who has returned from Paris did not discourage him. He has found a beautiful specimen of Flemish wood carving, for which he thought at the time he paid almost what it was worth, to have been stamped by steam at Racine, Wis., and that did not dampen his ardor. His cigar bargain, however, left a deep and lasting effect on him.

Wasserman was over at Huddersfield's house one evening. Huddersfield dived into his chiffonier and brought out a handful of cigars and threw them on the table. At first Wasserman was a little suspicious. He said he had a few cigars of his own in his pocket and was a creature of habit in the matter of tobacco, but Huddersfield insisted and he lit one of the handful.

After the first few puffs Wasserman's face assumed an expression of surprise, and he looked at the cigar respectfully. Another whiff or two and he said in a startled tone: "This is really a mighty good cigar, Huddersfield; where did you get it?"

Huddersfield smiled complacently and leaned back in his chair with his thumbs in the armholes of his waistcoat. "Why, I'll tell you," he said. "I got those cigars at a bargain—stumbled on them quite by accident. It was in a little out-of-the-way cigar stand away over on the South side. I stepped in there to get a cigar—never dreamed of getting anything fit to smoke, but I had to have something. The proprietor was an old chap who acted as if he was half baked, too.

"Well, I was looking over the show cases and I saw a box away over in the corner that looked as if it hadn't been tapped much and I thought I'd try one of them on suspicion. It was a little dry, but I knew at the first draw that it was the right stuff.

"'We don't sell many of them there,' says the old man; 'they don't seem to suit our trade. I guess I got stuck on them.'

"'A little rank, but it makes smoke.' I said: 'What will you make me these by the hundred? I pointed to another kind, of course. I wasn't going to let on that I wanted the one I was smoking. He made me a figure and then I priced something else and went on until I came to the corner box, and in a casual way asked the price of them. He said he would sell me a hundred for $3.50. and I took him up. That's the second box you're smoking now."

"Well,' I swan!" exclaimed Wasserman. "That was one time you did strike it. It's a pity he hadn't more of them."

"As for that," returned Huddersfield, "I guess I can get all I want of them. I guess the old boy has got 3,000 or 4,000 of them in his cellar. I'd have taken the lot, but I'm pretty well stocked up with some Havanas my wife's brother got for me. He's an importer and ought to know a good cigar, but I don't like his as well as my $3.50 ones and I guess they stand me in something like $12 wholesale."

"I don't suppose you'd care to give me a chance at them?" asked Wasserman, "I don't know when I smoked anything that suited me better and I flatter myself I know a good cigar."

Huddersfield said he would be delighted and he really was. Here was one time that his bargain was appreciated. Wasserman asked if a thousand would be hitting him too hard; he replied "certainly not, my boy," and took Wasserman's $35 with enthusiasm and when he went away insisted that he should put some of the cigars in his pocket. Later he discovered that he had dipped into the wrong box and that he had engaged to deliver his brother-in-law's $120 Havanas.

He did it, but when Wasserman asked for another thousand he told him that somebody had come along and bought the old man out. Wasserman knows that he lied when he said so and has never liked him very well since.—Chicago Daily Record.

The practice was taken up by the other colonies and during the revolution was introduced in a number of the middle states, since then extending to all states and being a regular national holiday since 1863.

It is believed by the engineers who are repairing the Galveston-Mexico cable, which was broken by the Galveston hurricane, that the storm was accompanied by a submarine eruption. The evidence of this eruption is found in the twisted condition of the cable. The sheathing is found to have been reversed and the wires binding it to the core turned the wrong way.

Just previous to the recent election a Tennessee editor ventured on a forecast of coming events and invited his readers to watch the result and see how far he missed. In his latest issue he manfully owned up as follows: "We are now able to state we missed it by exactly the space between the Atlantic and Pacific oceans east and west and from the great lakes to the Gulf of Mexico north and south."

The recent loss of the cruiser Yosemite during the typhoon at Guam was fortunately not attended with heavy loss of life. It means one ship less, and a very efficient ship she was, even though she was nothing more than a merchant steamer converted into an auxiliary cruiser. Oriental waters seem to be extraordinarily dangerous to American ships. First the Charleston was wrecked, then the Oregon narrowly escaped destruction, and now the Yosemite is a total loss.

A two-story street is now being planned for crowded London. It is proposed to have an elevated iron sidewalk directly above the ordinary walk, and at street corners light steel bridges will provide passageways from one side to another, while at every other street corner there will be stairways, and the shops along the street can have show windows and entrances on the second floor as well as the first. The idea is credited to Charles Dickens, who suggested such a plan as far back as 1864.

Great Britain and Ireland, with a population of 40,000,000, cast only 4,316,703 votes at the recent parliamentary election. As compared with the vote of some 15,000,000 in this country this would seem to indicate an apathetic feeling, but in reality it was not so much apathy as the very conservative suffrage laws that kept the vote down. The ruling classes in England have not yet reached the point where they will fully trust the common people to participate in the government.

The census shows some queer things about Texas. For instance, Bailey county has but four residents, Cockran has 25, Andrews 37, Lynn 17, Dawson 36. Twenty-five others have less than 500. Some counties have no running stream within their borders, some are hundreds of miles from a railroad and others are almost wholly inhabited by prairie dogs, jackrabbits and rattlesnakes. Tom Green county, the largest in the state, has 45,000 square miles, which is larger than the whole state of Ohio, and has but 6,804 inhabitants. Great state.

Whether Mr. Kruger's reception in France has any political significance and results or not, it furnishes a picturesque page in history. It is a remarkable experience for an old man who has spent most of his life in trekking and fighting savages in South Africa to find himself suddenly lionized by one of the greatest nations and most cultured peoples in the world. Of course the animus of the whole business, as far as the French are concerned, is plain enough, but that does not lessen the contrast between Oom Paul's former occupations and his present position.

They have woman suffrage out in Wyoming, and one recent candidate has learned that to his cost. A bad "break" caused his defeat. He is John Thompson, and he ran for representative in congress. In an evil hour he made a public statement that the woman vote was the easiest to get, the easiest to keep and the easiest to manipulate. These words ran like wildfire among the women voters of the state, and so exasperated them that they turned out en masse on election day and cast their ballots against Thompson and he was defeated.

KRUGER ASKS AN AUDIENCE.

Would Discuss Terms of Settlement with Salisbury—Received by Wilhelmina.

London, Dec. 10.—Lord Salisbury has received from Paul Kruger at The Hague a request for a conference for the discussion of terms of settlement of the war between Great Britain and the Transvaal. Strenuous efforts were made by the premier to prevent the fact that Mr. Kruger had asked an interview from becoming public, but it quickly became known in court circles and soon was common property throughout London.

The Hague, Dec. 10.—Queen Wilhelmina received Mr. Kruger in audience Saturday. As the Boer statesman was traveling incognito the visit was not attended by the ceremony usually paid to a chief of state. A court official proceeded to his hotel and accompanied Mr. Kruger to the royal palace in a state carriage. Dr. Leyds received Mr. Kruger at the door of the palace, but was not present at the audience.

The visit lasted a quarter of an hour. The queen, queen's mother and Mr. Kruger alone were present. The latter thanked the queen for placing the cruiser Gelderland at his disposal. According to court attendants who were present at the meeting of Mr. Kruger and Holland's sovereign, Wilhelmina gave the exile no hope of immediate help. She is quoted as having said: "Have confidence in God, who will protect you and yours. I will show my friendship when the time arrives, but not now."

The Hague, Dec. 10.—President Kruger has been refused aid by the power upon which he placed his last hope. The czar of Russia wrote to inform the Boer leader in the most delicate yet unmistakable manner that recent ill-health made it impossible for him to interfere in any way in the Transvaal affairs. He expressed the highest esteem for Kruger and the sincerity of his purpose, but let it be understood that beyond that he could not go. The message from the czar was received by the old chieftain last Friday, and he felt the blow so keenly that the matter was kept as secret as possible.

The Hage, Dec. 10.—The government of the Netherlands has instructed the Dutch minister in London, Baron Van Goltstein van Oldenaller, to disavow in the name of the government all responsibility for the letter addressed to Mr. Kruger by the president of the first chamber of the states general, Dr. A. Van Naamen van Fomnes, approving his "noble purpose" and expressing a hope that the independence of the two Dutch republics would be secured.

OLD OFFICERS REELECTED.

The Woman's Christian Temperance Union Makes No Changes in Its Leaders.

Washington, Dec. 7.—At the morning session of the W. C. T. U. convention the old officers were reelected as follows:

President—Mrs. L. M. N. Stevens.

Vice president at large—Anna A. Gordon.

Corresponding secretary—Mrs. Susanna M. D. Fry.

Recording secretary—Mrs. Clara C. Hoffman.

Assistant recording secretary — Mrs. Frances E. Beauchamp.

Treasurer—Mrs. Helen M. Barker.

The convention adopted resolutions pledging renewed royalty to the W. C. T. U., acknowledging the guiding hand of God in its work and thanking Him for the victory in the exclusion of Brigham H. Roberts from the house of representatives; favoring the total suppression of the liquor traffic; opposing the army canteen; urging the enfranchisement of women; expressing sympathy with organized labor in its just demands for a living wage, an eight-hour day, the prohibition of child labor and in all wise efforts for justice and freedom; urging adoption of laws to secure purity in man as well as woman, and protesting against the government regulating vice in any form in the Philippines instead of suppressing it.

A FUNERAL SHIP.

Transport Hancock Arrives from the Philippines with Bodies of 1,500 Soldiers and Sailors.

San Francisco, Dec. 11.—The transport Hancock arrived Monday from Manila via Nagasaki with a grewsome cargo. It consisted of the bodies of about 1,500 sailors and soldiers who either died in battle or succumbed to the ravages of disease in the Philippines, China, Guam and Honolulu. This is the largest number of bodies brought home since the outbreak of the Spanish-American war. The Hancock will likely remain in quarantine a few days. The bodies will be conveyed to the Presdio and placed in the buildings there pending interment or shipment to the homes of relatives.

Final Test of Strength.

London, Dec. 11.—Operating within a triangle formed by two swollen rivers of the Basutoland border, Gen. De Wet continues to baffle the tenacious Gen. Knox. The Boer generals are fighting, trekking and dodging the British leader's grim, steady and sleepless pursuit. One of the finest stories of the Boer war is being enacted, and all England impatiently awaits the results. Rumor reports that De Wet and Knox are grappling in a final test of strength somewhere between the Caledon and Orange rivers.

Mrs. Dewey a Millionaire.

Washington, Dec. 11.—By the death of her mother, Mrs. Washington McLean, Admiral Dewey's wife has become a millionaire. Mrs. Dewey's mother died suddenly Sunday morning and leaves an estate valued at about $2,000,000 to be divided among three children—Mrs. Dewey, her sister, Mrs. Dudlow, and John R. McLean, proprietor of the Cincinnati Enquirer.

Gold Badge for Mrs. McKinley.

Washington, Dec. 10.—President De Young and Thomas F. Walsh, of the Paris exposition commission, called upon President McKinley and presented him a gold badge on behalf of the commission, to be handed to Mrs. McKinley with their compliments.

To Herd Boers.

Johannesburg, Dec. 8.—In pursuance of the reconcentrado policy the authorities here are preparing accommodation on the race course for 4,000 people from farms in the vicinity of the Rand. The burghers will be herded in a laager and will be strictly watched.

ANTI-CANTEEN LAW PASSED.

House Adopts the Measure by Good Majority—Tax on Oleomargarine Raised.

Washington, Dec. 7.—The house of representatives, at the end of a long sitting, passed the army reorganization bill by a vote of 166 to 133. Three democrats, Messrs. Hall (Pa.) and Underhill and Clayton (N. Y.), voted with the republicans for the bill, and Mr. McCall (rep., Mass.) with the democrats against it. Otherwise it was a strict party vote. The proposition which some of the democrats attempted to commit their side to in caucus, an extension of the present temporary army until July 1, 1903, which was voted upon indirectly on a motion to recommit, commanded the votes of only about half the opposition and of two republicans, Mr. McCall and Mr. Mann (Ill). Many of the democrats, however, voted against the motion because they were apposed not only to the reorganization bill, but also to continuing the temporary army at its present strength.

Quite a number of amendments were placed upon the bill before it was passed. The liveliest fight was made upon a substitute offered by Mr. Littlefield (Me.), for the canteen section. The substitute absolutely prohibited the sale of intoxicants at military posts.

Washington, Dec. 8.—The house on Friday passed the Grout oleomargarine bill by a vote of 198 to 92. The substitute offered by the minority of the committee on agriculture, which imposed additional restrictions on the sale of oleomargarine to prevent its fraudulent sale as butter and increased the penalties for violators, was defeated by a vote of 113 to 178.

The bill as passed makes all articles known as oleomargarine, butterine, imitation butter or imitation cheese transported into any state or territory for consumption or sale subject to the police power of such state or territory, but prevents any state or territory from forbidding the transportation or sale of such product when produced and sold free from coloration in imitation of butter. The bill increases the tax on oleomargarine colored in imitation of butter from two to ten cents per pound, and decreases the tax on oleomargarine, uncolored, from two cents to one-quarter of a cent per pound.

Washington, Dec. 8.—The developments in the senate in executive session Friday in connection with the Hay-Pauncefote treaty were: An agreement on the part of the senate to vote on the amendment offered by the committee on foreign relations providing for the policing of the canal on next Thursday at three o'clock. An amendment was offered by Senator Teller striking out the treaty prohibition against the fortification of the Nicaragua canal when constructed; the conclusion of Senator Morgan's speech; a speech by Senator Teller in opposition to the treaty.

TRADE REVIEW.

While There Is Little Excitement in Commercial Lines, a Confident Undertone Exists.

New York, Dec. 8.—R. G. Dun & Co.'s Weekly Review of Trade says: "Business is progressing along conservative lines. It is without excitement and without great speculative activity, but with a confident undertone which is to be explained largely by the fact that leading concerns in most of the great industries have orders booked to employ their machinery at nearly full capacity during months when curtailment is usual. No net reduction in working force has appeared in the last fortnight, and a readjustment of wages schedules in some branches of the steel trade is effected without trouble. Prices of commodities are generally steady, and holiday trade is brisk at all points. The south is particularly cheerful, with cotton firm and the rice crop coming in at very full prices.

"There is no cause for alarm in the small volume of new business at iron and steel centers. With the first sign of higher prices there came forward such a flood of contracts that mills and furnaces booked orders sufficient to keep their full force employed for months. Hence there has come a more quiet condition, with less bidding for products. Fortunately quotations were not forced up unreasonably during the weeks of greatest activity, and now there is no sign of depression.

"Failures for the week were 287 in the United States, against 221 last year, and 25 in Canada, against 33 last year."

Bradstreet's says: "There is a quieter tone and reduced volume of business doing at wholesale in many lines, but this is not unusual at this season, and is partly balanced by a larger interest in retail and holiday distribution. Weather conditions are still a drawback to the trade in winter weight goods, but it is notable that a better report comes from the northwest than for some weeks past. Southern trade advices remain good, but retail business at eastern markets is still reported backward. In the larger lines of trade new features are not numerous."

IN INTERESTS OF LABOR.

Twentieth Annual Convention of the American Federation of Labor at Louisville.

Louisville, Ky., Dec. 7.—The twentieth annual convention of the American Federation of Labor came to order at 10:15 o'clock Thursday morning.

When the president's gavel announced the opening of the first session 217 delegates took their seats and the hum of conversation, which, for the last half-hour had filled the hall, subsided and the convention was on.

Secretary Frank Morrison reported that the receipts were $34,368 more than last year, $2,752 having been added to the general balance. The receipts from per capita tax, $42,085, were notable and encouraging. The expenses increased $38,774—a large portion, $16,399, being for salaries and expenses of general organizers. During the fiscal year charters were issued to 3,743 affiliated unions, the gain in membership being 300,446, including 44,658 in 755 local trades and federal labor unions chartered direct by the American Federation of Labor.

Treasurer John B. Lennon then read his report, which was referred to the proper committee. The remainder of the afternoon session was devoted to the presentation and reference to the proper committees of resolutions, and the report of the committee on rules.

Strict Rules Adopted.

Deadwood, S. D., Dec. 11.—Extraordinary rules have been laid down by the Burlington Railway company, which will affect all its employes in South Dakota. No man is allowed to use tobacco or liquor in any form during the hours of service and all must be vaccinated.

HE WAS READY FOR MORE.

Not Even a Railway Collision Could Subdue the Ardor of a Football Man.

The two trains came together with an awful crash. Some one had blundered. That, however, was a matter which would have to be left for future investigation.

As soon as those who were uninjured could extricate themselves from the wreck they turned manfully to the work of rescuing their less fortunate fellow-passengers, says the Chicago Times-Herald.

It was a sickening sight. Cars were heaped on top of one another. People were pinioned under seats, beams and trucks. Steam was hissing from the overturned boilers, the rails of the track were warped and torn loose from the ties, and the moans and cries of the injured could be heard afar off.

Finally, after long, hard work, the rescuers reached the bottom of the mass, where the legs and body of a man protruded from beneath a twisted platform. Beside him lay a cane decorated with colored ribbons, and a long tin horn.

Fearfully and anxiously a score of strong men lifted the weight from the head and shoulders of the prostrate one and carried him up the embankment. As they reached the higher level he opened his eyes, passed a hand in front of them, as if brushing away a dim screen of some kind, and shouted:

"Rah! rah! rah! Sizz! boom, ah! Ki-yi! hip-hip! hoo-gah-yah! Come on, fellows! Which side has the ball!"

MINISTER SAVED

Rev. Henry Langford entirely cured of Nervous Prostration by Dr. Greene's Nervura Blood and Nerve Remedy.

REV. HENRY LANGFORD.

Rev. Henry Langford, the eminent Baptist divine, of Weston, W. Va., has just escaped utter nervous and physical prostration. He is pastor of four churches. "For ten years," he said, "I have been nervous and growing worse all these years. During the last four or five years I became so nervous I could scarcely sign my name so it could be read. I was so nervous that I could not read my own sermon notes after they had been laid aside awhile.

"I was unable to hold my head steady in the pulpit, nor could I hold or handle my books and papers without embarrassment, owing to the trembling and weakness of my hands and arms. I was so nervous that I could scarcely feed myself. In fact, my nervous system was wrecked.

"I tried many remedies recommended by physicians, but found no permanent relief.

"One day I was in the store of R. S. Ogden, at Sardis, W. Va., and he said to me: 'You take two bottles of Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy, and if you say it don't help you, you need not pay for it.'

"I took two bottles of this medicine and found so much relief that I bought two more bottles, and now I am wonderfully improved in health and in strength. Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy did it. I can heartily and truthfully recommend it to the sick. Too much cannot be said in praise of this splendid medicine. I say this for the good of other sufferers from nervous and prostrating diseases who can be cured by this remedy. For myself, I am thankful to God that I found Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy, and for what it has done for me."

DR. GREENE'S OFFER OF FREE ADVICE.

Dr. Greene, Nervura's discoverer, will give his counsel free to all who write or call upon him at his office, 35 West 14th Street, New York City. His advice is from his great skill and experience and will shorten the road to health. Thousands come to him and write to him constantly. Do not put off getting the right advice, if you are ill.

WHY MRS. PINKHAM

Is Able to Help Sick Women When Doctors Fail.

How gladly would men fly to woman's aid did they but understand a woman's feelings, trials, sensibilities, and peculiar organic disturbances.

Those things are known only to women, and the aid a man would give is not at his command.

To treat a case properly it is necessary to know all about it, and full information, many times, cannot be given by a woman to her family physician. She cannot bring herself to tell everything, and the physician is at a constant disadvantage. This is why, for the past twenty-five years, thousands of women have been confiding their troubles to Mrs. Pinkham, and whose advice has brought happiness and health to countless women in the United States.

MRS. G. H. CHAPPELL.

Mrs. Chappell, of Grant Park, Ill., whose portrait we publish, advises all suffering women to seek Mrs. Pinkham's advice and use Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, as they cured her of inflammation of the ovaries and womb; she, therefore, speaks from knowledge, and her experience ought to give others confidence. Mrs. Pinkham's address is Lynn, Mass., and her advice is absolutely free.

THE USUAL RESULT.

Dog Fights in Kentucky Do Not Terminate with the Whipping of a Dog.

"The colonel and I sat talking under a shade tree in front of the town post office when a dog fight started down the street," said a traveling man, relating an incident of a recent trip to Kentucky, relates the Washington Post.

"Come on!" I said, as I sprang up.

"'Come this way!' replied the colonel, as he seized my arm and drew me into a doorway.

"'But I want to see the dog fight,' I protested.

"'Yes, I reckon you do, but you also want to keep clear of the shootin'.'

"'Why should there be any shooting?'

"'Bekase one dog has got to lick t'other, and the owner of the licked dog ain't goin' to let it rest that way. There they go!'

"Ten minutes later we stepped out to find one man lying on the ground with two bullets in him and some people carrying away a second with half a dozen.

"'Dog fights are bewtiful affairs,' said the colonel, as we walked away together, 'but the safest way to see one in Kentucky is to wait till it's all over and the dead carried off.'"

IS LITTLE BOB TUCKED IN?

"I've gotter go," she said, "an' see
If little Bob's tucked in;
He'll git his death if he's uncovered
In this col' storm an' win'."
"Oh, little Bob's all right," said I,
"You've been to tuck him in
Four times this evenin', an' I wouldn
Run 'way upstairs ag'in."
But Cynthy'd worry, fret an' stew,
An' raise a dreffle din;
"W'y, I mus' go ag'in," says she,
"An' see if Bob's tucked in."

"W'y, Cynthy, jest set down," I said,
"An' git some good er life;
A feller wants a chance to talk
Some evenin's with his wife."
Then she would take her knittin' out,
Or work upon her spread,
An' make b'lieve lissen, though she didn'
Hear quarter w'at I said.
She wouldn't much more than git set down
Than jump right up ag'in,
An' say: "I mus' run up and see
If little Bob's tucked in."

Young Bob was allus on the jump,
An' filled the house with din,
An' kicked his quilts off ev'ry night
Fast as she tucked him in.
His legs they went so fast all day,
As long as it was light,
An' got up speed so they couldn't stop,
An' kep' a-goin' all night.
So Cynthy'd keep a-gettin' up,
An' gittin' up agin;
"I've got to look an' see," says she,
"If little Bob's tucked in."

She stood above the casket there,
She bent to kiss his face,
An' pat a stragglin' curl of hair,
Or fix a bit of lace.
Her heart was breakin' with the thought
That Bob, so round an' fat,
So full of pranks an' fun, should sleep
Within a crib like that;
But still she'd fix his little robe,
An' then come back ag'in.
An' take a long, last look, an' see
Her little Bob tucked in.

That night a storm er snow came on,
An' how the winds did rave!
The snow fell, like a coverlid,
On little Bob's new grave.
"I'm glad it snows," his mother said
"It looked so hard an' bare,
So hard, so cruel, an' so bleak,
I cried to leave him there.
But God has sent the blessed snow,
I think—an' 'tis no sin—
That He has sent His snow to see
That little Bob's tucked in."

A Chinaman's Gratitude

"WELL, there's one good thing about a Chinaman, anyhow—he's grateful," reminiscently remarked a Washington man who put in a couple of cruises as an apothecary in the United States navy. "You may, of late, in the great mass of rubbish that's been written about the slant-eyes, have seen that fact disputed; but I just happen to know that a Chinaman's grateful. However, in order to make the point clear I'll have to begin at the beginning. So here goes:

"When I was serving on board a cruiser on the Pacific station I had as a shipmate a private marine named—oh, well, Tom Kingsley's near enough to it; some of his people, of good station, are still living in Philadelphia, and this boy hurt them enough, so we'll just make it Tom Kingsley. Kingsley was sent to the ship with a detachment of marines quite awhile after I was attached to the vessel. I noticed him particularly as soon as he came aboard—not so much because he was a tall, broad-shouldered, fine-looking chap, who completely outclassed the bunch he joined with in appearance and bearing, as because I saw what his trouble was as soon as I clapped an eye on him. I understood as soon as I made the discovery why Kingsley was wearing the uniform of a buck private in the marine corps. It was because a slavery to which he had become addicted in civil life had rendered him unfit and incompetent to keep up with the procession in civil life.

"That is to say, I didn't need two looks at Kingsley to see that morphine had him. His gray eyes focussed to pin-points, and he had all of the other exterior indications of the man chained in the morphia bondage.

"At the inspection on the Sunday following Kingsley's coming aboard I watched my immediate chief, the ship's surgeon, narrowly to see if he was going to get on to Kingsley when he passed by the marine in following after the commanding officer. When the surgeon passed by the row of marines, eyes straight ahead, I observed that he gave one sharp glance at Kingsley, and that was all.

"Below, in my storeroom, after inspection, the surgeon looked at me out of the tail of his eye.

"'Have you noticed that marine, apothecary?' he asked me.

"'Yes, sir,' I replied.

"'Hum—I'm glad to be corroborated—yet I was sure I couldn't have been mistaken,' said the surgeon. 'Better have an extra eye to your store of morphia—keep it under cover.'

"However, Kingsley didn't become incapable. He was an admirable soldier of the sea. He was always right on the minute, a top-notcher on guard duty, a spick-and-span man always. The marine officer in charge of the guard never, of course, suspected that there was anything wrong about Kingsley, and he thought so much of the man's faithfulness that he had him made a corporal a couple of months after Kingsley joined us. Kingsley was always under the influence of the drug, of course. He never ran out of the stuff. You know how morphine slaves provide against that awful contingency. He kept on edge all the time, and never appeared to overshoot his limit. Kingsley surely was a man of powerful self-control in that respect. However, I knew that it would get him in time, and throw him. It always does throw its victims if they give it rope enough, you know, and morphine is one of those things that just demands all the rope it wants.

"Kingsley knew by intuition that I knew about his habit, and he avoided me very elaborately. One noon-hour, however, I happened to be smoking a pipe at the gangway. Kingsley was looking out over the beautiful harbor of Acapulco in his dreamy, dopey way—his way, that is to say, when he was off duty. Well, I edged over to Kingsley. We were quite apart from the rest of the men.

"'Bucko,' said I, in as kindly a way as I could—I felt sorry for Kingsley, who was most obviously a gentleman—'you want to cut it out. You do for a fact. It'll nail you. It's a game you can't beat. Nobody can beat it. I can reduce you gradually—eighth of a grain a day. Better let me take hold of you. It'll be on the quiet.'

"'That's good of you, pal,' replied Kingsley, never taking his eyes away from the horizon to look at me. 'I won't forget it. But I've tried reducing before. I'm going to make the fight alone. I'm going to hang on if it kills me. Death is only a little thing, anyhow, compared to this slavery. When we hike away from here for the islands next week, I'm going to heave all I've got of the stuff over the side. Then it'll be me or the powder. I'll do the best I know. I'll be trying to win, anyhow. Much obliged to you, all the same.'

"'Bad job, breaking it off all of a sudden,' I told him. 'Dangerous at that. Yet you're a pretty husky looking fellow. You may beat it.'

"I was pretty skeptical about it, but I didn't want to discourage him. Well, the mudhook came up ten days later, and away we went to Honolulu. We started in the morning. I didn't see Kingsley until along toward night. He looked pretty bad, too. I knew that he was making the fight.

"'Kingsley'll be coming to me for the stuff to-night,' I thought. 'He's been taking 30 or 40 grains a day, and he won't be able to stand it. But I'll be beached if it's found out that I've given him a sixteenth of a grain. I'm sorry for Kingsley, but I wouldn't be able to help him out.'

"Well, Kingsley didn't come to me until along toward two o'clock on the following morning.

"'Just an injection,' he whispered to me, hoarsely. 'I'm going insane.'

"I couldn't, and I told Kingsley so as decently as I could. It hurt me to turn him down, but I couldn't take the chance. He shuddered all over, and staggered out of my little store room.

"Right for'ard of my store room was the store room of Wang Woo, the skipper's steward. Wang, of course, hit the pipe. Most Chinamen in the navy do, in the midnight privacy of their store rooms, but no official notice is taken of that. It's looked upon as part of the Chinaman's game. Well, Kingsley stumbled into Wang Woo's store room. Woo was cooking himself a pill in the dark. I heard Kingsley beg the Chink for a little of the gummy stuff, offering to give up a month's wages for it. Woo passed him up, and Kingsley stumbled forward, almost mad, as he had a right to be. He'd already have been insane had it not been for his great natural strength.

"At nine o'clock that morning, the hour for sick call, I saw Kingsley come down the after ladder, looking frightful. His face was drawn to a knot from his sufferings. One of the gun divisions was breaking out the after magazines, the hatches to which were right at the foot of the after ladders. The hatches were wide open. Kingsley, coming down the after ladder, saw that they were open. But Wang Woo, coming around from the ward room at a little lope, to answer the call of the skipper's messenger above, was looking aloft through the main hatch to see the messenger boy, and he didn't see the open magazine hatches. Well, he had one foot already over one of the hatches, and was just about to plunge to the bottom of the fixed ammunition magazine, when the collar of his blouse was gripped by the hand of a man whose muscles were like iron. I mean Kingsley. Kingsley raised Wang Woo bodily to the ladder steps. Wang Woo almost fainted when he saw the danger he had been in, but he smiled blandly at Kingsley, and Kingsley followed him into the Chinaman's store room.

"Why, of course, Chinamen are grateful. Kingsley didn't report himself sick at all. He emerged from the Chinaman's store room ten minutes later, looking quite chipper, comparatively, and his eyes were focussed to pin points until we got to Honolulu. Then Kingsley went ashore, took an overdose with all the deliberation in life, and was found dead in bed at a little hotel in Waikiki, with suitable letters, telling about his people, sealed and addressed to the skipper, on the table beside him.

MILLIONS FROM AN IDEA.

But His Success Through Life Insurance Has Not Changed John F. Dryden.

A woman writer in Success tells how John F. Dryden became a millionaire by carrying out one idea—the theory that life insurance should be as cheap as any other good thing in life. She says:

"The story of how he did it is full of suggestion. Without a dollar of money capital to begin with, with a single great idea in his mind, and with perfect faith and confidence in its practicability, this pioneer concentrated all his talents, industry and will-power in the endeavor to make that idea successful. When he began work there were regularly insured in the United States a fraction over 800,000; now there are on the books of the ordinary and industrial companies the names of about 10,000,000 policy-holders. A marked feature of it all is that his success has not in the slightest degree altered or changed the native modesty and simplicity of Mr. Dryden's character. So far as this is concerned, he is to-day the same quiet, unassuming gentleman that he was more than a score of years ago."

Hunting a Tiger.

An English missionary to British Guiana penetrated a few years ago to the remoter settlements of those tropical wilds, where he was entertained by a half-breed settler. He reports one story told him there on a rainy day. The story is of interest for its dialect, as well as for its adventure:

Hanging over the fence about the cabin was a huge tiger skin. We had arrived only a few days after the animal was killed. "Tell us about it," I said, for, like the Athenians of old, we had nothing else to do just then but to tell or hear something new

"Well," said Alec, "nebba trouble trouble till trouble trouble you. Dis fellow trouble a' we too much. He came in de night and steal de pork. He came 'gain and take a' we fowl. So we say: 'We no clea' groun' fo' monkey fo' run 'pon, and we no rear fowl fo' tigah to eat. So we must catch he one dem nights.'

"Three of us get guns, we climb 'pon tree, and we wait, and we say: 'Ebery day debil help tief, one day God mus' help watchman.' By and by we hear noise, massa. Tigah come carrying hog 'tween he teet'. Bang! Tigah stop, tigah growl. Bang! Tigah roll ober. He keep still, but we say: 'Ebery shut eye no sleep.' We gib he one more. Bang! He dead fo' true. We haul he up. Dere he skin. 'No ketchee, no habee.'"

MINNESOTA NEWS.

Knocked Out.

The supreme court of the United States has knocked out the Anderson law on constitutional grounds. The case is remanded for a new trial in Stearns county.

The decision is a victory for the Northern Pacific, the St. Paul & Duluth and subsidary lines, but does not include the Great Northern.

In passing upon the case the court held that the state had been admitted to the sisterhood of states under the usual compact, and that as long as the title of its lands remains in the United States those lands are exempt from taxation. So far as the land involved in this case is concerned, it was stated that it had been granted to the state by congress and by the state to the St. Paul & Duluth company. Soon afterwards, the justice continued, the state had enacted legislation providing that railroads in the state should pay 3 per cent on their gross earnings in lieu of all other taxes upon their property.

The opinion by Justice Brewer sustained the view that the original legislation was in the nature of a contract, which was binding, and which could not be invalidated by the act of 1895 seeking to repeal it. The latter act, therefore, was pronounced repugnant to the federal constitution, and void in this respect.

Justice Harlan, Gray, Brown, White and McKenna concurred in the result, but did not agree with their colleagues as to the grounds on which the conclusion was reached. Justice Brewer read the decision.

Saloon Will Have a Rival.

Minneapolis is to have an experimental rival of the saloon in the shape of a coffee room so arranged as to attract laboring men away from resorts where liquor is sold. The theory held by one set of the saloon's opponents is that that institution maintains its hold on the masses not so much because of their alcoholic craving as on account of the fact that it is a social gathering place. Certain reformers in various eastern cities, regarding the saloon as the working man's club, have started institutions exactly similar with the exception that non-alcoholic beverages are supplied to patrons. This is the plan to be introduced in Minneapolis by the Young People's Christian Temperance Union.

Will Change the Channel.

The right of way through which the Burlington, Cedar Rapids & Northern railway will enter Faribault will necessitate the changing of the bed of the Straight river for a distance of about 1,000 feet, and the removal of two or three large bridges to where the new channel will be cut. The project will undoubtelly prove one of the greatest engineering feats ever attempted in Faribault, and will require the expenditure of a large amount of money. The work of removing some buildings which are located on the line of the proposed new channel, has already been commenced.

Declared Unconstitutional.

The supreme court of Minnesota has declared the inebriate law unconstitutional. The action upon which the decision was rendered came up from Ramsey county, where Edwin Murray, proprietor of the Murray institute for the care of inebriates, sued the county commissioner for fees.

A LIFE SAVED.

A Druggist's Timely and Straightforward Advice Saves the Life of a Prominent Citizen.

Chicago, Ill., Dec. 10, 1900 (Special).—Among the Catholic Foresters in this city, none is better known or more universally esteemed than Mr. S. P. Rush, Conductor (President) of Holy Name Court, Number 26.

His many friends, inside the Order and outside of its ranks, were, therefore, much startled to learn that his life was in danger, he having Bright's Disease, that most terrible and fatal disease.

Mr. Rush, however, made a grand struggle for his life, taking prescriptions, and pills, and powders, until his stomach refused food. At last, his local druggist, guided by the numerous inquiries being made at his store for Dodd's Kidney Pills, advised Mr. Rush to buy and try some. This he did, and to his delight he was restored to health and strength.

Mr. Rush says that after commencing the use of Dodd's Kidney Pills, he felt much better, but it took two months to effect a cure.

"I took nothing else but Dodd's Kidney Pills during that time, so I know that I owe life and health to them."

What this wonderful remedy has done for Mr. Rush, it will certainly do for anyone. It is the only remedy that has never failed to cure Bright's Disease.

Mr. Rush is just now receiving the congratulations of his friends, but always finds time to say a good word for the Medicine that saved his life.

Sold for 50 cents a box, all dealers.

MRS. BREWER RECOMMENDS PERUNA FOR GRIP AND FEMALE CATARRH

The Home of Mrs. Lizzie M. Brewer at Westerly, R. I.

In a letter to Dr. Hartman concerning the merits of Pe-ru-na, Mrs. Brewer writes, among other things:

Westerly, R. I.

"Dear Dr. Hartman—I find Pe-ru-na a sure cure for all catarrhal affections so common in this part of the country. It cures a cold at once. There is no cough medicine that can at all equal Pe-ru-na. As for la grippe, there is no other remedy that can at all compare with Pe-ru-na.

"I am among the sick a great deal in our city and have supplied many invalids with Pe-ru-na, simply because I am enthusiastic in my faith as to its results. I have never known it to fail to quickly and permanently remove that demoralized state of the human system which follows la grippe.

"In all cases of extreme weakness I use Pe-ru-na with perfect confidence of a good result. In cases of weakness peculiar to my sex I am sure that no other remedy can approach in good results the action of Pe-ru-na. It meets all the bad symptoms to which females are subject. The irregularities and nervousness, the debility and miseries which afflict more or less the women from girlhood to change of life, are one and all met and overcome by this excellent remedy. I wish every young lady in our city could read your book.

"Mrs. Lizzie M. Brewer."

Pe-ru-na will cure the worst cases of catarrh. La grippe is acute epidemic catarrh, for which Pe-ru-na is a specific.

Mrs. J. W. Reynolds, New Lisbon, Ohio, suffered for many years with chronic catarrh of the lungs, head and throat; continuous cough; many physicians failed to cure. Permanently cured by Pe-ru-na. Thousands of testimonials could be produced. A valuable treatise on catarrh sent free by The Pe-ru-na Medicine Company, Columbus, O.

Each volume has an Introduction by BLISS PERRY.

The Little Masterpiece Library is edited by PROFESSOR BLISS PERRY, formerly Professor of English Literature in Princeton University, now Editor of The Atlantic Monthly. It is no hastily selected compilation for an ephemeral sale. The Editor has chosen, with the greatest care and conscientiousness, those CHEFS D'OEUVRES of the greatest English-speaking writers which are of such beauty and value as to be at the foundation of English culture.

Yet how many people can say that they have thoroughly assimilated, or even hastily read all of these immortal works?

The binding and printing of the volumes are beautifully executed. The size and shape are so convenient that the books fairly invite the reading that every intelligent American would want to have as a part of his or her intellectual culture. Each volume, bound in handsome red cloth, contains a really fine and artistic photogravure frontispiece of the celebrated writer whose masterpiece it contains.

A more charming addition to a library, one that will be REALLY READ, or a more tasteful Christmas gift—or twelve Christmas gifts, for the volumes are not numbered—could not be imagined.

The publishers of the Masterpiece Library have sold it at the rate of $8.00 for the 12 volumes, and have claimed it was at that rate an exceptional bargain.

THE REVIEW OF REVIEWS.

Under Dr. Albert Shaw's editorship The Review of Reviews has come to be considered "indispensable" by thinking Americans. It has monthly—

1. Dr. Shaw's comprehensive, impartial history of the current month.
2. Important contributed articles to the amount of an ordinary magazine.
3. The gist of the other notable magazines and reviews of five continents.
4. "Current History in Caricature." "A Record of Current Events." "The New Books," and other always valuable departments.
5. An average of over a hundred timely pictures to the number.

The regular price for The Review of Reviews one year and The Little Masterpiece Library, is $10.50, and it is an exceedingly low price. By cutting out this offer and sending it with 50 cents in stamps, you will receive The Little Masterpiece Library in its entirety at once, also The Review of Reviews throughout 1901, and the balance of the payment can be completed by sending 50 cents a month for eleven months.

If you desire to make a cash remittance, $5.75 will close the transaction.

BUFFALO GAZETTE

DELANO, FRIDAY, Dec. 14, 1900.

OFFICIAL PAPER OF THE VILLAGE OF DELANO.

DELANO DIARY

—Dr. Niven in Delano, Dec. 17 & 18.

—Hay sold this week for $9. a ton; straw $2.

—Examine Lilling's stationery before you buy elsewhere.

—The case of Frank Cyrus vs the G. N. was settled out of court.

—Mumps and chickenpox have detained many of the pupils from the public schools at home this week.

—The Egale's Electrotyping outfit has been running days and part of the nights lately. Business is booming in that line.

—Livery man Redmond has been adding some new horses to his business and now has some fine turnouts as you get any where.

—The Village Attorney has received notice from Mrs Smith's attorney that there would be no suit begun against the village for damage.

—Delano Cigar Factory is now booming. Mr. Schlief has his brother and Valentine Eppel assisting him in the manufacture of cigars. All are kept busy.

-- Another week and the shortest days of the year will be with us. Then we may look for the days to begin to lengthen, and the cold to begin to strengthen.

—For the best candies and fruits go to Billing's.

—Dentist Niven will be in Waverly Dec. 15 & 16 and Delano 17 & 18.

--Judge Giddings has filed a decission in a case at Anoka, that while Boards of Health and school officers cannot compel childern to be vaccinated. They can bar them from going to school until they are vaccinated.

—More interest should be taken in educational affairs than is manifested by many. Childern should be encouraged at home to study some. Too much fun and too little study are not conducive to securing an education.

—Telegrams announce that Peter Wallert convicted of killing his wife and four stepdaughters, in Sibley County, has been sentenced to be hanged. Relatives of the murdered woman and childern live near here, —Fair Day was enlivened by the usual number of rows. Some thing should be done to keep peace on Fair Days. A big crowd comes to town and some of them come for a good time and usually get it. Business should be the main feature of a fair.

—People who profess to be unbelievers in the pratice of continually taking medicine seem to forget entirely when a good slick talker comes around and allow themselves to be persuaded that they are sick, and to spend their dimes for a lot of drugs they know nothing about, to cure a lot of diseases they haven't got.

—Several itinerant drug and medicine venders visited Delano last week. People make considerable fuss about allowing such things, and go right along patronizing them. If nobody bought, they wouldn't sell anything and would soon put Delano down as a poor town for their business, and would leave it off of their list as a place to make every month.

Some move ought to be made to get good drinking water for use in the Delano water system instead of river water. Wells become more and more comtaminated each year, with disease producing germs, and drying up. If the water provided by the village was first class drinking water many would use it in preference to wells. And there appears no doubt but it would serve the purpose of extinguishing fires, and watering lawns.

—Last Thursday evening at 8:55 o'clock, almost a tradgedy occurred on Bridge Street, causing things to run with lightning like rapidity through the heads of W. D. Freeman and wife, but so long as the leaden bullet did not course exactly that way they soon cooled down. Mrs F. had just retired for the night, and W. D. had seated himself in a chair near the bed to read the news All at once the roar of arms, a smashing of glass, and a bullet, which passed directly over Mr. F's head fell at his feet. After investigation it was found to have came from across the street. Marshal Merriman was summoned and learned that neighbor. Litfkin was out after a dog. It was very narrow escape; but not for the dog.

St. Peter School Notes.

Walter, Nicholas, Clara and Elizabeth Tautges are new scholars this week.

Elizabeth Pogreba, whose home was quarantined, on account of smallpox, is back to school again.

The childern are now coming to sohool every day, and are filling the school very fast.

Next week we are going to have examinations in all studies.

The scholars are having much fun sliding on the ice this week.

Simon Loch, a scholar of our school, was absent last Tuesday afternoon. When asked why he said: Cause papa was killing a pig and I helping him.

Father Says was in school yesterday, and gave the childern a few instructions in obedience.

Frank Gallus was absent yesterday, because he had to help his father kill pigs.

—Dr. Niven in Waverly Dec. 15. & 16.

—Look at Billing's new clerk in his window.

—A second hand cook stove to sell cheap or trade for wood or hay. Apply at the GAZETTE office.

Mayor Lohmiller says the village has received notice that there will be no suit for damages by Mrs. Smith against the village.

Many cases of diphtheria are reported in different parts of the state. It is much more fatal than the smallpox of the last few years.

The entertainment given at the City Hall Monday evening by Miss Eleanor Miller was pronounced excellent by those who attended.

Coal is fast becoming a substitute for wood even in this once heart of the big Woods. Many claim it is cheaper and more satistactory fuel at present rates.

The Round Elevator's blowing machine for assisting in loa ding cars is much appreciated by Mr. Knoll who has become an expert in its manipulation.

Several ugly holes in the sidewalk on River Street were repaired last week and traveling is much safer on that part of town than it has been for some time.

—Drop in and see Billing's fine line of spices and extracts.

—On Saturday evening, Al Hitzman's team got tired waiting for their driver and started out for home, alone. They took even a livlier gait than when Al had a hold of the lines.

Some of the pupils attended school while having the chickenpox, and neither teachers nor their parents found out they had it until nearly well, as no spots appeared on their faces.

--C. R. Wilkinson, the gentlemanly advertising agent of the Burlington R. R. at St. Paul is a candidate for Deputy Grand Master of the Odd Fellows, to be elected in January. The Col. is liable to be elected.

Fred W. Wandersee lost nine head of cattle and a horse, and William Schwerin two cows from sickness lately. Many cattle have died in Dakota and Minnesota lately, some attribute the trouble to cornstalks.

Editor Teas citing the action of Wright County Editors orgaaizing a society, proposes that similar action be taken by the Carver County editors when they meet at the County Seat, in January. Let the good work go on.

The recent cold snap seems to have started a building boom. Speckel & Schaust concluding it would be wise to have an icehouse of their own have got Charlie Carleton building one on the rear of their lot. And Ole Peterson, improving his opportunity of a visit from his son in law Ole Bockman is having a wood shed built in the rear of his shoe shop.

A Merry Christmas and happy New Year to all at Conzet's and Darrow's, where you will find a splendid assortment of blankets, robes and bells, at prices that will please you. Special prices made on harness until after Jan. 1, 1901.

Yours truely

BORN: To Mr. and Mrs. George Irving, on Thanksgiving Day a girl—Buffalo Journal.

Frank Kotilinek jr., aged 22 years was drowned in Maple Lake, Wednes last week. He belonged to a skating party. Henry Hansch was rescued by his brother Herman.

The CokatoEnterprise has a letter from H. A. Hela, M. D. C., which says: "About ten days ago William Caffrey, living near Cokato Lake commenced to loose cattle in a peculiar manner. He had a herd of nice cattle, 13 in number, and 10 of them are now dead. Symtoms given. "When an animal gets sick, it isolates itself from the rest of the herd, stands quiet, back is arched and head turned to one side, it stands a few hours in that position then throws its head up a few times, lays down or falls down and dies soon." Healthy animals should be kept away from the sick, and where one dies everything should be thoroughly disinfected. Look out for your cattle.

Rupert Muckenhirn and Urbon Pogreba droye to Buffalo one day last week to learn what had becme of the proceedings in the matter of a ditch they had been interested in. They were much surprised to learn that instead of the publication having been made for 21 days according to law, it had only been made for 19 days., consequently the whole proceedings would have to be gone over again, costing the county quite a snug little sum. Rupert says he thinks a County Attorney, a County Auditor and Board of Commissioners ought to know how to do business better than that, even if they are republicans.

Wright County Times: Wages have dropped five dollars a month in the logging camps. Last year a man and team received $50, but he gets only $45 this year. The excuse is that an increased number of men are applying for work and it is thought a still further reduction may be made.

Saint Cloud Times: The Minnesota beet suger factory was in operation 75 days, for every one of which the State pays a bonus of $351 12, or over $26,350 in all. No wonder Senator Keller said: "Here are your beets, and there my God, is your sugar!" $350 a day bonus is not bad.

In the town of Franklin about 30. votes evidently intended for Bryan but on which the Debs, social Democratic candidate was crossed were thrown out; that is about 30 votes intended for Bryan were lost, 30 voters, were disfranchized through ignorance evidently, right in one town. Had these voters read the Gazette they could hardly have been guilty of losing their votes in such way. Quite a number lost their vote on Governor in the same way. They placed a cross opposite the names of two Governors; neither could be counted; both were thrown out. It is claimed but for this ignorance in voting John Lind would have had 10,000 majority and been handsomely reelected. Voters should take the papers and not loose their votes in such a manner. GAZETTE $1.00 per year.

Owing to the raise in prices on many commodities the newspaper men, not to be behind, talk of advancing subscription rates for weekly papers from the present rates $1.00 per year. to $1.50 per year.

Several speculators in Chicago and St. Paul have cornered the egg market. and fabulous prices are anticipated The tariff prevents foreign imports nd the trust is booming. But Biddy. is not in the combine and if the present mild weather holds the home manufactures will soon begin opperations and flood the market with fresh, new eggs, when the cold storage fellow will be glad to get rid of what they have on hand, at what they are worth, or even less than first cost.

THE LAST OF THE LONE PINE TREE.

BY C. M. CONZET.

Long years ago down by the raging Crow,
There stood a tall pine tree long ago.
It stood the storms for many a year.
While the Indians around it were killing the deer.
The reply of the water in the rocky Crow,
Was reminding us how like we all must go.
The dear old pine that stood many a storm,
And the wild birds sat on its branches of slender form.
While the red fox had his den in its roots unscared
Which nature itself had so nicely prepared.

But time has changed and the tree grew old,
The Indian left, the white man grew bold,
And for Christmas trees its branches were sold,
Just at the time the weather was cold.
The first white man that climbed that pine,
Was J. D. Young, during the pioneer time.
Who was rowing a boat up the raging Crow,
Now living in Delano, whom we all know.
The branches were taken one by one
Leaving the top to play with the sun.

But at last came a storm with terrific force,
Which laid down the pine in a southerly course,
Down on the bank on the Hennepin side
While over the river Wright county laid.
The trunk of the pine was gathered for lumber,
While the roots and the stub were left ther to slumber.
Which mark the spot where once we did see,
The lonely pine, that evergreen tree.

The top of the tree was gathered by me,
And sent to the Rockford saw-mill.
It now can be seen in a beautiful stain
Where the remains of the lone pine are still.
It was made by McDonald in the shape of a stand
And it shows the work of a skillful hand.
You are welcome to come for what is to see
The remains of the lone pine, that ever green tree.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Regular Correspondent.)
WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 7. 1900

The republican leaders in Congress are on their knees to the brewers, begging to be let off with a small reduction in the tax on beer, instead of the entire war tax as demanded by the brewers. All this has been brought about this week. A week ago the republican members of the Ways and Means committee refused to even consider a reduction in the beer tax. Since then Representative Babcock, who was chairman of the Republican Congressional Committee and knew all about campaign contributions and promises, has succeeded Dolliver, of Iowa, who has gone to the Senate, as a member of the Ways and Means Committee, and has told the republican members thereof a few things, as Mr. Hanna has also done. Now it is no longer a question whether there will be a reduction of the beer tax, but of how small a reduction the brewers can be cajoled into accepting. The bill as reported from the Ways and Means Committee makes a reduction of 40 cents a barrel in the beer tax, but it is not yet certain that the brewers will accept that.

While the democratic caucus on the Army bill, which was railroaded through the House this week, did not agree upon any party policy in opposing the bill, the democrats who spoke afainst the bill in the limited time allowed them were practically unanimous in objecting to the imperial powers given the President, of increasing the regular army from 58,000, the minimum number provided by the bill, to 100,000, men whenever so disposed and of retaining it at the highest figures as long as he wanted to. The democrats agreed that it was more power than Congress ever placed in one man's hands and more than should be given to any man. Other objectionable features were pointed out by democrats, but that is all that they could do. Mr. McKinley's orders had been issued to Speaker Henderson, and of course the bill was passed.

Senator Clay, of Ga., made a strong point against the ship subsidy bill now the regular order of business in the Senate, when he compelled Senator Frye, who is in charge of the bill, to admit that if it become a law the annual subsidy of a twenty-one knot ship would be $304,000. Senator Clay also called attention to the fact that the ten and twelve knot ships which carry the agricultural products of the country will not receive more than one-third of the subsidy provided for the fast passenger vessels which carry no agricultural products. Senator Vest offered an amendment to the bill repealing all laws prohibiting the purchase of foreign built ships for use in the foreign carrying trade of the U. S. or imposing taxes or restrictions upon such, and giving American citizens the right to purchase vessels anywhere and for any purpose and to have them registered as ships of the U. S.

Representative Crumpacker, of Ind., has introduced an Apportionment bill which cuts down the Congressional representation of four southern states - North Carolina, South Carolina, Louisiana and Mississippi - but nobody has any idea that the bill will receive any serious consideration. Crumpacker himself says the bill represents only his personal views and was introduced with out any assurance that it would be supported.

Senator Tillman got a bill through the Senate without opposition, appropriating $75,000 for a government building at the Interstate and West Indian Exposition, to be held at Charleston, S. C., Dec 1, 1901 to June 1, 1902, and $250,000 to aid the furtherance of the exposition.

It is understood that the revival of the grade of vice-admiral, recommended by Secretary Long and provided for in the bill introduced by Senator Hale, is to make a place to which Rear Admiral Sampson can be promoted by Mr. McKinley. Rear Admiral Schley has many warm friends in Congress and they may have a word or two to say about this scheme before it gets through.

Students of human nature as exhibited in the political world are trying to reconcile Mr. McKinley's words with his acts. In the closing paragragh of his message were words which read like a patriotic warning to Congress not to be led into making extravagant appropriations just because there was a lot of money in the Treasury, and now Mr. McKinley is using all his power to drive objecting republican Senators into support of one of the most extravagant appropriations ever before Congress - that for ship subsidies, which will put millions into the pockets of the already rich owners of the fast mail and passenger steamships and next to nothing in the pockets of those who own the slow freighters, who carry our manufactures and procucts.

With the taking of the vote in the House the on Oleomargarine bill one of the longest and most bitter fights that ever took place in the House, in which there was no partisan politics, was brought to a close, although it will doubtless be renewed in the Senate.

Senator Pettigrew, reminded the administration that he was still in the ring, and that he had heard about the suppressed report of the expert accountant on the stealings in Cuba, by offering a resolution calling for any additional information that had been received by the government about Cuban finances. The resolution was sent to the committee on relations with Cuba, to die.

PEACE IN PHILIPPINES.

Returned Captain Says That Every Officer Wants to Return

TACOMA, Wash., Dec 6.—Capt. C. E Polk, of Company I, Forty-third Infantry, who has just returned from Manila says:

"It will be fifteen to twenty years before the Philippines are on the same footing as the United States.

"At present the Government cannot say to any city or town in the Islands 'Come here, I will protect you,' because of lack of troops. It will take 75,000 men to establish peace as it should be, and as long as the United States hesitates about sending this number there will be the same kind of warfare that is now being conducted.

"The report sent to this country by Gen. MacArthur that two thousand Bolo men had surrendered is not of moment for the reason that just as soon as they have had their stomachs filled they will be turned loose, just as have thousands of others during the war, and then they will act as spies and furnish food to the bands in other parts of the islands.

"Every volunteer officer in Manila will resign as soon as his time is up I think. All are tired of it."—World.

Litchfield Independent: Father Cleary, the well known divine of Minneapolis, is a keen observer, and his views are always of interest. He returned from his European trip a few days ago, and gave expression to the following:

All Europe is watching with intense interest the movements of the United States. The European press was undisgnisedly delighted with the result of the late presidential election They regard the defeat of the Democratic party as evidence of the decay of our republican form of government. The prediction is freely made in high political circle in the old countries that our adoption of the policy of imperialism will eventually result in a change in our government. The comments of the English papers in particular are indicative of gratification, and the election of McKinley is regarded as an indorsement of the English colonies policy.

World: "Let us keep always in mind," says the President in his beautiful peroration, "that the foundation of our Government is liberty; its superstructure peace." This is fine language, but how does it fit the Philippines, where the foundation of our Government is force and the superstructure is war and devastation.

"BIDE A WEE, AND DINNA FRET."

Is the road very dreary?
Patience yet;
Rest will be sweeter if thou art aweary,
And after night cometh the morning cheery:
Then bide a wee, and dinna fret.

The clouds have silver lining,
Don't forget;
And though its hidden, still the sun is shining;
Courage! Instead of tears and vain repining,
Just bide a wee, and dinna fret!

With toil and cares unending
Art beset?
Bethink thee how the storms from heaven descending
Snap the stiff oak, but spare the willow bending:
Then bide a wee, and dinna fret.

Grief sharper sting doth borrow
From regret;
Now yesterday is gone, and shall its sorrow
Unfit us for the present and the morrow?
Nay; bide a wee, and dinna fret.

An overanxious brooding
Doth beget
A host of fears and fantasies deluding;
Then sister, lest these torements be intruding,
Just bide a wee, and dinna fret.

ALTHOUGH Roberts has been saying the Boer war is over, it seems to cover more territory today than ever before.

PEOPLE generally are prepared to hear of all kinds of misdoings in the legislature when the U. S. Senatorial elections are being had. Wou'dn't an election by the people be better?

BOTH the big cities want a U. S. Senator. St. Paul is for Moses E. Clapp, and Minneapolis for Robert G. Evans. Wonder if they want try to get both places and leave Knute Nelson out altogether.

THE volunteers are to come home from the Philippines, begining in January, and coming in the order in which they were sent to that country. It is thought the Filipinos will then make more trouble for the regular soldiers remaining there.

AFTER the Minnesota legislature has wrestled for a couple of weeks, with the question of who shall be the two U. S. Senators from Minnesota, at the expense of the tax-payers, would be a good time to take a vote of the people as to whether or not they would like for the U. S. Senators to be elected by a populur vote of the people.

OUR republican friends take gread delight in taunting democrats with the interviews with Ex-President Grover Cleveland on reorganizing the party. Why don't they give us some of Ex-President Benjumine Harrison's views uttered in his Ann Arbor speech, where he claimed that "A government of unlimited powers is unAmerican government."

Merry Chrismas.

We wish all our readers a merry Christmas! 1900 years ago a child was born whose name was called Jesus. Wise men came from the East to worship Him. The 25th day of December each year is observed over the Christian world as the anniversity of His birth. Services are held in churches; presents are made, and a merry time generally is looked forward to by young and old. The Christmas turkey and dinner is an annual affair in most households in Christain lands. Merry, Merry Christmas, to all.

IF President McKinley should loose his "Little Breeches" the canal project might become more apparent.

OMAHA had a big excitement this week on Tuesday evening Edward the fifteen year old boy of E. A. Cudahy one of the millionair packers of that city was kidnapped, and his father notified to deposit $25,000 in gold in a certain place and he could have the boy all safe and sound. Otherwise the lad would be tortured or killed. The request was complied with and the boy came home early Thursday morning. No clue to the kidnappers has yet been obtained

The Terrible Tariff.

For years the protective tariff people made many voters believe that tariff was not a tax. They advocated that doctrine in season and out of season. The free traders tried hard to convince people that "Tariff is a tax" and after awhile succeeded in their efforts. It is not so much the fact, that tariff tax, is awfully misused; it is used to cover up too many sins; and the voters are beginning to get their eyes opened to that fact.

Before election it is hard to get some people to read an article that is not exactly in harmony with the party principles that they intend voting. But after election they are not worked up to so high a pitch but that they may occasionally read something, and give it a little thought of their own.

Tariff is a tax levied on export duties into this country, for helping raise revenue with which to run the government. People are met at the ports where they land and custom officers figure up what they shall pay for the privilege of bringing their goods and wares into the country. Some people try to get their goods in without the custom officers seeing them. All kinds of tricks are resorted to in order to avoid paying duty. This is a crime, and severe punishments await those caught smuggling goods across the line. People who do such things are looked upon as little if any better than robbers who pick other people's pockets, or defraud, and cheat when opportunity presents. Smuggling, avoiding payment of tariff is condemned by honest people.

And yet a few years ago William Henry, of Minneapolis, one of the great and eloquent orators favoring protective tariff, in a speech in Delano, advocated the idea that because people didn't know they were paying tariff tax when they bought goods, it was the easiest way to collect taxes and all right. He illustrated the case by telling how he used to carry water with his brother, placing the pail on a pole. He being behind slipped the bail along towards his brother's end of the pole, his brother not seeing him was soon carrying the whole load. He didn't seem to see anything wrong about that. But he didn't get to be governor.

This fall Page Morris came around and advocated the same doctrine. He claimed that a tariff tax was all right, that; "Nobody ever grumbles about tariff taxation, we never know we are paying it, if we do pay it." We don't believe the people ever returned Page Morris to Congress for that part of his speech; but in spite of it, because they wanted to uphold McKinley in his administration of affairs just at the time.

If it is wrong for people to "smuggle" goods into the country and cheat the government out of its just dues, it is certainly as wrong for a congressman to assist in levying a tax because "nobody ever grumbles about tariff taxation, we never know we are paying it, if we do pay it."

Merry Christmas.

Value of Fortified Canal.

From the Duluth News Tribune we clip the following quotation from Vice Admiral Sir John Fisher, comander-in-chief of the British Mediterranean station and formerly in command of the North American and West Indies station, who said:

"America does not need to forify the Nicaragua canal for the purpose of keeping ships out of it during war. No captain, much less the admiral, would permit any vessel under his charge to enter a canal within the sphere of hostilities. Such an act would convict any man of unfitness to hold a naval position of responsibility.

"The Nicaragua canal during time of war between the United States, and any other power, would be a death trap. Could anything prevent America from employing a little dynamite for disabling the waterway and leaving the hostile vessels high and dry? Canals depending for their efficiency upon locks and lifts can be made useless in an hour. Even if no locks existed in the Nicaragua canal, the overhanging rocks could be blasted down in quantities large enough to render the passage of any ship impossible.

"Leaving this method of warfare out of the question, how could vessels emerge from the canal if a hostile fleet waited outside? Is it not all a question of supremacy at sea?"

But in case of war with England who has a more powerful navy (in numbers and colums of newspapers) than ours, the canal would come in very handy to the holder, and if there were no fortifications of defence what would prevent England taking the canal?

Fortifications on each end of the canal would tend to strengthen our navy. We could have a dozen boats on either end of the canal when ever the necesity called, while the opposite end would have a fort, able to withstand the assault of a navy for some time, and in this way our small fleet could cope with a fleet of twice its number. Is it any wonder that England's officials are offering such blind suggestions as: "The Nicaragua canal during time of war between the United States, and any other power, would be a death trap".

But with the English Admiral talking, I do believe that he does not include England, because, he says: "Between the United States and any other power." And besides being an officer in the British Navy, would it not be his duty to his Queen and country to do what he could to prevent any other country making such defences of water-ways, that he could, with a fleet sail over and take, if the defences had not been constructed?

With our canal protected with forts and block houses would it not prevent anyone from blocking our own canal and rendering it useless to us? In building the canal in the first place, we do not build it for the benefit of anyone but the United States do we? If so, why do we want to pay for it? Has this country become so great that she can build canals for the benefit of other nations, at the expense of her people?

We are building that canal so as to have a shorter water-way, for our vessels from our western coast to our easter coast, and thus make our navy more powerful, that is have it closer together and easily transfered from one coast to the other; then to think of taking an Englishman's advice to not fortify the only water-way that can make such a vast difference in our naval strength. The British know that deplomacy is needed to keep her power on the sea, and she is using it.

The question is not, "whether or not we could prevent an enemy's boat from passing, but it is how can we protect our water-way for our own use?

Who is it?

In the Buffalo Journal of last week we find a little squib, which in itself, means nothing but that the writer has discovered, by my article of two weeks ago that I have had poor success in collections. And then winds up by saying: "The Gazette should offer a large sized prize for anyone who does understand the article—there would be no takers."

As a matter of fact the man who wrote that article must be a grafter; and having discovered the meaning, is blind enough to think for one minuite, that the GAZETTE will, upon his suggestion, offer a prize for him, a man of the "full dinner pail" party to pounce upon and satisfy his desires (for we see no full dinner pails being thrown around unless a little more energy has been expended to secure the same, than for some time past) that he cherished so much before election.

One week before this, the same man (or at least the same paper) uses up about a column explaining how she will maintain certain prices, etc., says:

"The editors are not in the hold up business but it costs a good deal to publish a paper and the expenses goes on in bad as well as good times. Many weeks there is considerable loss on fixed expenses and there must be something to even it up or the business will be closed out by the Sheriff eventually. By rigid economy in personal expenses and doing two men's work many editors are furnishing papers to their towns but there is no reason why they should do so."

Now what does this mean? if not that the present times are so hard and pressing that the Journal (with the rest of the papers) must uphold her prices or be subject to a sheriff's sale? And then wants the GAZETTE, the oldest democratic paper in the 4th Senatorial district, to offer a prize to the solver, of what the Journal seems to think is "a column and a half of nonsense mostly of the ancient bugaboo character." What for? to save the Journal from utter ruin and distruction or a sheriff's sale? No wonder the editor is ashamed of his name and does not carry it at the head of his editorial column. No Journal we will not do this.

The Journal starts out in the little squib as follows: "Catlin Jr. of the Delano GAZETTE has tried to collect some of his father's doator bills." Suppose the author of that suspend operations a couple of days soak his head in a bucket of bread and milk, take the advice given two weeks ago which he so generously copied, and then explain the cause of the crisis of '37.

The course the Journal has taken in the last two weeks reminds me of the course of a sailor with about four sheets in the wind, and without a rudder.

The Question of Honor.

The identity of the cadets who hazed Booz is probably known to every one who was in the Academy at that time, certainly to every cadet in the same class with the hazers. While we do not expect any betrayal of this knowledge, we have a right to expect that the sense of military honor will compel the hazers to come forward and face their responsibility like men. Neglect refusal or even delay in preforming this simple act of courage leaves the whole Military Academy under public censure and will prove a serious detriment of the whole military service.

On questions of honor and courage the sense of the average civilian is quite as keen and accurate as that of the soldier, and it is the sense of this justice-loving nation that the regrettable Booz affair shall not be made infinitely worse by involving West Point in a policy of suppression or evasion, and, above all, of falsehood and cowardice.

It is not any question of "honor," but only of ordinary manhood, which insists that the Booz hazers shall stand up and "take their medicine," just as they made poor Booz take his —World.

IS LITTLE BOB TUCKED IN?

"I've gotter go," she said, "an' see
If little Bob's tucked in;
He'll git his death if he's uncovered
In this col' storm an' win'."
"Oh, little Bob's all right," said I,
"You've been to tuck him in
Four times this evenin', an' I wouldn'
Run 'way upstairs ag'in."
But Cynthy'd worry; fret an' stew,
An' raise a dreffle din;
"W'y, I mus' go ag'in," says she,
"An' see if Bob's tucked in."

"W'y, Cynthy, jest set down," I said,
"An' git some good er life;
A feller wants a chance to talk
Some evenin's with his wife."
Then she would take her knittin' out,
Or work upon her spread,
An' make b'lieve lissen, though she didn'
Hear quarter w'at I said.
She wouldn't much more than git set down
Than jump right up ag'in,
An' say: "I mus' run up and see
If little Bob's tucked in."

Young Bob was allus on the jump,
An' filled the house with din,
An' kicked his quilts off ev'ry night
Fast as she tucked him in.
His legs they went so fast all day,
As long as it was light,
An' got up speed so they couldn't stop,
An' kep' a-goin' all night.
So Cynthy'd keep a-gettin' up,
An' gittin' up agin;
"I've got to look an' see," says she,
"If little Bob's tucked in."

She stood above the casket there,
She bent to kiss his face,
An' pat a straggling curl of hair,
Or fix a bit of lace.
Her heart was breakin' with the thought
That Bob, so round an' fat,
So full of pranks an' fun, should sleep
Within a crib like that;
But still she'd fix his little robe,
An' then come back ag'in.
An' take a long, last look, an' see
Her little Bob tucked in.

That night a storm er snow came on,
An' how the winds did rave!
The snow fell, like a coverlid,
On little Bob's new grave.
"I'm glad it snows," his mother said,
"It looked so hard an' bare,
So hard, so cruel, an' so bleak,
I cried to leave him there.
But God has sent the blessed snow,
I think—an' 'tis no sin—
That He has sent His snow to see
That little Bob's tucked in."

—Sam Walter Foss, in Boston Journal.

A Chinaman's Gratitude

"WELL, there's one good thing about a Chinaman, anyhow—he's grateful," reminiscently remarked a Washington man who put in a couple of cruises as an apothecary in the United States navy. "You may, of late, in the great mass of rubbish that's been written about the slant-eyes, have seen that fact disputed; but I just happen to know that a Chinaman's grateful. However, in order to make the point clear I'll have to begin at the beginning. So here goes:

"When I was serving on board a cruiser on the Pacific station I had as a shipmate a private marine named—oh, well, Tom Kingsley's near enough to it; some of his people, of good station, are still living in Philadelphia, and this boy hurt them enough, so we'll just make it Tom Kingsley. Kingsley was sent to the ship with a detachment of marines quite awhile after I was attached to the vessel. I noticed him particularly as soon as he came aboard—not so much because he was a tall, broad-shouldered, fine-looking chap, who completely outclassed the bunch he joined with in appearance and bearing, as because I saw what his trouble was as soon as I clapped an eye on him. I understood as soon as I made the discovery why Kingsley was wearing the uniform of a buck private in the marine corps. It was because a slavery to which he had become addicted in civil life had rendered him unfit and incompetent to keep up with the procession in civil life.

"That is to say, I didn't need two looks at Kingsley to see that morphine had him. His gray eyes focussed to pin-points, and he had all of the other exterior indications of the man chained in the morphia bondage.

"At the inspection on the Sunday following Kingsley's coming aboard I watched my immediate chief, the ship's surgeon, narrowly to see if he was going to get on to Kingsley when he passed by the marine in following after the commanding officer. When the surgeon passed by the row of marines, eyes straight ahead, I observed that he gave one sharp glance at Kingsley, and that was all.

"Below, in my storeroom, after inspection, the surgeon looked at me out of the tail of his eye.

"'Have you noticed that marine, apothecary?' he asked me.

"'Yes, sir,' I replied.

"'Hum—I'm glad to be corroborated—yet I was sure I couldn't have been mistaken,' said the surgeon. 'Better have an extra eye to your store of morphia—keep it under cover.'

"However, Kingsley didn't become incapable. He was an admirable soldier of the sea. He was always right on the minute, a top-notcher on guard duty, a spick-and-span man always. The marine officer in charge of the guard never, of course, suspected that there was anything wrong about Kingsley, and he thought so much of the man's faithfulness that he had him made a corporal a couple of months after Kingsley joined us. Kingsley was always under the influence of the drug, of course. He never ran out of the stuff. You know how morphine slaves provide against that awful contingency. He kept on edge all the time, and never appeared to overshoot his limit. Kingsley surely was a man of powerful self-control in that respect. However, I knew that it would get him in time, and throw him. It always does throw its victims if they give it rope enough, you know, and morphine is one of those things that just demands all the rope it wants.

"Kingsley knew by intuition that I knew about his habit, and he avoided me very elaborately. One noon-hour, however, I happened to be smoking a pipe at the gangway. Kingsley was looking out over the beautiful harbor of Acapulco in his dreamy, dopey way—his way, that is to say, when he was off duty. Well, I edged over to Kingsley. We were quite apart from the rest of the men.

"'Bucko,' said I, in as kindly a way as I could—I felt sorry for Kingsley, who was most obviously a gentleman—'you want to cut it out. You do for a fact. It'll nail you. It's a game you can't beat. Nobody can beat it. I can reduce you gradually—eighth of a grain a day. Better let me take hold of you. It'll be on the quiet.'

"'That's good of you, pal,' replied Kingsley, never taking his eyes away from the horizon to look at me. 'I won't forget it. But I've tried reducing before. I'm going to make the fight alone. I'm going to hang on if it kills me. Death is only a little thing, anyhow, compared to this slavery. When we hike away from here for the islands next week, I'm going to heave all I've got of the stuff over the side. Then it'll be me or the powder. I'll do the best I know. I'll be trying to win, anyhow. Much obliged to you, all the same.'

"'Bad job, breaking it off all of a sudden,' I told him. 'Dangerous at that. Yet you're a pretty husky looking fellow. You may beat it.'

"I was pretty skeptical about it, but I didn't want to discourage him. Well, the mudhook came up ten days later, and away we went to Honolulu. We started in the morning. I didn't see Kingsley until along toward night. He looked pretty bad, too. I knew that he was making the fight.

"'Kingsley'll be coming to me for the stuff to-night,' I thought. 'He's been taking 30 or 40 grains a day, and he won't be able to stand it. But I'll be beached if it's found out that Ire given him a sixteenth of a grain. I'm sorry for Kingsley, but I wouldn't be able to help him out.'

"Well, Kingsley didn't come to me until along toward two o'clock on the following morning.

"'Just an injection,' he whispered to me, hoarsely. 'I'm going insane.'

"I couldn't, and I told Kingsley so as decently as I could. It hurt me to turn him down, but I couldn't take the chance. He shuddered all over, and staggered out of my little store room.

"Right for'ard of my store room was the store room of Wang Woo, the skipper's steward. Wang, of course, hit the pipe. Most Chinamen in the navy do, in the midnight privacy of their store rooms, but no official notice is taken of that. It's looked upon as part of the Chinaman's game. Well, Kingsley stumbled into Wang Woo's store room. Woo was cooking himself a pill in the dark. I heard Kingsley beg the Chink for a little of the gummy stuff, offering to give up a month's wages for it. Woo passed him up, and Kingsley stumbled forward, almost mad, as he had a right to be. He'd already have been insane had it not been for his great natural strength.

"At nine o'clock that morning, the hour for sick call, I saw Kingsley come down the after ladder, looking frightful. His face was drawn to a knot from his sufferings. One of the gun divisions was breaking out the after magazines, the hatches to which were right at the foot of the after ladders. The hatches were wide open. Kingsley, coming down the after ladder, saw that they were open. But Wang Woo, coming around from the ward room at a little lope, to answer the call of the skipper's messenger above, was looking aloft through the main hatch to see the messenger boy, and he didn't see the open magazine hatches. Well, he had one foot already over one of the hatches, and was just about to plunge to the bottom of the fixed ammunition magazine, when the collar of his blouse was gripped by the hand of a man whose muscles were like iron. I mean Kingsley. Kingsley raised Wang Woo bodily to the ladder steps. Wang Woo almost fainted when he saw the danger he had been in, but he smiled blandly at Kingsley, and Kingsley followed him into the Chinaman's store room.

"Why, of course, Chinamen are grateful. Kingsley didn't report himself sick at all. He emerged from the Chinaman's store room ten minutes later, looking quite chipper, comparatively, and his eyes were focussed to pin points until we got to Honolulu. Then Kingsley went ashore, took an overdose with all the deliberation in life, and was found dead in bed at a little hotel in Waikiki, with suitable letters, telling about his people, sealed and addressed to the skipper, on the table beside him.

Hunting a Tiger.

An English missionary to British Guiana penetrated a few years ago to the remoter settlements of those tropical wilds, where he was entertained by a half-breed settler. He reports one story told him there on a rainy day. The story is of interest for its dialect, as well as for its adventure:

Hanging over the fence about the cabin was a huge tiger skin. We had arrived only a few days after the animal was killed. "Tell us about it," I said, for, like the Athenians of old, we had nothing else to do just then but to tell or hear something new

"Well," said Alec, "nebba trouble trouble till trouble trouble you. Dis fellow trouble a' we too much. He came in de night and steal de pork. He came 'gain and take a' we fowl. So we say: 'We no clea' groun' fo' monkey fo' run 'pon, and we no rear fowl fo' tigah to eat. So we must catch he one dem nights.'

"Three of us get guns, we climb 'pon tree, and we wait, and we say: 'Ebery day debil help tief, one day God mus' help watchman.' By and by we hear noise, massa. Tigah come carrying hog 'tween he teet'. Bang! Tigah stop, tigah growl. Bang! Tigah roll ober. He keep still, but we say: 'Ebery shut eye no sleep.' We gib he one more. Bang! He dead fo' true. We haul he up. Dere he skin. 'No ketchee, no habee.'"

Kazymierz Jasynski and Maryanna Iwaszkiewicz were married in Chicago recently. Two imported souls with but a single thought, two names that look like an alphabet struck by lightning.

Dr. Annie Langworthy, of the Century club of New York, says that self-confidence is the secret of longevity. Then there are some people who ought to live a thousand years without turning a hair.

Gen. Joseph Wheeler's successor in the house of representatives is William Richardson, who was once sentenced to be hanged as a confederate spy by Gen. Crittenden, but who was recaptured before the sentence could be executed.

The race question in the United States has been a most serious one ever since the introduction of railroads. It is estimated that no less than 10,000 are carried nightly on trains and that 10,000 more are waiting to steal a ride at the same time.

According to a decision of the New York supreme court, if you are in a game of poker and loan money to another player with which to pay a gambling debt you cannot collect the amount at law. It remains for Hoyle to accept the ruling.

John L. Sullivan says he has one enemy and "that's the booze," but says he is through with it. John Barleycorn has knocked out many a stronger man than John L. and the latter will be wise not to enter the ring with John B. again.

Dr. Joseph Parker is now to follow Sheldon's example and run a London afternoon paper a week, as he thinks it ought to be run. If every man who thinks he knows how to run a newspaper better than the editor were to be given a turn professional editors would have a long vacation.

In describing the girl who undertook to ride a bull to pay an election bet the correspondents have no hesitation in saying that she is young and pretty, but it is worthy of note that none of them has the nerve to assert that she possesses any common sense.

It is claimed by experts that the new 12-inch gun recently made and tested for the navy is the most powerful gun in the world. At the trial test it fired a projectile weighing 850 pounds with a muzzle velocity of nearly 2,700 feet per second. Its maximum range at an elevation of 45 degrees is 21 2-10 miles. Speedy warships armed with such guns as that, with American gunners behind them, will be formidable fighting machines.

Juan Valera, a Spanish novelist and statesman of some note, has started a magazine called "The Old Folks," it being intended as a protest against the eccentricities and self-advertisement of the "young school." It will uphold the old established standards of art and language, and no contributor will be less than 55 years old. The editor believes that the "new man" as well as the "new woman" has gone too far.

After all, what is the use in striving to solve universal problems? The wife of a Chicago policeman has no sooner settled to her satisfaction the eternally vexing question of keeping a servant girl than the law steps in and threatens prosecution for her smartness. Any woman who can keep a modern domestic six years without paying her a cent of salary or allowing her Thursday afternoons and Sundays out seems to have won a grand prize rather than a prosecution.

Official reports show that the Hessian fly, so fatal to wheat crops, has appeared in every winter-wheat state east of the Rocky mountains. In most sections the season has been favorable for the growth of wheat. In some states the growth has been so luxuriant that farmers have turned their stock into the wheat. Prior to last year the fly did little damage to wheat in this country. Last year the pest was more numerous and destructive. This season the pupa of the fly is present in quantities sufficient to cause solicitude.

War sometimes develops the finest feelings and the most generous emotions of the human heart. Admiral Cervera sent a message of sympathy from Madrid to Hobson, who was dangerously ill in a New York hospital. Hobson was the man who undertook to blockade the mouth of Santiago harbor and thus shut in the Spanish fleet and leave it a comparatively easy prey to the American forces. For Hobson's bravery he was treated with distinguished consideration by Cervera while a prisoner, and in admiration of his act sends his expression of sympathy.

The question of employing swallows instead of pigeons to carry dispatches has been considered in France. The aptitude of the swallow for the work is held to be even greater than that of the pigeon. They fly to a greater height and are therefore less exposed to being shot, and they travel faster, making good nearly 80 miles an hour, where a pigeon would only get over 50. It is also claimed for them that they are more faithful, intelligent and have not on long journeys to stop to feed, as the pigeon has. It is asserted that the swallow can be more easily trained.

A BOER VICTORY.

Desperate Battle at Nooitgedacht in Which British Are Forced to Retreat.

London, Dec. 15.—Lord Kitchener reports that after severe fighting at Nooitgedacht Gen. Clements' forces were compelled to retire by Commandant Delarey with a force of 2,500 men Five British officers were killed.

London, Dec. 17.—Lord Kitchener's message to the war office is as follows:

"Pretoria, Dec. 14.—Clements brought in his force to Commando Nek, unopposed The casualties were, I regret to say, heavy—killed, five officers and nine of other ranks; missing, 18 officers and 555 of other ranks. These latter were four companies of the Northumberland fusiliers, who were stationed on the hill, and some yeomanry and other details sent up to support them Names and nature of wounds are being telegraphed from Cape Town.

"Broadwood's brigade took no part in the engagement. The Boers suffered severely Knox drove De Wet north to the Thaban chu-Ladybrand line, which was held by our troops. De Wet's force, about 3,000 strong made several attempts to get through during the day, assisted by a force of Boers operating from the north. These attacks were driven back, though some of the Boers from the south were able to get through the line."

London, Dec. 17.—The following dispatch has been received by the war office from Lord Kitchener:

"Pretoria, Dec. 16.—Five officers and 311 men, Magaliesberg prisoners, have been released.

"The Boers surrounded and captured 120 of Brabant's horse in a defile in the Zastron district.

"Col. Bomfield, moving on Vryheid, defeated the Boers with heavy loss, driving them from Schepers Nek and capturing a quantity of arms. The Schepers Nek movement occurred December 13.

"The Boers who attacked Vryheid, December 10, lost 100 killed and wounded before they retired. The fighting lasted all day, the enemy drawing off at 7:30 p. m. The British loss was six killed, 19 wounded and 30 missing. Our casualties include two officers, who died of their wounds."

London, Dec. 18.—The report of another severe battle, resulting in a British victory, is current here. According to the story the fighting began at daybreak Monday and lasted for several hours. The Boers, who numbered from 1,500 to 2,000 men, were surrounded at the Orange river and totally defeated with very heavy losses in killed and wounded. A number of Boers, it is added, were captured.

AMENDS THE TREATY.

Senate Deals a Heavy Blow at the Hay-Pauncefote Nicaraguan Canal Agreement.

Washington, Dec. 14.—Behind locked doors the senate at three o'clock Thursday afternoon by a vote of 65 to 17 decided to amend the Hay-Pauncefote treaty by inserting the additional section reported last spring by the committee on foreign relations, which is popularly known as "the Davis amendment." The action is the most significant taken by the senate in many years. It is at direct variance with the wishes of the administration and will have, in the opinion of most students of international law, an effect upon the Nicaragua canal project that may prevent its consummation. The Davis amendment is as follows:

"Insert at end of Section V, of Article 2 the following: 'It is agreed, however, that none of the immediately foregoing conditions and stipulations in sections numbered one, two, three, four and five of this article shall apply to measures which the United States may find it necessary to take for securing by its own forces the defense of the United States and the maintenance of public order.'"

This amendment, it is believed, will render the treaty objectionable to Great Britain.

Washington, Dec. 15.—The senate committee on foreign relations Friday held a special meeting and decided to recommend further amendments to the Hay-Pauncefote treaty. The committee adopted an amendment suggested by Senator Foraker, which declares that the Hay-Pauncefote treaty supersedes the Clayton-Bulwer treaty and also strikes out the Hay-Pauncefote agreement article 3, which permits the submission of the Hay-Pauncefote treaty to other powers and invites their acceptance of it.

A TOWN LOOTED.

Five Men Lock Up Town Marshal of Brighton, Ill., Rob Four Stores and a Bank.

St. Louis, Dec. 17.—Five unidentified men, garbed as tramps, who asked shelter in the calaboose at midnight Friday, overpowered the village marshal of Brighton, Ill., locked him in a cell, and then broke into a bank and two stores. They attempted to get into the vault of Blodgett Bros.' bank, in which there was a large amount of money, but were unsuccessful, although the strong box was partially wrecked by several explosions of dynamite. Failing there, the robbers entered the general store of E. Butler, where they broke into the safe and secured $100. Soon after entering another store, Butler's store was discovered on fire. Before the flames were subdued a loss of several thousand dollars resulted. The robbers then escaped on a hand car. When the marshal was liberated he organized a posse and started after the robbers with bloodhounds. Brighton is a village of 1,000 inhabitants, northeast of Alton, Ill.

Daring Bank Robbery.

Canal Dover, O., Dec. 14.—Four masked men held the town of Shanesville, four miles west of here, at bay early Thursday morning while they robbed the private bank of John Deerschuck, blowing open the safe with a heavy charge of nitroglycerin, and then made their escape with the contents of the vault. They left the town on a Wheeling & Lake Erie hand car, carrying with them between $3,000 and $4,000. Three of the robbers were later arrested on a train at Bridgeport, O.

Loss Not So Great.

Madrid, Dec. 18.—An official dispatch from the prefect of Malaga shows the loss of life by the foundering on Sunday of the German training frigate Gneisenau off Malaga to be less than has been reported. According to this dispatch 35 fatalities resulted from the accident and 100 persons were injured.

Jury Fails to Agree.

Eldorado, Kan., Dec. 15.—Jessie Morrison's trial for the murder of Mrs. G. Olin Castle, whose life she is charged with having taken because of her love for Castle, ended Friday at noon in a hung jury. The jury stood nine for acquittal and three for murder in the fourth degree.

MINNESOTA NEWS.

Company Complies.

The Twin City Rapid Transit company has at last complied with the Somerville law, which imposes a tax on foreign corporations. The company has made several tenders of the fee to the state treasurer, but its offers have been declined. Recently an offer of $1,025 was made. This was on the basis of $2,000,000, which was represented as the company's capital on the basis of its business in the state. Treasurer A. T. Koerner refused to accept this, but after a conference between the governor, attorney general, treasurer and Attorney Munn for the street railway company, a compromise was reached on the basis of the assessed valuation of the twin city and Stillwater lines.

This total assessment is $4,600,000. The Somerville law calls for a filing fee of $50 on the first $50,000 and $5 on every $10,000 or fractional part thereof. This will mean that the street car system will pay $2,325, instead of $1,025, first offered.

She Was First.

Miss Anna Holl, of Minneapolis, was the real thing at the opening up of the White Earth Indian reservation at Crookston. She left the city accompanied by her two brothers, all of whom intended to file on locations when the reservation was thrown open. When they arrived at Crookston the two brothers, seeing the proposition that they were up against, backed out. The young lady, however, stayed right with the posession, and was the third person in line, after standing up all night, when the doors of tha land office were opened.

Miss Holl has taken up this land with the idea of running a ranch of her own, and will at once start in to cultivate her soil. Having formerly taught school at Godahl, Minn., she also hopes to devote a few months of each year in such work where she now is located.

A Bad Cave-in.

There was a bad caving in of one of the walls of the new Peavey annex on Rice's Point in Duluth. The annex is composed of 15 bins of concrete consuruction with intermediate bins between.

They are 90 feet in height and 35 feet in diameter, and hold about 75,000 bushels of wheat each.

Evidently there was some defact in the wall, for it gave way at a point some distance down from the top, and a great mass of concrete and grain crashed into the bin adjoining, which was practically empty.

This mass struck the opposite wall of the circular bin and plugged a big hole in it, and through this some of the concrete debris and and about 3,000 bushels of grain poured out on the ice.

Took First Honors.

First honors at the Chicago cattle exposition have been awarded to Minnerota, all due to the exhibit made by the Minnesota College and School of Agriculture, the prices in all aggregating $885. Of this sum $600 was won out of the prizes amounting to $1,000 offered by Clay, Robinson & Co., Chicago.

This commercial house stipulated in offering the prizes that the amounts could only be awarded on stock that was owned by agricultural colleges for at least six months prior to the exhibition, the animals during that time to be fed and tended by members of such colleges. The other $225 was won in open contests against the world.

Bodies Were Petrified.

Many of the people in Ely, who have friends and relatives buried in the old burying ground south of town have been engaged in removing them to the new cemetary, east of the city, and, very much to their surprise, have discovered that there have been several instances of petrifaction. The remains of Mr. Polkinghorn and of Mr. Penglass were found in a remarkable state of preservation. The features and clothing of both of the men looked as fresh as the day they were laid to rest, and it took five men to remove their remains from the grave.

Architect Gilbert Satisfied.

The work of the construction on the new state capitol dome has been discontinued until spring owing to the instruction of Architect Cass Gilbert. Mr. Gilbert says that the bell of the dome should not be constructed until the walls of the building have thoroughly settled. A careful examination has shown that so far the walls have settled but one-sixteenth of an inch. The capitol commission passed the November estimates of Butler, Ryan & Co., amounting to $23,623.88 on the dome, and $10,000 on general construction.

"Y" Law Sustained.

The United States supreme court affirmed the supreme court of Minnesota in the case of the Wisconsin, Minnesota & Pacific Railway company against Jacobson, involving the constitutionality of the state law providing that where roads cross each other at grades, suitable connections shall made.

The case is known in Minnesota as the "Y" case. It involves directly the construction of connection at Hanley Falls, Minn., but bears on all similar matters.

The opinion was delivered by Justice Peckham.

News in Brief.

Funds are now being collected for a monument to be placed over the late Bishop Gilbert's grave. The movement is confined to the Sunday schools in the Episcopal diocese of Minnesota, and the school children are the only contributors.

Nearly 600 arrests have been made by the Winona police up to date this year. Of this number 377 were for drunkenness.

HE WAS CONSIDERATE.

The Subject Was Painful But He Had to Enter His Objections.

In every up-to-date and well-regulated hotel the force of waiters is rigidly disciplined and each one is intrusted with special duties aside from those of the dining-room. The disciplinary system at one of Detroit's prominent hotels is as severely exact almost as that controlling a body of soldiers. The head waiter is an Irishman with a thick brogue and every morning before the duties of the day begin he lines his men up in the dining-room and impresses upon them the rules of the establishment and lectures them as to their behavior. He looked unusually serious the other morning as he stood before the soberly-dressed waiters and nervously flapped the ends of his swallow-tail coat, says the Detroit Free Press.

"Gintlemin," he began, "O'im obloiged teh make a few rema-arks this mornin' an a subject that is very painful teh me, an' wan that consarns all iv yez voitally. It has bin repoorted an good atority that wan iv yez (Oi won't say which wan) has bin so da—Oi mane indiscrate—as teh be makin' dipreca tory rema-arks about th' prop-proyter iv this hotel an' th' way 'tis conducted. He Addressed the Jury.

A man who had never seen the inside of a courtroom until he was introduced as a witness in a case pending in one of the Scottish courts, on being sworn, took a position with his back to the jury and began telling his story to the judge. The judge, in a bland and courteous manner, said: "Address yourself to the jury, sir." The man made a short pause, but, notwithstanding what had been said to him, continued his narrative. The judge was then more explicit, and said to him: "Speak to the jury, sir; the men sitting behind you on the benches." The witness at once turned around, and, making an awkward bow, said with perfect gravity: "Good morning, gentlemen."—Buffalo Courier.

A Great Drive.

There was a loud, hissing noise. The heavens were brilliantly lighted. The man with the crimson coat and the long leather bag stopped and looked upward. He saw what seemed to be a ball of fire coming directly toward him, leaving a long, red streak behind it. Before he could move out of his tracks he heard the object strike the earth a few feet away, and after a short search he found a grayish ball, perhaps 1½ inches in diameter. He stood for a moment gazing thoughtfully down at it. Then he raised his hat, scratched his head solemnly and said: "Holy St. Andrew! What a drive that was!"—Bangor News.

He Feared to Presume.

The American tourist is so firmly convinced that he is being cheated on all hands during his European travels that he occasionally oversteps the bounds of prudence.

"What is the price of this pin?" asked a young man in a Paris shop, handling a small silver brooch of exquisite workmanship.

"Twenty francs, monsieur," said the clerk.

"That's altogether too much," said the young American. "It's for a present to my sister; I'll give you five francs for it."

"Zen it would be I zat gave ze present to your sister," said the Frenchman, with a deprecatory shrug, "and I do not know mademoiselle!"—The King.

"Jedge," said Mr. Zeke Darkleigh, "I wants to hab dishyere Gabe Snowflake arrested. He done sol' me er kaig er beer, en day ain't nuffin in the kaig but rainwateh."

CHRISTMAS LIKE IT USED TO BE

CHRISTMAS like it used to be!
That's the thing would gladden me.
Kith and kin from far and near
Joining in the Christmas cheer.

Oh, the laughing girls and boys!
Oh, the feasting and the joys!
Wouldn't it be good to see
Christmas like it used to be?

Christmas like it used to be—
Snow a-bending bush and tree,
Bells a-jingling down the lane;
Cousins John and Jim and Jane,
Sue and Kate and all the rest
Dressed-up in their Sunday best,
Coming to that world of glee—
Christmas like it used to be.

Christmas like it used to be—
Been a long, long time since we Wished (when Santa Claus should come),
You a doll and I a drum,
You a book and I a sled
Strong and swift and painted red;
Oh that day of jubilee!
Christmas like it used to be.

Christmas like it used to be.
It is still as glad and free,
And as fair and full of truth,
To the clearer eyes of youth.
Could we gladly glimpse it through
Eyes our children's children do
In their joy-time we would see
Christmas like it used to be.
—Nixon Waterman, in Elliott's Magazine.

A Christmas Wedding.

EVERYBODY knew that old Mrs. Moon was "plumb set" against Tom White. They also knew that Tom was determined to marry Clarissy Moon. The views of Clarissy herself were locked in the breast of that maiden and no one, not even her grandmother, could draw them forth. She listened to the old lady's diatribes against Tom, just as she listened to Tom's ardent wooing and said nothing.

Mrs. Moon, her unmarried daughter and Clarissy lived in a tiny cabin at the foot of the Little Backbone, a very pleasant place in summer, though that season was brief enough in a region which is described by its denizens as having "nine months winter and three months cool weather" each year. In winter the cabin was not a pleasant place of abode. Not only did the snow drift high about it, but the playful winds entered through the crevices which Mrs. Moon was always intending to have filled up and never did. It was lonely in winter, too; not even the most persistent suitor could find his way to it frequently when the trail was obliterated by snow drifts and when night came early and suddenly, too, in the shade of the mountains.

Clarissy was thinking of these things, as she stood at the cabin door one afternoon in the middle of December. It was rather a cool place for meditations, but her Aunt Phoebe was on what her mother was wont to call a "high," and any place was preferable to her immediate vicinity at such a time. Aunt Phoebe's temper, never very sweet, had ill withstood the strain of prolonged spinsterhood, and she vented her maidenly disappointment on the nearest objects, her mother and Clarissy, who were quite innocent in the matter.

"Seems if I cain't please her, nohow," Clarissy was saying to herself, "I cain't bear that air bothersome Tom White, but he's bettern' what she is, anyhow. Sposn' I was t' give him er sign t' come 'n' talk t' me erwhile!" As she hesitated she heard Aunt Phoebe's shrill tones still raised to danger pitch in the cabin. Drawing off the red handkerchief which was knotted coquettishly about her dark hair, she ran down the path and drawing down a branch of the young oak which stood alone, she deftly tied the streamer to it. The handkerchief was Tom's gift and he had begged her to use it as a signal whenever she desired his company. It was the first time she had made use of it, and as she tied it she was assuring herself that she "didn't care er mite fer that great, awkward fellow," but, in spite of that fact, her cheeks rivaled the handkerchief in color. Yielding to a sudden impulse she scurried into the cabin regardless of Aunt Phoebe's tongue.

"I'll peek out'n the window an' watch fer him," she thought, "an' I'll let him cool his heels a bit waitin', before I go out. Anyhow, I ain't promised nothing by tying that handhercher up there."

Clarissy had the sharp ears of the mountaineer and soon she heard steps coming along the trail and finally into the clearing, but she never moved, save to see that her grandmother was dozing in the chimney corner and Aunt Phoebe absorbed with her quilt pieces. The latter had passed from the active to the passive stage of her ebullitions and was now sulking.

The steps approached nearer and nearer.

"Ef that old stupid ain't comin' in yere, after all," Clarissy thought. "Well, granny'll send him off with a flea in his ear if he does, that's all!" and she assumed an air of elaborate indifference.

"Hello, thar!" called a masculine voice scarcely audible to Clarissy for the beating of her heart. She made no move and the call was repeated.

"Ain't ye got no manners, t' let company wait out there that a way," her aunt said, sharply, and poor Clarissy went flying to the door.

There stood, not Tom, but Amos Purdy, a near neighbor, as neighbors go in a thinly settled country, and a widower of two months' standing who had dropped in once or twice of late. He entered now with a sheepish air which to anyone less preoccupied than Clarissy would have proved that he was on courting bent. He took a chair near the door and where he shut out Clarissy's view of the window.

"Right cold day," he ventured, addressing Aunt Phoebe.

"Well, I guess ye can't 'xpect much else, with Christmas only two weeks off," was the ungracious reply.

"Yep, that's so," the visitor responded. Then he relapsed into an embarrassed silence, during which he, with apparent unconsciousness, stared Clarissy out of countenance.

"Ole Zeb White killed er bear last Chuesday," was his next remark, still addressed to Aunt Phoebe. "Biggest one this year, he says. Them Whites is awful liars, though, an' I cain't promise ef he tells th' truth er not."

"Them Whites is a bad stock," Mrs. Moon broke in, suddenly; "one of 'em filled our ole cow full of shot when I was a gal, pretendin' like he thought she was er bear. An' all the satisfaction pap got was puttin' er load o' shot into him, and pretendin' like he thought he was er buck!" She chuckled at the remembrance.

"That air Tom White's goin' t' see Tiny Koontz;" remarked the guest. "I seen 'em walkin' last Sunday. Reckon they'll be gittin' married soon. Seems s'f they'd be a lot of marryin' round yere before long. Er man ain' worth much nowadays 'nless he's got a wife."

Clarissy had turned pale at the bit of news. She rose now, on pretense of getting more wood for the fire and went outside. Aunt Phoebe had suddenly become gracious and the sound of her voice followed the girl as she ran along the trail to the tree which held her token.

"He ain't goin' t' think I want 'im;" she panted, he can go t' his Tiny Koontz, ef he wants to. I don't want 'im—great awkward thing!" She dashed away a tear, as she did so, and saw that the handkerchief no longer fluttered from the branch. Nervously she searched the ground to see if the wind had carried it into a clump of bushes. But no handkerchief was there! Tom had evidently come and gone, without trying to attract her attention.

"An' he's taken th' handkercher t' that air Tiny Koontz!" she said. Then, with head held high, she marched back, meeting Amos face to face, as he came down the path.

"Mighty purty red cheeks ye got, Clarissy," he remarked; "when I git ernother wife she's got t' have red cheeks, I tell ye. Say, d'ye like red apples? I'll fetch ye some when I come this here way agin; you look in that air holler stump, an' ye'll find 'em."

"I jest plum despise red apples, an' I plum despise you, too, Amos Purdy." And she fled to the cabin before the astonished guest had time to make reply.

To her surprise, Aunt Phoebe was in especially good humor. Her mother had been throwing out some very plain hints as to the intentions of Amos regarding herself, which chimed pleasantly with her own opinions on the subject. She giggled mightily, and assured her mother that she "wouldn't look at that ole silly, no, not fer nothing!" But she was mightily pleased, as anyone could see.

In her anger against Tom, Clarissy forgot all about Amos and his red apples, and, indeed, she attached no importance to the offer, anyhow. She, too, was very gay that evening, for she felt that her grandmother's sharp eyes were on her, and she would have died rather than display her futile rage against her faithless lover. She assured herself over and over again that she never cared a straw for Tom, but the fact that she had sent for him and that he had answered her signal only to carry off the present he had given her to take it to another rankled in her breast.

Heavy snow fell the next day and a cold kept her close in the cabin for a week. Amos was the only visitor during that time, and when he came he brought a substantial offering of venison and a brace of rabbits, gifts by no means to be despised, and which Mrs. Moon received most graciously. Aunt Phoebe's eyes shone, but she kept them on the ground in maidenly modesty and was very reserved and coy in her manner. It never occurred to either her mother or herself that Clarissy was the object of Amos' evident intentions.

"I plum got t' have somebody t' keep house fer me soon," the guest remarked. "I ain't much of a cook myself, an' there's lots o' good meat spoilin' at th' cabin now fer want o' a woman t' look after it. I was er good husban' t' my woman while she was livin'," he concluded.

"So ye was, Amos," Mrs. Moon agreed, eagerly; "I always said so." She was overjoyed at the idea of giving up her daughter; she thought delightedly of the quiet life she could lead with only Clarissy. "An', now that air Tom White's out'n th' way, I'll git t'keep her a long time," she reasoned, complacently, as she listened to the visitor's account of what he intended to do for his wife when he married again.

"An' talkin' erbout marryin'; I guess Tom White an' Tiny Koontz'll be gittin' married a Christmas. I seen her with a red hankercher he give her th' las' time I was over there," he went on. It seemed to Clarissy that she would die as she sat there. It was bad enough to tell herself that Tom had given her handkerchief to Tiny, but to hear it as a certainty was worse yet. She made no sign, but when the talk had once more veered around to the apparently inexhaustible subject of Amos' second wife she slipped softly out of the cabin and wandered about in the snow like some wild thing with a mortal hurt. As she was returning an hour later she found Amos patiently awaiting her at the hollow tree.

"I put a lot o' nuts in there and some yellow apples," he announced. "Ef ye don't like red apples ye mus' like yellow ones. Say, Clarissy, sposn' you'n me git married a Chrismus, like what Tom White an' Tilly Koontz is goin' t' do!"

Clarissy never could remember rightly what she said, but Amos construed her answer into consent, and, promising to come with the preacher at seven o'clock on Christmas evening, he went his way.

It was dark when Clarissy came into the cabin, and her grandmother and aunt were in such a state of excitement that they failed to notice her pale cheeks and wild eyes. For they had decided that Amos certainly meant to marry Phoebe and that preparations had better be commenced at once.

"Because widowers don't want t' wait er minute," Mrs. Moon said, sagely; "they makes up their minds quick, an' they expects other folks t' do th' same. I wouldn't be a mite surprised to see 'im come in with th' preacher a Christmas, like what ole Sam Smith did when he got married th' fourth time. Sairy she wasn' 'xpectin' 'em, but she thought she better take 'im when she could git 'im."

Nothing was said to Clarissy, who was regarded as a child by her elders, and she, in her intense preoccupation, failed to notice that the preparations for Christmas were on a much more elaborate scale than usual. She was in a sort of a daze, sometimes determined to marry Amos in order to convince Tom that she cared nothing for him; at others, determined to die before she did such a thing.

Fortunately for her, Aunt Phoebe wanted a quantity of ground pine and red berries with which to adorn the cabin, and as Clarissy knew the sheltered spots where they were likely to be found she was sent out in quest of them. In her anxiety to be alone she made the quest a prolonged one. Amos wisely absented himself from the cabin, a fact which puzzled Mrs. Moon and her daughter not a little. Clarissy gave this fact not a thought; she was quite in ignorance of the fact that Amos was supposed to be the victim of her aunt's bow and spear, and was only thankful to have him out of the way while she wrestled with her problem.

All too soon, it was Christmas eve, and Clarissy went forth for a last load of pine, with which the cabin was already gay. Late in the afternoon, she sat down a moment with her load, still pondering upon the subject which never left her mind. She was in no hurry to return home, for her aunt had gone to the store at the cross roads to make a few purchases and she knew that her grandmother would be dozing and unconscious of the flight of time.

As she sat there, Clarissy let the big tears roll unchecked down her cheeks. It seemed to her now that Tom had left her for another, he had become the one object for which she cared.

"Well, I'll take Amos;" she said, proudly, "an' then nobody 'll know Tom left me fer Tiny Koontz!" As she spoke, she rose from the stump on which she was sitting and came face to face with Tom—Tom pale and haggard, and with a gun over his shoulder, which added to the wildness of his appearance. Clarissy trembled so that she could scarcely stand, but she put on a brave smile.

"That you, Tom," she said, "I—I mus' wish ye well, you 'n Tiny. When ye goin' t' git married—to-morrow?"

Tom put down his gun. "Me 'n who?" he demanded, fiercely.

Clarissy's anger grew at the evasion. "You 'n' Tiny Koontz," she responded. "Amos Purdy, he tole me how you 'n' her was goin' t' get married to-morrow night."

"Amos Purdy tole ye that?"

"Yes, he did; and ye needn't to deny it—I don't care!" All the girl's fierce pride was in arms. "I—I only put th' red handkerchief on th' tree that day because—"

"Because ye wanted t' make er fool er me!" Tom cried, hotly. "Ye had took it down again 'fore I could git there, an' ye give it t' Amos Purdy; he showed it t' me. An' he tole me you 'n' him was goin' t' get married a Christmas, an' ye didn' want no more sight o' me! I on'y wish I'd had my gun that day, an'—"

"Oh, Tom! Tom!" Clarissy and the ground pine were all tangled up in his arms, and Clarissy was crying for pure joy.

"But I tell ye one thing, Clarissy," Tom said, later, "that ole coon did see me with Tiny Koontz that day. I was giving her a message from Walt Thomas over at th' sawmill. Him 'n' her's goin' to git married soon's he gits back."

When Clarissy at last started for home Tom went with her to tell her grandmother that he meant to marry her granddaughter on the following day, with her consent or without it.

"For I ain' goin' t' take no more chances!" Tom affirmed.

Luckily, Aunt Phoebe had not returned when they reached the cabin, and the story was poured out to Mrs. Moon alone. Her dislike for Tom melted away before the idea of Clarissy's marrying Amos, on whom Phoebe had set her heart, and leaving her to bear the brunt of that damsel's rage.

"Tell ye what you do," she said, finally. "You 'n' Tom git ready 't git married to-morrow night an' jest leave Amos t' me when he comes!"

Tom stood out for a personal interview with Amos first, but he was overruled. Just what Mrs. Moon said to that worthy during the few minutes' private talk they had no one ever knew. She said it so convincingly, however, that there was a double wedding in the cabin that Christmas night, and Aunt Phoebe never knew that she was second choice.—Eliza Armstrong, in Banner of Gold.

AND CAME FACE TO FACE WITH TOM.

DOING GOOD.

Earthly Life of Christ a Good One to Emulate—The Story of Scrooge.

To do good is the very salt of life. It is what keeps the love of life from decaying or corrupting. We are told of our Lord that "He went about doing good," and we know that though He was a man of sorrows and acquainted with grief, He had in Him a never-failing source of joy, which from time to time broke forth in enraptured utterances to His Father and in blessing upon mankind. Not the least of the sources of this joy was the knowledge that He was doing good day by day and sowing seeds of happiness in the world which would blossom and bear fruit in after days. The selfish man who lives for himself cannot enjoy life. He is miserable; but let him change and think more of others than of himself and what a difference! How well Dickens puts this in his "Christmas Carol!" At the beginning of the story we have a portrait of Scrooge, a tight-fisted man, hard as a grindstone, sharp as a flint from which no steel had ever struck out generous fire, secret and self contained and solitary as an oyster. Nobody ever stopped him in the street to say, with gladsome looks "How are you?" No beggar implored him for a trifle; no children asked him the time of day. Rich enough he was, but dismal, morose and melancholy. He had never done good to anyone. He had thought and lived only for himself; but he is visited by three ghosts—the ghost of the past, the ghost of the present and the ghost of the future—and they teach him a lesson and he becomes a good friend, a good master and a good man, and opens his heart and his purse to others and, as a consequence, he begins to love the life he once hated and to see the good days he once had no faith in.—Rev. Arthur S. Brooks, M. A., in Central Christian Advocate.

MAKING OTHERS HAPPY.

How We May Enter the Realm of Christmas Joy—Real Spirit of the Season.

There is one self-denial that is so costly that we should deliberate well before we decide to make it. It is the self-denial involved in not entering into the spirit of the Christmas season by doing what we can to make others happy. We can all understand the disposition of the poor seamstress who lived for weeks on the most frugal fare in order that she might enjoy the luxury of making a few Christmas presents to those she loved. Perhaps it was not wise, and she was impairing her own health and efficiency by the self-imposed sacrifice, but we all recognize the nobility of the spirit. Such a woman has the Divine quality that elicits affection because she has it. It is devotion like that which is more lovely to discerning eyes than beauty of face or form, or the possession of accomplishments. Most of us do not have to sacrifice ourselves like that, in order to show our good will and interest in others; but we do not always do it as we might. Too often we suffer our indolence, or thoughtlessness, or unwillingness to have our convenience disturbed, shut fast the door through which we might pass to a ministration and sympathy that would bless others and enrich our own hearts. Whether you have much money or little, you can look around you to see what you can do to make others happier, and in doing it you will find that your own heart enters the realm of Christmas joy.—Boston Watchman.

Outside.

Fate delights in still contrasting
All that comes to mortals here;
Some may feast. The rest are fasting.
For each smile there is a tear.
There are shine and holly berry.
There is hunger's tattered cloak.
There is Christmas when you're merry—
And there's Christmas when you're broke.

When the music, softly playing,
Seems less tenderly to fall
Than the laughter that comes straying
Through the nursery and the hall,
Who shall think that some poor fellow
On the pavement stands afar,
Watching every gleam so mellow
Through your window blind ajar?

When all care is shut behind us
And when love dispels each sigh,
Let some gentle thought remind us
Of the lonely passer-by.
Life to some, though pleasant, very,
Isn't all a gladsome joke.
There is Christmas when you're merry—
And there's Christmas when you're broke.
—Washington Star.

Not That Kind.

"You know what is said about casting your bread upon the waters," said the man with the subscription paper. "After many days it will come back to you."

"Not the kind our cook makes," responded the other man. "It would sink to the bottom like a stone."—Chicago Tribune.

The Christ Child.

You little children, in whose eyes
Undimmed the light of heaven glows,
Whose dreams are bright with paradise,
Whose souls are whiter than the snows,
From holy lips and undefiled
Breathe your soft prayer to Christ the Child!

Schoolhouses in Kansas.

Our Nation's Wealth.

Gold and silver are poured abundantly into the lap of the nation, but our material wealth and strength is rather in iron, the most useful of all metals, just as the wealth of a human being lies in a useful stomach. If you have overworked yours until it is disabled, try Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. It will relieve the clogged bowels, improve the appetite and cure constipation, dyspepsia, biliousness, liver and kidney disease.

A Stolen March.

The famous composer sat in the orchestra chair and listened to the comic opera of his rival. As the chorus roared out a swinging, familiar air, the tears started to the great musician's eyes. "Ah," he said, sadly, "I would not have believed it, but he has stolen a march on me." To those familiar with his works, the truth of this remark would have been apparent.—Princeton Tiger.

AN ENEMY TO DRINK.

One Woman who has Done a Great Deal to put Down this Evil.

Minneapolis, Minn., Dec. 17, 1900 (Special).—When the Independent Order of Good Templars of Minnesota wanted a State Organizer, they chose Mrs. Laura J. Smith, of 1217 West 33rd Street, this city. The American Anti-Treat League also selected Mrs. Smith as National Organizer. The reason is not far to seek. This gifted woman has devoted her life to a battle against Drink and Drinking Habits. Her influence for good in Minnesota is and has been very far reaching.

About two years ago, however, it seemed as if this noble woman would have to give up her philanthropic work. Severe pains in her back and under her shoulder blades, made life a burden and work impossible. Physicians were consulted, and they prescribed for Kidney Disease. Three months' treatment, however, failed to give Mrs. Smith any relief. Her husband was much exercised, and cast about him for something that would restore his good wife to health and strength. He heard of the cures effected by Dodd's Kidney Pills, and advised her to try them, which she did. She is now a well woman and says:

"Two weeks after I commenced taking Dodd's Kidney Pills, I felt much better, and at the end of seven weeks was completely cured. I have had no recurrence of the trouble, but I take a pill off and on, and find that it keeps me in good health."

Dodd's Kidney Pills are for sale by all dealers at 50 cents a box.

They are easily within the reach of all, and no woman can afford to suffer, when such a simple and sure Remedy is at hand.

GOVERNOR OF OREGON
Uses Pe-ru-na For Colds in His Family and Grip.

CAPITOL BUILDING, SALEM, OREGON.

A Letter From the Executive Office of Oregon.

The Governor of Oregon is an ardent admirer of Pe-ru-na. He keeps it continually in the house. In a recent letter to Dr. Hartman he says:

STATE OF OREGON,
EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT,
SALEM, May 9, 1898.

The Pe-ru-na Medicine Co., Columbus, O.:
Dear Sirs:—I have had occasion to use your Pe-ru-na medicine in my family for colds, and it proved to be an excellent remedy. I have not had occasion to use it for other ailments.
Yours very truly, W. M. Lord.

Any man who wishes perfect health must be entirely free from catarrh. Catarrh is well-nigh universal; almost omnipresent. Pe-ru-na is the only absolute safeguard known. A cold is the beginning of catarrh. To prevent colds, to cure colds, is to cheat catarrh out of its victims. Pe-ru-na not only cures catarrh, but prevents. Every household should be supplied with this great remedy for coughs, colds, and so forth.

It will be noticed that the Governor says he has not had occasion to use Pe-ru-na for other ailments. The reason for this is, most other ailments begin with a cold. Using Pe-ru-na to promptly cure colds, he protects his family against other ailments. This is exactly what every other family in the United States should do. Keep Pe-ru-na in the house. Use it for coughs, colds, la grippe, and other climatic affections of winter, and there will be no other ailments in the house. Such families should provide themselves with a copy of Dr. Hartman's free book, entitled "Winter Catarrh." Address Dr. Hartman, Columbus, Ohio.

BUFFALO GAZETTE

DELANO, FRIDAY, Dec. 21, 1900.

OFFICIAL PAPER OF THE VILLAGE OF DELANO.

DELANO DIARY

--A few more Xmas trees at Roban's at lowest possible price.

—G. P. Schaffer has an elegant little pug dog in the line of Christmas toys.

—The Delano Flour Mills shipped a car load of flour to Minneapolis Saturday.

—The St. Anthony Benevolent Society hold their Election on Jan. 5., 1901.

--O. L. Billings just returned from Northfield with 375 lbs of his wife's best candy, fresh.

--A second hand cook stove to sell cheap or trade for wood or hay. Apply at the GAZETTE office.

--Frank Roban has just received a large assortment of fine apples which he will sell at right prices.

—Butter soars, since the creameries control the market. 27 cents per pound makes rather expensive eating.

—The Journal Junior Club has some fancy articles for sale. Any one wishing for such articles call at Miss Julia Cunningham's.

—Services at the M. E. church for a week, by the Student Band, sent out by the Y. M. C. A. Prayer meeting tomorrow evening Saturday, Dec. 22.

-If the egg market is cornered the poultry market is not; and most people can afford a turkey or goose for Christmas this year. They are cheaper than beef steak.

—Henry C. Parslow received yesterday a dozen Hick's Almanacs for 1901. He says he had orders for most of them at 25 cents each. People must think Hick's has something to do with the fine weather.

—The wedding of Prof. Emery M. Cunningham and Miss Rosa Belt has been announced to occur at the home of the bride elect's sister Mrs. George Sutton, on Thursday, the 27th inst. at 12 M.

—The Epworth League had a party at Miss Mollie Maxfield,s last Friday evening, all who attended enjoyed the evening imensly All Leaguers should be on the look out for these parties and attended.

—The Grand Steam Laundry had a few reverses last week, a couple of their pipes were broken and made it impossible for them to work until Thursday. But owing to the rapidity of its proprietors, was able to produde first class work, and on time to make the Saturday trains.

—Diptheria is at work in several places in the state. A number of deaths have occurred. It is well for parents to be on their gaurd. Don't neglect slight ailments of the little folks until they are past help. If any thing is done for diphtheria cases the sooner it is done the better.

—A student band of the Y. M. C. A. is to be in Delano from the 22nd to the 30th of Dec. to hold meetings. Leader E. H. Haig; Chorister, P. M. Walker. Macalester; H. Schweitzer, Hamline; E. C. Graham, State U.: H. G. Crum. These bands are becoming quite popular throuhout the state and are doing good work.

—Christmas trees and Christmas toys in abundance have been sold this year. People seem to take to the notion of having trees at home, instead of the traditional stockings, more and more each year; whether because presents are too numerous and large for the stockings or the stockings to holey to hold the presents we are not prepared to say.

—Some of our farmers are hauling hay from a long distance this winter; others are going with very light feeds for their stock; using more corn, barn, and other feeds. The straw corp is nearly a total failure in this vicinity. It is t good thing for stock that the weather is as mild as it is. When feed is short it seems as a rule that less is needed. "God tempers the wind to the shorn lamb."

—Every little while accounts of the buming of public buildings, hotels, theateres, school houses and so on are to be read in the papers. People shudder and think, how foolish to have risky buildings. But how many of them think of their own little childern cooped up in a sixroom school house with but one double door to get out at. In case of fire near that door all would have to be taken out at windows. How many would get out without being hurt? How many would be killed? The Board of Education should make a back door to the school house at once.

—The best way to build up a village is to build it up. Those needing goods, work, or anything that can be got as well in the village as any other place should patronize home institutions. On the other hand if merchants and others have any snap bargains they should give their regular customers a chance Selling cheap to outsiders to draw trade and charging regular customers enough to make it up, don't pay. All customers, old and new should be treated on an equibibrium. There are trades people in most villages who can't find anything in their home stores or shops good enough for them; they "send below" for nearly every thing they use; or for advice in any line then growl because home business is not kept up. Some lines of business sometimes, do drag, stocks are allowed to run down, proprietors seem to lack energy; then customers are obliged to seek elsewhere fo necessities.

--Speckel & Schaust and Shmidt have completed their ice house.

--Farm produce taken in exchange for groceries at Frank Roban's.

—Billings is prepared to fill orders of all kinds for candy Christmas boxes.

—The Public and the St. Peter schools will take a Christmas vacation until the next century begins.

--Yesterday was hog and catile day in Delano. Many lots of fine stock were purchased and delivered here for shipment.

--For some unaccouutable reason the hens in this neighborhood don't appreciate the fact that eggs are in demand at high prices.

—Bock and Helman threshed for JohnLonguish last Tuesday, a very unusual sight in this locality at this time of the year.

--Mr. Carlson, of Lyndale sold a fine lot of pigs about six months old weighing about 200 lbs apiece. That is pretty good for any pork country.

—The M. E. S. S. Christmas exercises will be held at the church, Monday evening early in the evening, so that the stuten band may have their meeting immedeately after.

—The weather this week has been fine. Good sunshiny days are appreciated by all. Such weather tends to shorten up the terrors of Minnesota winter considerably.

--It is strange that more don't have their childern vaccinated than do When statistics so clearly prove the benefits of vaccination, and small pox is so prevalent in the state, it seems as if those who cared for the lives and health of their childern would have them vaccinated at once.

—Depoist a dollar with us and have the GAZETTE sent to your friend who would be glad to hear from you 52 times a year. Possibly you have several friends. This is a good Christmas gift and the friend will remember you for a whole year for $1.00 Subscribe now; begin with the new year of the 20th century.

We are having examination in all studies this week.

Don't fail to see the Rival Coons tonight. Chatten and Ball the two rival Coons. Mark E. Taylor, acrabat, will amuse all Edward Lewis and Ball, Buck Dancers.

The Irl R. Hicks 1901 Almanac

Whatever may be said of the scientific causes upon which the Rev. Irl R. Hicks bases his yearly forecasts of strom and weather, it is a remarkable fact that specific warnings of every great storm, flood, cold wave and drouth, have been plainly printed in his famous Almanac for many years The latest startling proof of this fact was the destruction of Galveston, Texas, on the very day named by Prof. Hicks in his 1900 Almanac, as one of disaster by storm along the gulf coasts. The 1901 Almanac, by far the finest, most complete and beautiful yet published, is now ready. This remarkable book of near two hundred pages, splendidly illustrated with charts and half-tone engravings, goes as a premium to every subscriber who pays one dollar a year for Hicks' journal, WORD AND WORKS. The Almanac alone is sent prepaid for only 25c.

Vermont Bars Cigarettes.

The passage of the anti cigarette law by the Vermont legislature will create a revolution among the tobacconists of the state after January 1, 1901, when the law goes into effect. The leading tobacconists of Montpelier estimate that the dealers sell from 12,000,000 to 15,000,000 annually. The new law is fashioned after the Iowa law. It provides that whoever manufactures, buys, sells gives, or furnishes to any person or persons cigarettes, etc., shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction shall be fined $20 and 30 days in the house of correction. The new law makes it a misdemeanor to give away a cigarette and thus strengthens the weak point in the old law.—Willmar Tribune.

Litchfied Independent: The village of Winsted will hold a special election next Saturday, says the Hutchinson Times, to the Duluth, St. Cloud, Glencoe & Mankato railway company, to bond the village for $2,000. Winsted people who are said to be on the inside of the deal admit that the Illinois Central company is backing the railway project of Capt. A. H. Reed.

Sherburne County Times: The editors of Wright county met last week and formed an association to be known as the Wright County Newspaper Association. Among its objects is the establishment of uniform rates in legal notices, business locals, society notices etc.

Willmar Tribune: They do say that Jim Hill is in a torment of doubt whether to go to the senate himself or send Clapp there. If he makes up his mind that he can trust the railroad in the hands of his boy he may go himself, otherwise it will be up to Mose.

Board Axe: It is somewhat early in the day to announce David B. Hill, of New York, as the democratic presidential candidate in 1904. When Mr. Bryan refuses to again become the candidate of that party other persons will be considered, but not until then.

Waseca Herald: In these days when eggs are 20 cents a dozen, do poor people remember that one egg has one half ounce of real nourishment, that is, that egg is three-fourths water? Do they also know that one pound of dried beans contains 18 ounces of nourishment? Pork is entirely unnecessary in cooking beans. Cook them several hours in water slightly salted. When baked in this way, they are wholesome, and an excellent food. In other words, one gets six ounces of real food from eggs and cost 20 cents, while he gets 13 ounces of nourishment from one pound of good beans costing less than four cents. If you work for a living, do you see the point?

MANILA, P. I., Nov. 1st, 1900,

We now are back from Manila; from the most terrible march we have experienced in the Islands.

We started from Sinoloan and marched southward across the island. We started with six days rations, but on account of streams and steep mountains, we had to leave three days rations behind. It took us seven days to make the trip so all we had to eat was a handfull of raw rice per day and most of it was moulded During the march the rain pored down night and day so we could not build a fire, it always rains in the mountains during the rainy season.

One hundred and sixty five men were disabled from starvation and loss of sleep. At night we would sit up against a tree and try to sleep as the rain poured down.

Only two men died on the march The last day of our march as we got up on a high mountain where we could see the sea, and the transport awaiting our coming, one man fell dead from joy. When we got to a little town, we fired two volleys into it and captured it without any struggle, so we planted our flag there and went aboard the transport and set sail for Manila where we landed a few days ago. I went through the campaign alright without getting sick.

We got a report that the natives are breaking out again up at Simoloan, so me may have to go back there again.

I would like to stay in Manila it's a paradise in comparison with any city that I have seen before.

Yours sincerely,
SIMON NYSTEDT,

From our Special Correspondent.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 14 1900

Teddy's good is by no means a new thing, but his latest exhibition in that line staggered the old timers around the Capitol. It was a sort of advance notice that Teddy's idea of the Vice Presidency would not square with the fifth wheel notion which has heretofore prevailed, and of innovations to come which promise good "copy" for the correspondents if not calmness and peace for the Senate. A New York lawyer a Mr. Holls - appeared at the Capitol this week and began to industrially buttonhole republican Senators. The Senators, probably because of their shame and disgust, would not at first tell what the man's object was, but it soon leaked out that he was the personal representative of Hon. Theodore Roosevelt. Vice President to be - probably the first ambassador ever sent to the Senate under the same circumstances - and in the name of Teddy he was asking Senators to defeat the ratification of the amended Hay-Pauncefote treaty. The visit of Mr. Holls probably changed no votes, but it afforded much amusement, esecpially to the democrats.

The administration lost interest in the Hay-Pauncefote treaty from the time it became certain that it would be amended, and Senator Hanna informed Senator Billie Mason, and others who pledged themselves to vote as the administration desired during the session of Congress, that they could vote as they pleased on the treaty.

Senator Clay made a long and vigorous speech against the Ship subsidy bill It fairly bristled with unanswerable reasons why the bill ought to be defeated. Among others, that one definite thing known about the measure was that it would take from the Treasury $9,000,000, a year for twenty years to be donated to a few ship owners, which he declared to be a scheme by which "one man's business is to be heavily taxed in order to advance and make more profitable the private business of another citizen." He said in answer to one of the principal claims made by the supporters of the bill: "How those who favor this measure can maintain that the farmers and producers of this country are principal beneficiaries of this bill passes my comprehesion. I am not surprised that at the hearings before the committee not a single farmer or producers appeared to advocate the passage of the bill; and I am not surprised that the ship-owners alone monopolized the time of the committee in pointing out great benefits that would secure to the country from the passage of the bill. An analysis of the bill will demonstrate that they alone are the benficiaries of this legislation." In conclusion, Mr. Clay said: "The principal purpose of the bill is not to increase the merchant marine, but, on the contrary, to make a large donation to and greatly enhance the foreigners the fortunes of the ship owners of the U. S. engaged in the foreign trade.'

The democrats of the House supported the minority of the Ways and Means committee by voting for the motion to recommit the Revenue reduction billl with instructions to make it provide for an annual reduction of at least $70,000,000, but the republicans followed their caucus decree, voted the motion down, and then, of course, the bill as prepared by republican members of the committee was passed.

Although the House Military Committee reported a resolution merely requesting the Secretary of War to acquit the House with the result of the investigation he is making into the death of Oscar L Booz, of Bristol Pa., formally a cadet at West Point, alleged to have been the result of bazing at the hands of his fellow cadets, the House turned down the report and adopted a resolution offered by Representative Wanger, of Pa., who appointed the young man a cadet to West Point, providing for an investigation by a committee of five members of the House.

"Little Billy" Chandler is using his position as Chairman of the Senate Committee on elections to display his vindictiveness toward Mr. Clark of Montana, whose case was generally regarded as having been settled when he resigned from the Senate at the last session. Chandler has asked that the resolution declaring that Mr. Clark had not been duly and legally elected to the Senate, which was reported by the Election committee previous to Senator Clark's resignation be returned to the committee for further action. Senator Bacon was right in declaring Chandler's action in trying to revive this matter as persecution of a private citizen. Chandler's action is said to be the result of his belief that Mr. Clark has been using his influence to prvent Chandler's re-election to the Senate by the New Hampshire legislature, which meets in a few weeks.

The celebration of the centennial of Washington as the Capital of the U. S. was very enjoyable to those who had tickets to White House, the governors were received by the President and some addresses delivered, or to the hall of the House of Representatives, where a joint session of Congress was held and historical addresses delivered by Senators Hoar, Daniel and McComas, and Representatives Richardson, of Tenn., and Payne, of N Y. or to the big evening reception in the Corcoran Gallery of Art; but for the ticketless individual there was only the military parade, under Gen Miles, which might have been considered a big thing in some places, but was quite ordinary for Washington.

THE INCHCAPE ROCK

No stir in the air, no stir in the sea,—
The ship was as still as she could be;
Her sails from heaven received no motion;
Her keel was steady in the ocean.

Without either sign or sound of their shock,
The waves flowed over the Inchcape rock;
So little they rose, so little they fell,
They did not move the Inchcape bell.

The holy Abbot of Aberbrothock
Had placed that bell on the Inchcape rock;
On a buoy in the storm it floated and swung,
And over the waves its warning rung.

When the rock was hid by the surges' swell,
The mariners heard the warning bell;
And then they knew the perilous rock,
And blessed the Abbot of Aberbrothock.

The sun in heaven was shinning gay,—
All things were joyful on that day;
The sea-birds screamed as they wheeled around,
And there was joyance in their sound.

The buoy of the Inchcape bell was seen,
A darker speck on the ocean's green;
Sir Ralph, the rover, walked his deck,
And he fixed his eye on the darker speck.

He felt the cheering power of spring,—
It made him whistle, it made him sing;
His heart was mirthful to excess;
But the rover's mirth was wickedness.

His eye was on the bell and float:
Quoth he, "My men, put out the boat;
And row me to the Inchcape rock,
And I'll pelgue the priest of Aberbrothock."

The boat is lowered, the boatman row,
And to the Inchcape rock they go;
Sir Ralph bent over from the boat
And cut the warning bell from the float

Down sank the bell with a gurgling sound;
The bubbles rose, and brust around.
Quoth Sir Ralph, "The next who comes to the rock
Will not bless the Abbot of Aberbrothock."

Sir Ralph, the rover, sailed away,—
He scoured the seas for many a day;
And now, grown rich with plundered store,
He steers his crouse to Scotland's shore.

So thick a haze o'erspreads the sky,
They cannot see the sun on high;
The wind hath blown a gale all day;
At evening it hath died away.

On the deck the rover takes his stand;
So dark it is they see no land.
Quoth Sir Ralph, "It will be lighter soon,
For there is the dawn of the rising moon."

"Canst hear," said one, "the breakers roar?
For yonder, methinks, should be the shore.
Now where we are I cannot tell,
But wish I could hear the Inchcape bell."

They hear no sound; the swell is strong;
Though the wind hath fallen, they drift along;
Till the vessel strikes with a shivering shock—
O Christ! it is the Inchcape rock!

Sir Ralph the rover, tore his hair,
He cursed himself in his despair.
The waves rush in on every side;
The ship is sinking beneath the tide.

But even in his dying fear
One dreadful sound he see ned to hear,—
A sound as if with the Inchcape bell
The Devil below was ringing his knell.

ROBERT SOUTHEY.

WOLVES are reported to be in large numbers in Anoka county and farmers are planning a wolf hunt on a large scale. There have been reports of several wolves being seen near Rockford lately. No serious or material damage has as yet been reported.

REPORTS state that small pox is prevailing in some of the Northern Minnesota Lumber camps, and laborers who are able to do so are leaving the country as fast as possible A couple of camps are now under quarantine with deputies guarding all the roads leading to them. Every effort is being made to stamp out the disease but it is increasing. Medical facilities are poor. The camp owners are building separate log houses for the sick men, and it is hoped that the disease will not seriously interfere with logging operations during the winter.

THE Nicaragua canal ought to be built and every true American thinks it ought to be built, and are looking forward with eagerness to the day when the much talked of inter-ocean waterway will become a reality. They also think that the United States ought to build the canal and own and protect every foot of it. The people who oppose England's desire to own or fortify part of the canal are not doing so out of hatred for England, but in the interest of unniversal peace to all nations, and happiness and security for the people of the United States in the years to come.

IT seems to be getting popular in the cities for the big stores to distribute Christmas presents, in the line of toys, or various articles of clothing to the poor boys and girls who do not always have the happy time Christmas that the more fortunate children do. This is very commendable and undoubtedly brings joy to many a little boy and girl and causes a wreath of smiles to light up the face of many a poor father and mother who are not able to purchase the articles themselves. The greatest of virtues is charity and this virtue is becoming very apparent among the large city merchants.

THE St. Paul Chamber of Commerce has issued circular letters containing resolutions passed by that body favoring the proposed National Park in the northern part of Minnesota. It would seem wise to preserve as long as possible the trees about the source of the Great Mississippi River. They also propose that an appropriation be asked for from the State to build a monument to the late Hon. C. K. Davis. If any of our State's great men deserve a monument perhaps none do so more than the late Senator Davis. But if the state is to build monuments to her great men where will the line be drawn? And who will draw it?

ARE the people going to sit idly by and have the Great Northern and the Soo railroads try conclusions in the legislature as to who shall be United States senator from Minnesota, or are they going to see that the best men for the place go to Washington? Moses E. Clapp is called the G. N. candidate, while R. G. Evans is supposed to be the Soo's choice. If nobody else takes an interest you may expect St. Paul and Minneapolis, representing the two railroads, to carry off both Senatorships. We believe the majority of the people of the state would prefer to keep Knute Nelson and C. A. Towne to having those city railroad Senators.

THE Boers are causing the English considerable trouble lately in South Africa. A couple commandos have crossed into Cape Colony, the British have met with several reverses; the Cape Colony Dutch are aiding the Boers whenever possible, and taking it all around things look gloomy for Bull. Besides these discouraging reports the British volunteers, yeomanry and collonial troops want to return home, the war is costing $25,000,000 a month and the people of England are beginning to get more and more opposed to the whole affair. The great reception given to the returned officers on their return from the front were somewhat deadened by reports of Boer activity and the glory of the war is beginning to be a very small thing, while the expenses are telling with tremenduous force.

INDIANA people are probably enuious of Kentucky reputation for taking the law in their own hands and dealying out revenge rather than justice. a mob at Rockfort lynched a negro for murder and it afterwards turned out that the man was innocent of the crime. The mob immediately made things right by catching and lynching the guilty party. Lynching may on some occasions save the state and county the expenses generally incurring by a murder trial, but it also creates a reputation for lawlessness and brutality. When these social gatherings go so far as to lynch a man without trial, who protests his innocence to the last gasp, it is time that the law breakers are brought to justice themselves if possible. The crime committed by the mob was in every way as henious as the crime in revenge for which the deed was done. The action of that mob not only shows brutality, and a low state of morality but a race hated or at least an indifference, to the life of one of the race, that ought never to exist in this great republic made up of people of all races.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Regular Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec 21 1900

Mr. McKinley is eating the crow prepared for him by the Senate when it throughly Americanized the Hay Pauncefote treaty before ratifying it as though he enjoyed crow as much as he did Christmas turkey. But that isn't strange. He is always in favor of what the majority favors. He has heard from the people as well as from the Senate, and will direct that the amended treaty be forwarded to the British government with as much complacency as though it hadn't been amened at all. Secretary Hay made it easier for him by giving out an official statement saying that he was personally responsible for the wording of the original treaty, and that it was agreed to by the British Ambassador without the crossing of a "t" or the dotting of an "i". This action of Mr. Hay was but following the example of Alger who made himself a scapegoat to save Mr. McKinley's feelings. It is the belief of most Senators that England will accept the amended treaty, but many of them do not hesitate to say that it is perfectly immateral to them whether she does or not.

Senator Hanna took occasion before Congress adjourned until January 3, for the holiday recess, to do some vigorous cracking of the party whip of those republican Senators who have dared to express opposition to the Ship subsidy bill. He threatened them with all sorts of things if teey did not get into line by the time Congress reassembled, and added that no republican who opposed the bill need expect any favors from the administration. Whether those tactics will win cannot be told until the Senate is again in session.

Extravagace is in the Washington atmosphere, and all sorts and conditions of men are trying to get some of the treasury surplus which they expect Congress to appropriate at this session. When the house committee on Rivers and Harbors met, at the beginning of the session, it is understood by the members that the bill to be prepared should not carry a total of more than $40,000,000 That understanding was knocked into a cocked hat by the provisional agreement by the committee to items in the bill which provisions for continuing contracts, nearly doubled the amount first named. That frightened the committee, and a decision was reached to cut the total of the appropriations carried by the bill down to $60,000,000, which will in the opinion of most persons, be a sizable amount.

Close friends of the administration admit that Mr. McKinley and his Cabinet are in a state of anxiety concerning the decision that the U. S. Supreme Court will hand down in the cases involving the Constutitionality of the McKinley policy toward the islands acquired from Spain, which were argued this week—in other words, whether the Constitution follows the flag where it is permanently raised Attorney Gen. Griggs made the argument against that contention, and lawyers say it was one of the ablest he ever made. It is not known of course, what the decision which is expected some time in January, will be, but the preponderance of legal opinion, entirely outside of politics, seems to be that it will be against the administration. That opinion is privately held by many who support McKinley.

Mr. McKinley's nomination of Mr. J. G. A. Leishman, of Pa., to be U. S. Minister to Turkey, is considered to be an official acknowledgement of the failure of the series of bluffs, beginning with the departure from Constantinople of U. S. Minister Straus and ending with the call of the battle ship Kentucky at Smyrna, Turkey, to make the Sultan pay the claims of American missionaries for property destroyed by Turkish mobs, leaving the Sultan the winner, as the claims have not been paid.

The Senate Committee on Military Affairs has knocked out the Army reorganization bill passed by the House, which was prepared by Gen. Corbin, and credited to Secretary Root, by preparing a substitute which will be reported to the Senate when Congress reassembles. The substitute provides for the same number of men as the House bill, but in the organization follow the recommendations of General Mils. It also provides for a continuance of the army canteen, which the house voted to abolish to please the ladies of the W. C. T. U., who were at the Capitol in force when the vote was taken, only stipulating that beer shall be the only intoxicant sold.

To Crush Finland.

STOCKHOLM, Dec. 20.—A dispatch from Helsingfers, Finland, says the Tidning, a daily newspaper of Christinestadt, and the Isanmaan, a weekly paper, were suppressed yesterday evening, and that another paper was suspended for four months.

The suppression of the papers mentioned in the above dispatch is undoubtedly due to the so-called Russification of Finland. Recent mail advices from the principal towns in the Duchy of Finland indicated that the finl touches are to be given this winter by the Russian government to the Russification of Finland. All papers in the grand duchy which had criticized the government in any way, whether printed in Swedish, Finish or Danish, were being suppressed.

It is said that the press censorship, the suppression of recognized organs of public opinion, and the loss of legislative autonomy will be followed by the proclamation of the Greek orthodox religion as the state religion, notwithstanding the fact that 98 per cent of the population belong to the Luthern church.

In view of the fact that the population may oppose these extreme measures the governor-general has been invested with the power to declare the duchy in a state of siege, and to exile persons who are politically suspect. In addition the garrisons made up of Finnish troops have been orderd to Siberia or China, or have been distributed among the garrisons of Central Russia, while a sotnia of Cassacks has been garrisoned at Helsingfers, and another at Abo, the ancient capitol of the duchy, and steps were being taken a month ago or more to garrison all the centers of Finnish population with Cossacks.—Duluth News Tribune.

Five Trains.

Will Be Required To Convey Whiske Bottles to the South.

Special Dispatch To The Enquirer.

Columbus, S. C., December 15 The largest order ever given for liquor supplies for immediate delivery are now being filled by more than a dozen firms in different parts of the United States. They are the "Christmas goods" for the South Carolina Dispensary. This establishment is being conducted on cash a busis, and when the goods are delivered $600,000 will be paid for them.

Perhaps the most remarkable order ever given by a liquor establishment was that to a Pittsburg house for 150 car loads of glass—half pint, pint and quart flasks. This glass will be shipped in five trains of thirty cars each, this being about as heavy loads as can be handled on the Southern roads. Immediately on the order being given every freight soliciting agent in this part of the country started for Pittsburg. Such opportunities do not occur more than once in a life time on these roads. There will be several train loads of liquor, the order for that of the cheaper grades aggregating 2,200 barrels.

The Purchasing Board find the business has expanded enormously recently, and expects the increase to continue as long as the cotton stay up Purchases for one month's supply are as large as they formerly were to run the big "rum mill" for ninety days Bottles were counted by the million and corks by the ton

HOW WILMOT KEPT HIS APPOINTMENT

"I SHALL count the minutes until you come," said young Mr. Wilmot to his betrothed. "You will find me at ten o'clock where your car stops, in a fever of impatience. Try not to be a moment late, won't you, dearest?"

"I don't know," answered the girl. "Something might happen. A dray might get in front of the car and delay it a minute or two or somebody might step on my dress and hold me back. If you're going to be impatient I'm not going to come at all. I don't like feverish people."

"I don't mean impatient in that sense," declared Wilmot, "I could wait hours for you, buoyed by the hope of seeing you at last. I have known men kick because their wives kept them five or ten minutes or so beyond an appointed time, but I don't think you will ever find me complaining. Just as long as you come at last, I don't care."

"But the train doesn't start until 11 o'clock, and it won't take us more than 15 minutes to walk over to the station. You don't want to have to linger around for three-quarters of an hour before the train starts."

"With you!" exclaimed Wilmot, enthusiastically. "It won't seem like five minutes. No, I can't say all I've got to say to you between Chicago and Lemont, and that three-quarters of an hour will help out quite a little."

"Why can't you say what you've got to say now? It will be at least three-quarters of an hour before anybody gets home."

"All right, I will," said Wilmot, and he whispered in her ear. She drew back and laughed and said that she didn't believe it, and besides, he had told her that before, so that it was stale news. "Is that all you have to say?" she continued.

"That comprehends it, but there's a lot of detail and circumstance in connection that you might like to hear—just in order to get an idea of the condition I'm in."

"But you will get over it after we are married. Truly, Bertie, don't you think you will?"

"Never; I shall love you 40 years from now just as much as I do this minute."

"Well," said the girl, presently, "this doesn't particularly interest me, anyway. Let's talk about to-morrow. Don't you think it would be better to say 10:30?"

"Most decidedly, I don't; I'll compromise on 9:30, if you like."

"Well, then, you may go over to the

"I WOULD WAIT HOURS FOR YOU."

station and meet me there and then you won't miss me in the crowd. It seems absurd to meet me on the street."

"I shall see you before you get off your car."

"Shall I tell you what I am going to wear, so that you will know it's me?"

"If you put on a gray wig and a black veil and blue glasses I should know you."

"But I'm not going to do anything of the kind. If you can't identify me without that you would better—what are you doing now?"

"Trying to impress your features on my memory. I hope you don't mind No, let me tell you. I would know you a mile off and among a thousand. I would feel you coming even if I couldn't see you."

"Well, then," said the girl, in a businesslike manner, "I guess it will be all right. You can wear a white rose in your buttonhole and carry your handkerchief carelessly in your left hand, and I guess there won't be any trouble."

Wilmot packed his suit case that night and saw to his razors, so that he could eat his breakfast and rush out in the morning without any unnecessary delay. He prides himself on being able to wake up at any minute that he likes, and he set his mental alarm clock for six, but for fear of accidents he also borrowed one of the everyday nickeled variety from his landlady and set that at six o'clock, after carefully testing it and regulating it by his watch. In the morning he sprang out of bed with a horrible fear that he had overslept, and, looking at the nickeled timepiece, found that it was 4:45.

For a few moments he stood, with heavy eyelids, drowsily considering the advisability of going back to bed and trusting to the alarm. Then he dismissed the weak thought and staggered to his bath. That woke him up and he shaved and dressed in a leisurely manner and went back to his room and looked at the clock. It was 5:15. He had thought it must have been six at least.

Raising the window shade he looked into the street, hoping to see the yellow glare of the gas lamps contending with the light of dawn, but as far as appearance went it might have been midnight, so he pulled down the shade again and tried to read. The book, however, was dull, and presently he dozed in his chair. He awoke with a start to look at his watch, and found that he had not yet put it on.

"Good thing I didn't put my faith in that alarm," he said. "It's missed fire or else it wasn't loud enough to wake me."

As he started for the bedroom the clock went off with a crash and a bang and a jingle that made him jump. He recovered from the shock and ran in to look at the erratic thing. The hands indicated six o'clock. Still unconvinced, he took his watch from under the pillow and looked at it. Six o'clock.

That meant an hour and a half until breakfast, and Wilmot was already conscious of a feeling of emptiness. He remembered that he had some crackers and cheese in his cupboard, and he brought these out and devoured them, but they did not seem to have the right kind of taste, and the cold water that he drank chilled his system so as to destroy his desires to smoke. Nevertheless he smoked and listened for sounds of breakfast preparation and repacked his suit case and bathed his face again to freshen himself up, and in course of time Ella, the second girl, knocked at his door and told him that breakfast was ready.

But the cheese and crackers and the pipe had destroyed his appetite and the breakfast, for some reason, did not taste good, anyway, so he could not rid himself of his incipient headache, nor the feeling that he had been up all night and had slept in his clothes. It took him half an hour to ride downtown, and he had now two hours, but he decided that he would get out and see what the fresh air would do for him. He could walk up and down the street until she came, and it would be a good thing to tell her that he had been waiting an hour and a half for the glory of her coming.

The air was more than fresh. It was raw and the wind was cutting. By the time Wilmot got to town he was already pretty thoroughly chilled, and he began to tramp up and down his appointed beat at once with vigorous strides, hoping that the exercise would warm him up. But his feet continued cold and his hands numb and stiff, walk as he would, and even the glow of devotion left him after half an hour.

He went over to a shoeblack stand, and, seating himself, told the boy to apply plenty of friction. This instruction was carried out and Wilmot got up and resumed his tramp in better spirits, but 15 minutes more of the cold wind sent them down again, and he went into a cigar store and bought a cigar. He lingered there a little while, for it was comfortably warm inside, but he grew uneasy and went out again and walked.

As for the girl, she slept very soundly and comfortably, was awakened by her mother at 8:30 o'clock and had time to eat her breakfast comfortably and arrive at the tryst five minutes ahead of time. She was properly indignant to find that her betrothed was not on hand and walked up and down the block twice; then, feeling chilly and observing that a confectioner's shop window commanded the street corner, she went in and ordered chocolate and sat down to watch and wait.

Wilmot got up and went out for the first time at ten o'clock exactly, but at that time the chocolate was just being served and the girl did not see him as he passed. The second time she may have been looking at the clock. Wilmot was anxious, but not entirely discouraged, for he had made up his mind to allow ten minutes for accidents. When that time expired he began to think that perhaps the time of meeting had not been definitely understood and that it might have been 10:30, after all. At 10:30 he went out and telegraphed to the house, and while he was doing this the girl came out, walked twice more up and down the block, stamped her little foot and went back and ordered eclairs. Wilmot returned, bought a cigar and sat down to watch the disembarking street car passengers with straining eyes.

Once more Wilmot made a sally; this time to the telephone office to call up the railroad people and beseech them to search the waiting-room and the Lemont platform for a young lady.

"Can you describe her?" asked the man at the other end. Wilmot thought that he could, but on attempting it was incoherent and stammering. The railroad man grew pleasantly sarcastic and Wilmot hung up the receiver in a rage. It then lacked 15 minutes of 11 o'clock.

Half frantic, he ran out of the drug store and back to the car. There, as he stood wondering what he could do next, he felt a slight touch on his arm, and, turning, found the girl. She was looking pretty, but not amiable, and Wilmot looked neither pretty nor amiable.

"I suppose you have a good excuse," she said, with deadly calmness. "I hope so, I'm sure."

"I was hoping that there might be a good reason for your lack of punctuality," he returned, in frigid tones. "It isn't that I object to waiting, but it is natural to think that only a callous indifference could have kept me waiting here in the cold for two hours and a quarter and indifference from the woman one has loved—"

"I like that," she interrupted. "I was here at 9:55 and have been here ever since."

Wilmot looked at her steadily, but she met his look without flinching. It was impossible to doubt her.

"Here," said Wilmot, suddenly. "We've just ten minutes to make that train. Jump into this cab. I think I can explain to your satisfaction."

"I only hope I can," he added, to himself, as he followed her into the vehicle, "but I've got to do some quick thinking."—Chicago Daily Record.

Roller skating has again become popular in some of the eastern cities, after its 15 years' disappearance, and it is thought that it will reappear at all other points.

An alligator farm has been started near Seven Bridges, Ga. When that farm gets a good start the farmer will need all the seven bridges to escape the attention of its products.

An Oswego (N. Y.) man has invented a "pneumatic dispenser" to produce cooling beverages. If the inventor will call around about next July he will hear of something to his advantage.

The whale is yet far from being extinct, although he has his nose turned in that direction. A Norwegian whaler reports the capture of 429 whales during the season off the coast of Iceland.

An inventor by the name of Maxham has patented an "automobile horse" which is designed to be hitched on in front of any vehicle in place of the usual animal. This is indeed a strange age we live in.

It seems that there is a surplus to the Lafayette memorial fund. It ought to be employed in erecting a modest monument to the managers. Such a unique instance ought not to be left uncommemorated.

A committee of ten appointed to choose two of the most beautiful women in America, one to represent North and one South America on the Pan-American exposition emblem, finally selected Maxine Elliott, the famous stage beauty, and Miss Maude Coleman Wood, of Charlottesville, Va.

If, a dozen years ago, a person had declared that before the close of the year 1900 a Pittsburgh company would sell structural steel in England at a lower price than British competitors, his name would have been mentioned in connection with an institution for the feeble-minded. Such, however, is the fact.

New York and Pennsylvania are buying cheap lands not well adapted to agriculture and are planting them with forests. Pennsylvania has already secured 100,000 acres for this purpose. A half century hence the wisdom of the plan will be generally recognized and the states that do nothing now will be regretting it then.

University of Chicago girls complain of their monotonous bill of fare—hash and toast, eggs and hash—and say their meals only cost 17 cents per day, while they pay $3.50 per week. This would leave a profit to the menumakers of $2.31 per week for each student. The situation is not exactly a cheerful one from the girls' point of view, but by the time they arrive at the ideal basis of "15 cents a day" they will probably get used to it.

A Paris dispatch tells of a new shell to be thrown by the French artillery. The shell rises to a great height and then bursts, throwing out globes that illuminate the country for a great distance, and permit the artillery to get the range of the enemy. Now some inventor will get up some scheme for blinding the light thrown by this shell, and thus the contest will progress until at last men become wise enough to settle their difficulties by arbitration instead of war.

Fairly reliable statistics show that 13,000,000,000 of hens' eggs will have been laid in the United States during the year 1900—a startling estimate, truly, inasmuch as these eggs, stood one on top of another, point to butt, would make a column 461,648 miles in altitude—nearly twice as high as the moon from the earth when that orb is seen overhead. The annual value of this product exceeds that of any mineral except coal, and is greater even than that of our pig iron.

The performer of a perilous diving feat at a circus in New York lost his life the other day. A slight miscalculation of distance resulted in the crushing of his skull. The large audience was horrified and the manager of the show was promptly arrested. This is the usual programme. So long as the performer misses breaking his head by just a hair's breadth the audience is delighted and the manager is complimented. But when the tenth chance comes everybody is righteously indignant.

"There is a moment," says Ludovic Halevy, in "The Abbe Constantin," "where an American feels himself rich enough; a Frenchman never. The American then stops, draws breath, and while still husbanding the capital, no longer spares the income. He knows how to spend; the Frenchman knows only how to save." It is evident that when M. Halvey wrote this he had not made the acquaintance of his fellow-citizen, Count de Castellane. That gentleman may not know when he has enough, but he has shown no signs of knowing how to save.

The celebration of the one hundredth anniversary of the establishment of the seat of government at Washington was a notable event. No other city can better typify the growth of the republic than does the national capital. When it was made the capital Washington was a most desolate town of 3,000 inhabitants. Now it is one of the most beautiful cities in the world, with a population of 288,000. There were 16 states in the union, with a population of 5,000,000, when Washington was made the capital 100 years ago. Now there are 76,000,000 inhabitants and 45 states.

Gen. J. H. Wilson, who has returned from military service in China, says that the interior of the imperial palace at Peking gave much evidence of the poverty existing in China. The throne room was dirty and the throne itself nothing but a wooden chair gilded. The emperor's bed was hard, without a mattress or springs, and covered only by a mat. These revelations do not sustain the common impression of oriental luxury and magnificence, and show how difficult it would probably be for China to pay a large money indemnity.

SOME NEW YEAR'S THOUGHTS

LET'S have fewer errors,
Try to make each day
Better than the former,
As we go our way;
Have less idle talking,
And commence to do—
Sponge the slate all over,
Let's begin anew.

Let's be better neighbors,
With a willing hand
Help to lift the fallen
To a higher stand;
Do some good for others,
Say ill things of none,
Have an easy conscience
When the day is done.

Let's try smiles for frowning,
Scatter wide the seeds
Of good thoughts and kindness,
Reaping noble deeds;
Put in daily practice
What we often preach;
Truth and right and justice
Let us try to teach.

Let's think less of dollars,
More of our own kind,
That we may be wealthy,
Not in purse, but mind;
Shun the false and evil,
Clasp the good and true—
Sponge the slate all over,
Let's begin anew.

When a man's Married

By Lawrence Porcher Hext.

IT WAS New Year's night; the clock was on the last stroke of nine, and John Kimball was on his way home. He was not hurrying home; indeed, he was proceeding rather leisurely for a man who had been married only six months. But John was meditating, and when a man meditates and walks at the same time he generally forces his feet to keep pace with his thoughts.

John had just parted from a crowd of his old friends of bachelor days, such dear old fellows—I don't mean dear old bachelors, but dear old friends, for John was only 25, and none of his friends were much older than himself. They had given him such a cordial invitation to go with them to the rooms of the Bachelors' club; they were such jolly good fellows, so free and easy and so utterly devoid of care, that they made John feel as though he were one of them again, and the parting from them had caused his thoughts to meander slowly back to the time when he was one of them.

John was thinking of those sweet old days of bachelorhood, when he didn't have to go home early at night; when it didn't really matter much whether he went home at all. He was thinking of the wonderful games of poker he used to play, and the funny stories that were so often related at the club, but he was thinking more particularly of the boys who were up there now, celebrating another anniversary of its birth—or suppose I say its origin; clubs cannot boast of parentage. He was thinking of the rare old wines that were being drunk and the fragrant odor of the imported Havanas. He was thinking of the various ridiculous resolutions that were being made, and he smiled as he thought how recklessly they would be broken.

"WHY—ER—I WAS—THINKING OF THE WAY SOME FELLOWS SPEND NEW YEAR'S NIGHT."

A year ago he was a member of the Bachelors' club, and a year ago he had repeated, for the fourth time, his ironclad oath to always remain a member of the Bachelors' club. But a year works many wonders, creates many changes, and makes many marriages.

When John took his fourth ironclad oath, a year ago, to the effect that "he would live and die a bachelor," that "he preferred single blessedness to married cussedness," and that "a wife, next to a mother-in-law, was a nuisance around the house," he was perfectly honest in what he said. But six months had hardly passed before he had "fallen like other fools," as his bachelor chums expressed it. Of course it was a hard blow to the fraternity, for John was one of its charter members and stanchest supporters; but the club rallied, passed red-hot resolutions, and posted a memorial: "To the memory of a departed brother," on its bulletin-board, and rocked along just as usual, without the presence of Mr. John Kimball.

Now, John Kimball wasn't a depraved man by any means—women think all clubmen like wine and cards better than women, and are, therefore, bound to be depraved; John, by uniting himself in marriage to a woman, had shown, much to the disgust of his club-mates, that he preferred the society of a woman to the society of his friends and wine and cards.

But recollections of old times, brought so forcibly to his mind, and remembrances of fond ties, so recently broken, brought him to a point where he found himself—like many men before him—debating a question that should have been settled forever, long before he took unto himself a wife, namely, which did he love best, his wife or his club? He loved his home and he adored the little woman who presided over it and endeavored, with all her might, to make it the happiest, dearest place on earth for him, but he could not banish from his mind the sweet recollections of the old days. And the more he thought of them the stronger became the yearning for his old associates and surroundings.

He felt like a social outcast. He had never before quite comprehended how good it is to be free. True, he was still the "autocrat of his own breakfast-table," but not quite "monarch of all he surveyed," and, be it said to his disgrace, if he hadn't found himself so near his own door he might have wandered back among the boys.

Suddenly, pausing in his meditations and glancing at his surroundings, he saw that he was within a block of his little home. His conscience smote him; he felt as if he had brought unhallowed thoughts on hallowed ground. He looked sheepish for a moment, then tried to change the current of his thoughts by whistling a love-song that he knew his wife admired. He was still whistling when he turned the night-latch and entered the door, to be greeted with a kiss from the little woman he had sworn to "love, honor and protect."

She was one of the dearest, sweetest little creatures in all the wide world—a woman must necessarily and naturally be very dear and very sweet when she is able to capture a clubman—and her first thought was for John's health and well-being.

After the kiss of greeting the first thing she did was to exclaim, not in a tone of reproof, but of solicitude: "Oh, John, dear, you will catch your death with your overcoat unbuttoned in the cold night air—and did you walk home?" Now that alone was enough to make John feel like a culprit, but he smiled and said something about "needing exercise," and "not feeling the cold," which was all probably very true, and together they walked, arm in arm, back to the cozy little dining-room, which also served as sitting-room for the little family.

Another reproof smote John's conscience the moment he entered the room. In front of the cheerful little hearthstone, where a bright fire was burning, stood his easy chair. Across the back hung his smoking-jacket. By one side were his slippers, and by the other, on a table, was his pipe, that he loved next to his wife.

John felt abashed, to say the least of it, and it was fortunate for him that his wife was at his back at that moment, assisting him in removing his coat, instead of looking in his face, otherwise she might have asked some questions that he would have found difficulty in answering to her satisfaction.

Mrs. Kimball hung her husband's coat on its proper peg, helped him on with his smoking-jacket, chatting gayly all the while, and paused only for him to take his seat. John seemed to suddenly realize that the time had arrived for him to do something, and he accordingly sat down, very clumsily, in his chair and stared, very vacantly, at the fire. His wife's voice aroused him, and he jumped like a man who has suddenly and unexpectedly come in contact with the business end of a pin. "John, dear," she was saying, "won't you remove your shoes, put on your slippers, light your pipe, and let me finish reading to you that little story I began the other night?—or are you too tired to hear it to-night?"

"Certainly, Helen, I'll take pleasure in listening to you. There is, really, nothing that I enjoy more. I—I was so busy with—er—my own thoughts that I quite forgot myself." And John proceeded to divest himself of his shoes and don his slippers in the greatest haste.

"Of what were you thinking, John?" she asked, coming over and placing her hand fondly upon his shoulder.

John's face crimsoned, and he tied two hard knots in his shoestring before he realized what he was doing.

"Why—er—I was thinking of the way some fellows spend New Year's night."

"How do 'some fellows' spend New Year's night, John, dear—more pleasantly than you do?"

John had just succeeded in untying the two knots in his shoestring when his wife's last question frightened him into tying three others. She noticed his embarrassment, but could not account for it, and, without waiting for his reply, she said: "Come, John, you'll never get your shoes off at this rate; let me help you, and when we have finished you can tell me 'how some fellows' spend New Year's night." And before he could enter protest, even if he had possessed the courage to try, she was down on the floor untying his shoestrings.

John's face, if it were possible, turned a shade redder, and he squirmed uneasily in his chair. All married men have occupied the same position, have experienced the same feelings that John Kimball occupied and felt when his wife kneeled by his side and assisted him in removing his shoes, and for their sakes I will refrain from elucidation. For the benefit of unmarried men, I will say that John felt like a young fellow who had just been requested to purchase a marriage license for his best girl and another fellow; I think they will understand. And for the benefit of the fair sex, I will say that John felt like a girl who has proposed to a young man during leap year, and been rejected; I know they will understand. "Small," I think, defines John's feelings about as well and about as thoroughly as any word in the English language.

John has never been able to quite recollect just when his shoes came off, and just when his slippers went on. He was in the act of lighting his pipe—his wife had taken her seat on the other side of the fireplace, and was turning the leaves of her book in such an abstracted manner that he felt encouraged to hope that she had forgotten something—when she suddenly asked: "How do some fellows spend New Year's night, John?"

John forgot to light his pipe; he held the lighted match between his fingers until it burned their tips, and, then he blurted out: "Why, my dear, these fellows I was thinking of assemble in a large room, drink cigars—I mean, drink wine, smoke cigars, tell vulgar tales, make ridiculous resolutions, and tack home at three a. m." When John finished, he looked as if he had been invited to attend his own funeral, and had accepted the invitation, under protest.

His wife laid aside her book, and coming over she seated herself on the arm of his chair, and, throwing her arms around his neck, she asked: "Why should my John think of such things? You never spent a New Year's night in that manner, did you, John?"

"Yes, Helen, I have," he answered, and there was a tremor in his voice, "and I have been thinking too much about those nights. They say an 'open confession is good for the soul;' hear mine, Helen, and judge me as you will,' and with his wife's arms still clinging fondly around his neck, and with her eyes looking straight up into his, he told her all about his temptation. And when he had finished he tenderly removed her arms, and, with his right hand upraised, he said: "And now, Helen, I want to make one more New Year's resolution, and while we both live it shall never be broken: 'Resolved, that I shall never allow my thoughts to wander backward, as they have today; and resolved, further, that my feet shall never stray beyond the threshold of my own domain, in the pursuit of pleasures, so help me God!"

"Amen," murmured his little wife, between her sobs, as she flung her arms around his neck.—Copyright, by Leslie's Weekly, and printed by permission of the same.

THE NEW YEAR.

When It Ought to Begin—Let Us Make the Best of It as We Find It.

It has been pointed out a great many times by learned men, especially astronomers, that the year ought not to begin on January 1. That day occurs in the midst of winter and does not mark any epoch of the seasons. When the seasons change with some degree of regularity, as in the temperate zone, the beginning of the year in a climatic sense is clearly the beginning of spring, which would be the 21st day of March. As a matter of fact the year did use to begin on that day, and there never has been any good reason advanced for the change to the present date.

But here it is, and here it will probably remain for centuries to come. We moderns are very queer people. We have very little respect for the ancients and boast of our independence and the spirit of progress, yet we cling with ignorant reverence to some very crude notions, to change which would be to our advantage. See how we divide our day into two 12-hour parts, whereas one of 24 hours is much more sensible. Look at our clumsy system of weighing with pounds, ounces and drams, and our measuring with yards, feet and inches, when the metric system is so much superior.

It is that spirit which would view with horror any attempt to fix the beginning of the year at any other date than January 1, and therefore we shall not attempt to disturb it. Let us take it as we find it and make the best of it, and that will not be difficult.

It is a happy new year for us all if we take advantage of our opportunities, and remember the old adage that "Heaven helps them who help themselves."—Golden Days.

BOBSON'S CHOICE.

Col. Whiteman — Well, Uncle Dan, what are you to have for your New Year's dinner—chicken or turkey?

Uncle Dan—Chicken, sah. Kase none ob mah neighbors don raise turkeys.

Incomprehensible.

Cobwigger—Women are incomprehensible.

Merritt—What put that into your head?

Cobwigger—My wife spent $15 for a smoking-jacket for my Christmas present, and on New Year's she was crying her eyes out because I didn't swear off smoking.—N. Y. Truth.

From Bryan's Own City.

Comes a Startling Story. An Open Letter that will Cause a Sensation.

Lincoln, Neb., Dec. 24, 1900 (Special).—At No. 2115 O Street, this city, is the B. & M. Wall Paper House. "B. & M." are the initial letters of the proprietors, Mr. A. C. Bonsor, and Mr. O. E. Myers. The senior partner, Mr. Bonsor, is a well known and highly respected citizen, and no one has ever doubted his truthfulness. It is, therefore, the pronounced opinion in Lincoln and the State generally, that the significant and very strong statements made in Mr. Bonsor's letter will go unchallenged. After explaining his willingness that the matter be given the fullest possible publicity in the public interest, Mr. Bonsor proceeds.

I have suffered untold misery and pain for over ten years. My kidneys were diseased. I tried many so-called remedies, but they did me no good. I saw an advertisement of Dodd's Kidney Pills, and I bought some, and commenced to use them at once. I had not been taking them three days before I began to improve. For years I had not had one good night's sleep, and before the first box of the Dodd's Kidney Pills were all used, I could sleep all night without pains. I am now completely cured, and have not a pain or ache left. I cannot recommend Dodd's Kidney Pills too highly, for they are unexcelled as a kidney remedy.

Telephoning Without Wires.

James C. Kelsey, William Reid, Frank Flannagan, of the Northwestern Telephone Exchange company, and John Todd, switchboard man of the St. Paul office conducted a successful experiment at wireless telephone over the Mississippi river, at the short line bridge near Minneapolis. This was the third successful experiment that had been conducted. Kelsey and Todd were on one side of the river and Reed and Flannagan on the other. Not only could the direct verbal message be heard as distinctly as over the ordinary telephone, but even a side conversation would creep over the river.

Want The Bounty.

State Auditor Dunn is not ready to pay the St. Louis Park beet sugar factory the $20,000 bounty it claims to have earned under the law of 1899 and Former Attorney General Childs and J. A. Peterson of Minneapolis, appeared before Attorney General Douglas and made arguments for the company upholding the constitutionality of the bounty law. A law similar in many respects was recently declared unconstitutional by the Michigan supreme court. In 1899 the company secured the bounty earned in 1898 by the passage of a bill over Governor Lind's veto.

Senator Davis' Will.

The will of the late Cushman K. Davis, which was filled in the probate court of Ramsey county, is one of the shortest and most concise documents of that kind among the records. His widow, formerly Anna M. Agnew, is the sole legatee. The estate is estimated to be worth $65,000, of which $40,000 is real estate.

News in Brief.

A young men's athletic association has been organized in Hastings, with C. L. Wilcox as president, the membership is forty-five.

The Building improvements made in Winona during the year, shows a total expenditure slightly in excess of $500,000. The heaviest outlay was $115,000 for new business blocks.

The first annual show of the Luverne Poultry association opened with over 500 birds on exhibition.

A. R. Anderson, a miller at Madelia was caught in the machinery and killed.

Ten Merchants at Borup were burned out. They will rebuild.

The Holey Angels Academy in Minneapolis was slightly damaged by fire

Steven Stafford, a street car conductor in St. Paul was thrown from a trailer and killed.

Commandant Compton, of the Soldier's Home, reported to the board of trustees at their recent meeting that he would make no changes in the present staff of the home, and would need no additional help.

The new Congregational church at Ada was dedicated with appropriate ceremonies.

Minneapolis will have an automobile show next spring.

Lydia Ramstad, 14 years of age, was robbed of a gold bracelet, valued at $25, and seven cents in cash, while on her way to the corner grocery from her home in Minneapolis.

When the legislature meets it will be asked to make an appropriation for a new building for the electrical engineering department of the State University.

The state railroad and warehouse commission has received official notification from the directors of the Duluth, St. Cloud, Glencoe and Mankato road of the completion of a line from Lyle, Mower county, to a junction of the Burlington, Cedar Rapids and Northern at Glenville, Freeborn county and the Illinois Central. The first actual train service was had from Lyle to Albert Lea, Dec. 2.

SPARKLING MILLINERY.

Many of the Winter Hats Display a Profusion of Jeweled Trimmings.

Panne and velvet are by all odds the most fashionable of all materials for the winter hat, with chenille as a second, and nothing will take precedence of the all-black hat in elegance. A handsome model of this class is of black panne with a spangled brim. The crown is soft and flat and is encircled with loose folds of the panne, knotted on the left side, where the brim is indented slightly. Ostrich plumes, two above and one under the brim, and a jet buckle complete the trimming. Ostrich feathers have advanced in price to such a degree that they will be seen only on the handsomest and costliest hats. On others they will be replaced largely by manufactured feather ornaments, says a fashion paper.

Flowers are said to be out of the running, although they are seen, with foliage and fruit, on the late fall hats. Broad blade feathers with velvet disks painted to imitate cherries or berries appliqued upon them are among the novelties in trimming. Gold braid in combination with silk and velvet will be used both in bands around the crown and in large, loose bows.

The fancy for jewels, both real and imitation, will find expression in the trimming of hats as well as of gowns. Almost every kind of stone known to the jeweler will be used in this way. On one of the new hats, a large pearl "Cleopatra" pendant dangles from the front of the brim. Another has a buckle consisting of an immense imitation emerald surrounded with brilliants.

This is on a green hat. It's the thing to have a hat composed of many shades of the same color. The material may be all velvet, silk or tulle, or it may be a combination of these materials, but the hues shade from the light to dark, forming a flower-like whole. Violet, blue, green and brown are used in this way. A pretty hat in the bronze shades has a foundation of fancy dark brown braid with a low velvet crown, around which is draped taffeta, shading from light gold to deep bronze. A shaded impeyan breast is fastened in place by a bronze buckle.

A violet velvet, stitched in a lighter shade, has a garniture of twisted folds of panne buckles.

Black and white holds its own as one of the most reliable combinations in millinery and is suitable for many occasions. Black panne and white liberty satin are highly effective together, especially when trimmed with rosettes of black and white tulle.

One of the novel hats of the season has a nosegay of camellias.

Liberty scarfs having bright oriental colors are much used for draping felt hats for ordinary wear.

HOUSEHOLD SUGGESTIONS.

A Variety of Useful Information for the Busy Housewife.

Rubber and leather casters are now frequently put upon furniture which is to be placed on a hardwood or stained floor. Some housekeepers and decorators, however, recommend instead the caster cups, says the New York Post.

Where brasses are much discolored an application of a solution of salt and vinegar is advisable before using the customary brass polish, as the work of polishing is much more quickly performed.

Handsome glass vases may be kept free from the accumulation of dust at the bottom by inserting a wad of tissue paper the color of the vase when it is not in use. By taking this means of keeping them clean the brilliancy of the glass is retained.

While many decorators and furnishers advise the woman of moderate means to furnish her rooms with wicker furniture, on the ground that it is more artistic than much of the cheaper wood furniture, they do not stop to consider the trouble she will have in keeping it clean. Few servants think it necessary to dust wicker chairs, and the well-trained maid finds it impossible to keep them free from dust without expending more time upon the duty than it is possible to spare from her other tasks.

A delicious way of making the ordinary fricasseed chicken into a novel dish has been brought from Spain by an inquiring housewife. Cut the chicken up and put it in the saucepan and cover with cold water. After it has begun to boil leave it at the back of the range, where it will simmer slowly for an hour and a half. Then add a cup and a half of boiled rice, a small onion cut into quarters, a small tomato, salt, pepper and a teaspoonful of curry powder which has been dissolved in water. Boil slowly for 20 or 30 minutes, taking care at the last that it does not scorch. Serve with the rice piled in the center of the platter and the chicken placed about the border.

When the master of the house objects to carving before guests a good way to serve a roasted chicken is to have it cut into pieces as it is prepared for a fricassee, season it and rub in egg and bread crumbs. Put it in the oven and let it rest for two hours. This is a dish which is highly commended by the epicure who has a fondness for chicken a la Maryland and other southern dainties.

Apple Dumplings.

Take some finely sifted flour and half the quantity of suet, very finely shredded and well freed from skin. Mix the suet and flour and add a pinch of salt and a little baking powder, with sufficient milk to make it of the right consistency. Knead it well and roll it out to the thickness required. Divide this paste into as many pieces as are required for the dumplings. Take some large-sized apples, peel, core and sprinkle them with moist sugar, then insert into the cavity of each a little red currant jelly. Cover the apples with the paste and join the edges carefully. Tie each dumpling up in a floured cloth and boil for about an hour. Untie them carefully and turn them out without breaking them.—Washington Star.

Evidently Wandering.

Mrs. Jones—Oh, doctor! is my husband still irrational?

Dr. Dosem—Extremely so. When I told him your mother was coming tomorrow he smiled.—Judge.

FILLED ALL REQUIREMENTS.

She Wanted a Real Sensible Book and She Took Robinson Crusoe.

The trials of librarians in city libraries have often been cited; those of the guardians of small country libraries are of a different character, but require perhaps the exercise of even greater patience, says Youth's Companion.

"Ma wants you should pick her out a book," said a freckle-faced girl to the bright young woman in charge of the free library of a New England village; "and she don't want a serious one, she says, nor she don't want a love story, without it's founded on fact. Nor of course, she don't want anything she's ever read before."

The librarian tapped her pencil thoughtfully on the desk, without a trace of despair which a chance listener to this dialogue expected to see on her face.

"Nor she don't want anything that's chopped up into short stories, she says," continued the girl, bent on the librarian's further enlightenment, "and she wants consider'ble going on, and a lot of pictures, ma does. And she told me partic'lar to say she didn't want no di'lec' stories; she says she knows well enough how folks in the country talk."

Still the librarian thoughfully tapped her pencil, apparently waiting for further instructions.

"She wants a real sensible book, the kind grandma likes and I like, too," volunteered "ma's" emissary; then suddenly she leaned over the librarian. "Say," she whispered, hoarsely, "if there's one of the Robinson Cruzo books in, ma said you'd better gimme that."

"Certainly," said the librarian, pleasantly, and a moment later the well-thumbed copy of the famous adventures had changed hands, and the happy possessor of it departed wreathed in smiles.

WEAKNESS OF HUMAN NATURE

According to the Idea of an Insurance Agent Who Was Interested in the Fire.

"Talk about the frailties of human nature," said a well-known insurance agent the other day, relates the Kansas City Journal, "no one else has so good an opportunity to discover them as an insurance man. An incident occurred a few days ago that showed me a side of a neighbor's character which I had never suspected to exist. A fire broke out in his home, and, do you know, that man went three blocks to a telephone to report it, when there was a 'phone right in his house.

"I saw the fire soon after it started, and rushed to give assistance. It was while helping to pack the things out that I discovered the 'phone, and turned in the alarm. Now, it takes a strong stretch of the imagination to believe that the owner had forgotten there was a telephone in his house. That he should have acted as he did undermines one's faith in people in general.

"Think of it. There I was sweating and endangering my life to save his property, while he was anxious, evidently, to have it burn. Such conduct doesn't encourage one to exert himself for others—"

"By the way," interrupted a listener, "did any of your companies hold a policy on that house?"

"Now, you are asking a leading question," replied the insurance man, with a guileless smile. "What I am saying is that the actions of that man are a sad commentary on human nature."

Try Grain-O! Try Grain-O!

Ask your grocer to-day to show you a package of GRAIN-O, the new food drink that takes the place of coffee. The children may drink it without injury as well as the adult. All who try it, like it. GRAIN-O has that rich seal brown of Mocha or Java, but it is made from pure grains, and the most delicate stomach receives it without distress. ¼ the price of coffee. 15c. and 25cts. per package. Sold by all grocers.

The Commercial Instinct.

Mamma—Tommy, do stop that noise. If you'll only be good I'll give you a penny.

Fire a Shot 20 Miles.

The United States will fire a thousand pound shot twenty miles which will be a record breaker for the distance. The gun from which it is to be fired will be a marvel of American ingenuity, and workmanship. Another marvel of American ingenuity is Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. For fifty years it has been the only medicine to cure constipation, indigestion, dyspepsia, biliousness and by its direct action on the kidneys prevents rheumatism.

Too Refined.

"No," said Farmer Meddergrass, "that Boston feller that come here to run the paper doesn't seem to get along very well. Our folks ain't much for style, an' when he referred to a skin game as 'an epidermal pastime' they thought he was becomin' a little too highfalutin'."—Baltimore American.

There Is a Class of People

Who are injured by the use of coffee. Recently there has been placed in all the grocery stores a new preparation called GRAIN-O, made of pure grains, that takes the place of coffee. The most delicate stomach receives it without distress, and but few can tell it from coffee. It does not cost over ¼ as much. Children may drink it with great benefit. 15 cts. and 25 cts. per package. Try it. Ask for GRAIN-O.

They Wouldn't Rip.

"What do you call these?" he asked at the breakfast table.

"Flannel cakes," replied the wife of his bosom.

SISTERS OF GOOD SHEPHERD

Use Pe-ru-na for Coughs, Colds, Grippe and Catarrh—A Congressman's Letter.

IN every county of the civilized world the Sisters of the Good Shepherd are known. Not only do they minister to the spiritual and intellectual needs of the charges committed to their care, but they also minister to their bodily needs.

With so many children to take care of and to protect from climate and disease, these wise and prudent Sisters have found Peruna a never-failing safeguard.

Columbus, O., July 10, 1900.

The Peruna Medicine Co., City:

Gentlemen—"A number of years ago our attention was called to Dr. Hartman's Peruna, and since then we have used it with wonderful results for grip, coughs, colds, and catarrhal diseases of the head and stomach.

"For grip and winter catarrh especially it has been of great service to the inmates of this institution."—Sisters of the Good Shepherd.

The following letter is from Congressman Meekison, of Napoleon, Ohio:

The Peruna Medicine Co., City:

Gentlemen—I have used several bottles of Peruna and feel greatly benefited thereby from my catarrh of the head, and feel encouraged to believe that its continued use will fully eradicate a disease of thirty years' standing. — David Meekison.

Congressman Meekison.

Dr. Hartman, one of the best known physicians and surgeons in the United States, was the first man to formulate Peru-na. It was through his genius and perseverance that it was introduced to the medical profession of this country. Diseases of the Kidneys will stand no trifling because no disease is so deceptive and none more fatal. Statistics show that more people die from Kidney Diseases than any other disease.

U. S. SENATOR DAVIS DIES FROM KIDNEY DISEASE.

Senator Davis made a prolonged and gallant fight with disease.

The trouble, of which the kidney affection was the fatal outcome, first appeared about Sept. 20.

• • • • • • • • •

Trouble Stealthily Encroached.

The trouble had, however, stealthily encroached upon a vital organ, and on Nov. 11 examination of the urine proved the presence of inflammation of the kidneys.

Both acute nephritis and diabetes made their appearance, and Dr. Murphy, of Chicago, was summoned. He agreed with Doctors Stone and Lankester as to the presence of these serious ailments in acute form, and, while not making any public statement, he made known privately to some of Senator Davis' business associates his opinion that the case was hopeless.

• • • • • • • • •

To those, however, who were familiar with the symptoms of acute kidney troubles the bulletins held ominous information, the rapid respiration, fluctuating pulse, delirium and approaching coma telling the story of death's nearness.

—St. Paul Dispatch.

Is This What Ails You?

Does your back ache?
Do you have scanty flow of urine?
Do you have frequent severe headaches?
Do you urinate too frequently either day or night.
Have you sand, gravel, brick dust or white mucous in your urine?
Have you dark or bloody looking urine which scalds when voiding?
Have you dark circles around the eyes, puffiness under the eyes, or bloated appearance of the face in the morning?

Your Kidneys are Sick

AND HERE IS WHERE YOUR DANGER LIES:

Kidney Disease does not make itself felt until it has secured a firm hold on your system.

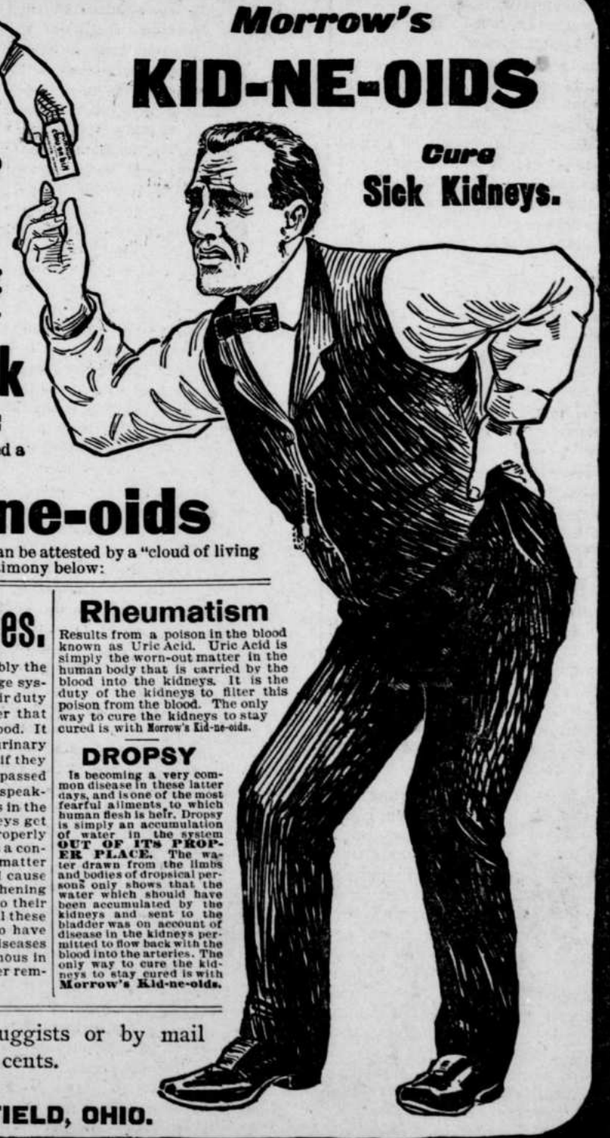
Morrow's Kid-ne-oids are made for Kidney Diseases and that they cure Kidney Diseases can be attested by a "cloud of living witnesses," three of which give voluntary testimony below:

Morrow's KID-NE-OIDS Cure Sick Kidneys.



Bright's Disease.

Bright's Disease is the final stage of kidney disease. It is due to a weak, impure condition of the blood caused by failure of the kidneys to thoroughly filter it. Poisons accumulate in the kidneys, and soon their interiors become a festering, rotten mass, giving off the virulent and most poisonous matter. This poison gets into the blood and makes it still more virulent. Bright's Disease is insidious because it exists a long time without the knowledge of its victim. It is deceptive for it deludes even on the death bed with hopes of sure recovery. It is relentless for it devastates the world, causing more death and misery than war, famine and drink combined. But Bright's Disease is no longer incurable. There is one remedy that can overcome it wherever they meet. Morrow's Kid-ne-oids cure Bright's Disease by acting on the kidneys, toning them up and strengthening them and making them do their duty promptly and thoroughly.

Heart Failure

Almost daily you read of prominent men and women, (to say nothing of the thousands of people in the every-day walk of life, of which no mention is made in print,) dying from Heart failure. The cause back of it all is—sick kidneys. When the kidneys are sick, all the other organs are affected. Dizzy spells, fainting spells, pain in the back, frequent severe headaches, failing or indistinct vision with flashes of light or floating specks are all ominous warnings of impending "heart failure." Reader, your only safety is to get your kidneys right so that they can perform their duties promptly and properly. The only remedy in which you can place implicit confidence is Morrow's Kid-ne-oids. They strengthen and tone up the kidneys, enabling them to purify the blood, clear out the obstructed passages and make heart failure impossible. Morrow's Kid-ne-oids prevent heart failure by removing the cause.

Bladder Troubles.

The urinary organs are probably the most important part of the sewage system in the human body. It is their duty to carry off the poisonous matter that the kidneys separate from the blood. It is an absolute necessity that the urinary organs be kept in good condition if they are to carry off all the poisons passed them by the kidneys. Generally speaking, the kidneys cause all troubles in the urinary organs. When the kidneys get weak or diseased they cannot properly do the work assigned them, and as a consequence they allow poisonous matter to flow back into the system and cause disease and death. By strengthening the kidneys and making them do their work promptly and thoroughly all these ills are avoided. All people who have used Morrow's Kid-ne-oids for diseases of the urinary organs are unanimous in stating that they can find no other remedy equal to them.

Rheumatism

Results from a poison in the blood known as Uric Acid. Uric Acid is simply the worn-out matter in the human body that is carried by the blood into the kidneys. It is the duty of the kidneys to filter this poison from the blood. The only way to cure the kidneys to stay cured is with Morrow's Kid-ne-oids.

DROPSY

Is becoming a very common disease in these latter days, and is one of the most fearful ailments to which human flesh is heir. Dropsy is simply an accumulation of water in the system OUT OF ITS PROPER PLACE. The water drawn from the limbs and bodies of dropsical persons only shows that the water which should have been accumulated by the kidneys and sent to the bladder was on account of disease in the kidneys permitted to flow back with the blood into the arteries. The only way to cure the kidneys to stay cured is with Morrow's Kid-ne-oids.

MORROW'S KID-NE-OIDS are for sale by all druggists or by mail prepaid on receipt of 50 cents.

Morrow's Kid-ne-oids are made only by

BUFFALO GAZETTE

DELANO, FRIDAY, Dec 28, 1900.

OFFICIAL PAPER OF THE VILLAGE OF DELANO.

DELANO DIARY

—Aappy, Happy New Year!

—Charley Coolen, of Smith Lake, who has been very sick with phneumonia the past week, is reported better and steadily improving.

—A performance was given at the City Hall last Friday evening by a negro minstril show company. A fair sized audience was in attendance.

—Miss Kerr's pupils gave a musicale at the City Hall Wednesday evening. A good sized audience was in attendence and the program was enjoyed by all.

—Fishing is reported to be good at the lakes. Quite a number have been trying their luck, and large strings of croppies are occasionaly brought to town.

—The Buffalo Journal says the Auditor has been having figuring trouble arranging taxes. Wonder if he got the expense of the Pogreba, Matter, et al, ditch figured in.

—The meetings being held every evening at 7:30, in the M. E. church, by the Y. M. C. A. boys, are being well attended, and have been interesting and instructive. They will be continued the rest of this, and part of the next week. Everybody is invited.

—The County Treasurer gives notice this week that the books will be placed in his hands January 7, 1901, for collection. Be getting your money ready by the time he comes around to your town at Buffalo around to your town at Buffalo till the 14th, when he goes to Clearwater.

—The weather made a decided change Saturday. From Friday and Saturday's almost spring weather we were carried Saturday night into the midst of a Minnesota winter with about four inches of snow and the air crisp enough to satisfy the most fastidious, who think snow and cold weather make it seem more Christmas like.

—From the Willmar Tribune we learn that year and a half old daughter, Evelyn, of Conductor J. P. Devinney, of the Great Northern, was so severely burned by getting her clothing afire from a small lamp, as to cause her death. Her remains were taken to Willmar and buried. Mr. Devinney is a brother-in-law of Charles Cunningham of this place and family have the sympathy of friends here.

—Last night a reception was given Prof. E. M. Cunningham and wife, at the Odd Fellow's hall. A large number of the Professor's friends and old school mates, including most of the alumni of the High School were present and an enjoyable evening was spent by all. The evening started with a grand march, taken part in by nearly every one in the hall. Ice cream and cake were served as refreshments.

—Christmas exercises were held at four churches Monday evening by the scholars of the Sunday Schools, Methodist, Presbyterian, Swedish Luthern, and German Luthern. The exercises went off smothly and he little ones were made happy by various presents and candy bags. Of all the holidays of our land, the one that is peremin ently looked up to by the childern is Christmas the anniversary of Christ, and that is what the exercises are for; to make the childern happy, and incidentally their father's and mother's and the older boys and girls, who are happy to see the little ones so pleased.

—Prof. E. M. Cunningham and Miss Rose Belt were united in marriage Thursday noon, at the home of Geo. Sutton, the bride's brother in law. Rev. Thompson read the service in the presence of about twenty five near relatives of the bride and groom. Prof. Edward Freeman stood up as best man and Miss Luella Horton as maid of honor. The room in which the ceremony took place was prettily decorated for the occasion: the couple standing, during the ceremony, beneath an arch of green and white, while the center piece was in red and white. Covers were set for 24 immediately after congratulations had been extended to the new family.

The contracting parties are well known in and around Delano, and a large number of friends join in wishing them happiness throughout life. They will leave this afternoon for Washburn, Wisconsin, where Mr. Cunningham is professor of Sciences in the High School.

—On Wednesday, J. T. Hanna was reported sick at the Meister House with an eruptive disease that might be small pox. The only vacant house that could be secured for the purpose of keeping him in, the one on River st eet, nearest the railroad and river bank, was rented and the patient and his attendent moved in and quarantined, Mr. Hanna being able to have his clothes on during the moving. He is getting on comfortably in his new quarters. His attending physician, Dr. Shrader, on Thursday, reported the disease small pox. The hotel has been fumigated and precautions against the spread of the disease taken. Mrs. Meister, to be on the safe side, has closed her house against the traveling public, until Monday. It is to be hoped no other cases will occur. In the meantime it would be a wise plan for the village authorities to secure more secluded quarters than the center of town for such cases.

—Subscribe for the Commoner, Bryan's new paper. Read the add elsewhere.

—Silas & Meyers, the Howard Lake robbers were sentenced to five years each, at Stillwater.

—C. R. Carlton, Delano's oldest Democrat is the first subscriber we have for Bryon's new paper, The Commoner.

—A talk to the children Saturday afternoon at the M. E. church. Tonight and tomorrow nights to everybody. Hearthem.

—Mr. and Mrs. C. M. Coffin gave a family dinner Christmas day; about thirty relatives were present. The bounteous good things served by Mrs. Coffin reflected much credit and proved that she is no second rate cook.

—We received a letter lately from Sylvanus A. Merriman, one of our old Jackson Democrats, formerly of Minnetrista, now of Woodston, Kansas. He says although over 82 he was out this fall, showing the boys how to stack to shed water.

Maple Plain.

Happy New Year to Ye, Editor and staff. Now is the time to swear off and form new resolutions. It does not cost anything only a little grit.

Xmas doings in this neck of the woods was rather dry. Nothing much only a few family reunions with turkey and toast.

We will not replenish our stock of news until the state legislature meets and congress gets at it again, then there will be plenty for the papers to publish.

The Republicans who claim they done a cyclone business for the party during the campaign are almost running Van Sant down to get a job. A whole corporal's guard is after the Minnetonk deputy game warden office. They say it pays about $75 a month besides the trimmings. So go in boys the old addage says to the victor belongs the spoils. All we democrats will ask will be a few fish out of season for they say, fish is a great brain producer.

The President's message was quite elaborate, at least in length is nothing more. He devoted 29 lines to the agricultural interest, an industry that is paramount (or should be) to all other interests in this country. He seemed to think that the refunding of a part of the government debt into two per cent 30 year bonds was a great improvement as to our government debt; this is to fasten and perpetuate the national banking institution, an institution that is robbing the people of this country out of millions of dollars annually, and the people are as silent about it as if it was a great blessing to them. He also recommends an increase in the regular army.

We thought the understanding was the Philippine war was to end soon as McKinley was elected but that was only talk. The President also seems very much elated over the success of the national banking system—a system more dangerous to this country than any other. In his message he says—mark his language: The beneficial effect of the financial act of 1900 (yes we know what that is) so far as it relates to the modification of the national banking act is already apparent. The provision for the corporation of nationl banks with a capitol of not less than $25,000 in places not exceeding 3000 inhabitants has resulted in the extension of banking facilities to many small communities hitherto unable to provide themselves with banking institutions under the national system. There were organized from the enactment of the law up to and including November, 30,369 national banks of which 266 were with capital less than $50,000 and 103 with capital of $50,000 more. Those who know nothing about the national banking system of this country, would advise them to spend a little time and money to look it up, and if they do I think they will get enlightened. It is not necessary that every little town should have a national bank, or any town for that matter. Let the government issue the currency and private banks could do the business. This national banking institution was fathered by the Republican party way back in the early sixties, and has drawn from the pockets of the poor people of this country millions of money that went into the coffers of the rich. Such an institution is a blight upon any nation.

We hear many say what good times we are having. What are you paying for sugar, tea, salt, lamp oil and all kinds of building material? That,s all right is it?

But as a man thinketh in his heart so is he.

When we get that subsidy bill (aid by the government to build a fleet of merchant ships) a navy that will girdle the earth, a standing army of 100,000 men or more along with the single gold standard, and an iron clad banking institution, we will have a system by the government that can draw usury from the poor of this country same as a leach can draw the blood from an infant child.

In the days of slavery they enacted laws that made it obligatory for you to protect the slave holder in his so called right to property human beings. Was it right? It is now becoming so with those who have acquired their millions. "Our fathers did eat manna in the wilderness and they are dead."

Lincoln says, four score and seven years ago our fathers brought forth upon this continent a nation conceived in liberty and dedicated to the proposition that all men are created equal. Do we still hold to this or have we degenerated? Our fathers enacted laws favorable to the poor and oppressed, and through and by the enactment of such laws we have grown to be a mighty and powerful nation. Our armies have bade defiance to the world but let us not be foolish and go into war when it is not necessary, which we have done. FARMER.

Farmers and town people as well are wishing for a few more inches of snow so as to make good sleighing. The storm of last Sunday did not bring quite enough for that purpose. The roads are in fine condition for a bedding, and with several inches more snow would be in the finest possible condition for hauling heavy loads and sleighing in general.

Although the resolution authorizing the retirement as a Captain in the navy of Representative Boutelle, of Me., who is now in a sanitarium suffering with an incurable brain trouble brought on everybody knows how, went through the House and Senate without objection and is now in the hands of Mr. McKinley, there are lots of Senators and Representatives who believe it to be a bad precedent for Congress to set, but who dislike to oppose it for fear that they would be charged with lack of feeling for a poor fellow, whose friends only asked that he be provided with a government salary for the rest of his life. If Congress should undertake to provide for all such the county would soon be bankrupt.

In last week's Journal H. A. Isakson, of Buffalo takes exception to the statement of political expenses, of John Nygren, because it stated that Mr. I. had received $10. for distributing cards. He says, "The truth is that John Nygren, by a check sent to to me, gave $10 to the Mission Church (not to me) which I handed over to the treasurer of the congregation." Mr. I. further says reports have been circulated that through the election this fall he received large sums of money, and promises to pay 10 cents for every 1 cent to any one that can honestly say or prove that he received money for electioneering. Reports have for years been circulated that ministers were paid for electioneering services. Now is a good time to settle it, and it ought to be settled.

The Irl R. Hicks 1901 Almanac

Whatever may be said of the scientific causes upon which the Rev Irl R Hicks bases his yearly forecasts of strom and weather, it is a remarkable fact that specific warnings of every great storm, flood, cold wave and drouth, have been plainly printed in his famous Almanac for many years The latest startling proof of this fact was the destruction of Galveston, Texas, on the very day named by Prof Hicks in his 1900 Almanac, as one of disaster by storm along the gulf coasts. The 1901 Almanac, by far the finest, most complete and beautiful yet published, is now ready. This remarkable book of near two hundred pages, splendidly illustrated with charts and half-ton engravings, goes as a premium to every subscriber who pays one dollar a year for Hicks' journal, WORD AND WORKS. The Almanac alone is sent prepaid for only 25c
